AMERICAN NOTES.

A SAD occurrence has just come to light—the onsecrating of a Buddhist temple in New York City. This temple, which makes no preensions as an edifice, is located on Nassautreet. It is concealed from the curiosity and ccess of the "profane," by a shop, or office in ront, through which the initiated must pass to nter the sacred shrine. This is said to be duly quipped with an idol, with rare mystic paintngs, and with a sacred oracular crystal. The valls of the temple are enriched with twentyive memorial shields, each bearing some egend in Sanscrit, these being donated by the wenty-five Theosophical Societies of the United States. It is no Chinese joss house, but a high-toned sacred resort, where the cultured in occult religion meet at stated times each month for worship, meditation, and training "in the mysteries."

And this in an age of Christian missions! in a land of Christian Government! in a city of Christian energy! Alas! we seem to receive it as only another wonder, and offer no protest.

. . . . .

While the fight is going on in Boston over Swinton's History, which was suppressed by the priests from the public schools, because it told too truthfully the story of indulgences which Friar Tetzel sold for the benefit of the great Church of St. Peter at Rome, Father O'Conner, the ex-priest and able editor of The Converted Catholic, is casting in an antidote, through the effectual Gospel work which he is doing among inquiring Romanists in New York, Philadelphia, and other large cities. More Roman Catholics (and some of them cultured priests) than Protestants have an idea of are consulting this estimable and devout ex-priest for guidance out of the meshes of Rome, and instruction into the truth of Divine forgiveness, through Jesus Christ alone. As the fruit of his modest, personal ministry in the past five years, eight hundred Catholics have been brought to the saving acceptance of Jesus Christ.

. . . . .

Another hopeful work is that among the seed of Abraham. The Hebrew Christian Mission of Rev. Jacob Freshman, in New York, has, like Joseph's fruitful bough, "run over the wall," and quite recently took root in Philadelphia. It was a touching sight, a few days since, when in a medical mission room in that city thirty-three Israelites gathered around a table covered with Hebrew, German, and English Bibles, to learn what Moses and the prophets had written concerning their Messiah; and how all was fulfilled in that Jesus now preached unto them. American Gentile Christians are learning that the great lever in their hand to move the heart of the most disbelieving Jew is to show them the glorious unfulfilled prophecies of Scripture concerning their own nation. This once grasped, faith in Him, who is the "Desire of Nations," follows speedily.

. . . . .

One of the latest surprises in non-evangelical circles has been the confessions of the noted Fox sisters—the modern revivers of ancient spiritualism—to fraud and hypocrisy, throughout their public career. Their showing has been such a bad one personally as to provoke unpitying disgust. They sowed thistle-down. The harvest is beyond their control: no confession at this late day can undo the mischief wrought, or liberate the souls bound in chain of hell through their lying wonders.

The McAll Mission of France has many warm sympathisers in America. On November 8, the American McAll Association held a formal opening of their new Bureau in Philadelphia; it was an occasion of rare interest. The deep sympathy which American Christians feel in the evangelisation of France was indicated by the presence of such men of high evangelical standing as Bishop Nicholson, the Rev. Dr. McVicker, Bishop Whittaker, Dr. Arthur T. Pierson, Dr. George Dance Boardman (Adoniram Judson's step-son), and the Rev. Dr. L. T. Chamberlain, to whose first thought, afterwards developed by the late lamented Miss Beach, the McAll Auxiliaries of America owe their parentage. Of these branch missions there are now sixty in America. This work is exclusively a woman's work, the whole official staff, with a single exception, being ladies.

. . . .

Some genuine alarm is being felt over the revelation that the Roman Catholic Church is getting an undue proportion of public money from the Indian Bureau at Washington for the ostensible support of Indian children, but in reality for the purpose of making Roman Catholics. Reliable figures show that they get vastly more than one-half the public money appropriated for Indian schools, though they do not comprise one-ninth of the population. Last year Government paid for the education of Indian youths the sum of 318,147 dollars 25 cents; of this only 141,555 dollars 20 cents went to the non-Catholic schools. The large proportion, 176,691 dollars 15 cents was, manipulated by the Catholics, and for what purpose the unchanged spirit of the Romish Church too plainly indicates. As this is contrary to our form of Government, American people have a right to call a halt, and stop their money from being devoted to sectarian uses.

We chronicle a remarkable testimony to the inexhaustible depth of Scripture truth. Recently, in an address at West Virginia, the devout and revered president of Crozer Theological Seminary, Rev. Dr. H. G. Weston, said: "For fifty years I have read through the New Testament every month, yet I never go to a meeting and hear a man read a chapter without feeling that I have learned something new from hearing that chapter read."

. . . .

Police records show that thousands of immigrant girls are annually led astray from the original worthy purposes for which they came to this country, For their protection, and also to take under training and supervision American girls designed for domestic service, is the worthy object of the "Sunshine Mission," now being projected in New York city. The organisers will form a joint stock company, and after being chartered and duly incorporated, will start with a capital of 50,000 dollars, divided into 50,000 shares. Two buildings are to be erected, one in New York and the other probably in Philadelphia. It is proposed to make the Homes of the Mission self-supporting.

The event of events to an American citizen, Presidential election, has come and passed. Apart from all political preferences, one acknowledgment is on every honest lip, "A genuine Christian man has been elected." His own party looks most confidently for him to pursue a vigorous and wholesome policy. The Church of God in the United States rejoices in knowing that our chief magistrate elect is a man of prayer, whose firm trust in God has throughout the past of his career been as distinguishing a feature as his wise statesmanship.

RAILWAY WORK IN AMERICA.—Our recent visitor, Mr. Herbert Fairfax, of Sydney, writes to us from Denver, Colo., on his way back to Australia. Referring to a statement in a recent report in our columns that "spiritual effort is not characterised by anything like vigour" in work among railway-men, he says:—"Having passed through some of the head centres of railway work in this country, permit me to say that the statement is hardly correct. I have found that true, earnest, Christian work is carried on amongst railway-men by Bible-class study, prayer-meetings, and individual dealing to lead men to Christ. I believe it can be shown that many have become faithful disciples of the great Master."

LIVERPOOL SHELTERING HOMES.

Dear Sir,—The work at this Home is fully set going for the winter. We have already a pretty large-sized family of boys and girls rescued from terrible want and misery. The poor relations who called to see them said they did not know their own children again, so wonderfully were they transformed in the short time of kindly handling.

I have in my mind yet the despairing look and cry of one deserted young mother, her lot made ten thousand times more bitter by seeing her helpless children pining for want of food and warmth. She had pawned her jacket for a bit of bread to soak for the baby dying in her tired, weary arms. She was wet with the drenching rain-storms, and completely worn out in tramping the streets seeking something to do. A neighbour's damp cellar was all she had to creep into these awful stormy nights. It is a wonder that reason holds its sway under such terrible misery.

A little fellow came in to-night, who has been deserted both by father and mother. He has been for three years seeking them on the streets of five big cities. When asked how he would behave if taken into a good home, he remained quiet for a moment; then, with a sob, he burst into tears, and said, "I never had a good home, but I think you'll find me a good boy, if you'll try me." These children have had no loving hand to care for them, and with every form of evil around their young feet, how can they but grow up evil? Yet we find them most amenable to kindly training and gentle treatment.

Our widows' sewing class of 300 has resumed for the winter its happy afternoons; the slice of meat and the warm tea is a great boon to them. I do not suppose one of them possesses a blanket, though they are old and rheumatic, and live in poor cellars, sadly in need of warmth.

We sorely need help for the children. The bright gleam of constant sunshine in this work among widows and orphans is the stream of letters coming weekly across the sea from the happy ones we have succeeded in placing into more comfortable surroundings. These letters tell us how grateful they are for being got into such good homes, and cheer us in our own work of rescue, training, and emigration. We need help for the general work this winter, and also the means to complete the new premises. Our Hon. Treasurer is Mr. R. F. Lang, 4, Chapel-street, Liverpool. Louisa Birt.

GOVERNESSES.—Miss C. F. Ryffel, Bienvenue, 3, Colville Houses, Talbot-road, London, W., directress of Home for Foreign Governesses, writes:—"Kindly let your readers know that we are ready to receive applications from families for foreign governesses for the holidays."

SHAFTESBURY HOUSE, MARGATE.—This seaside Home of the Young Men's Christian Association continues not only to serve a very useful purpose but to command wide-spread appreciation. This is made abundantly clear by the sixth annual report, which states that during the past twelve months no fewer than 942 visitors stayed in the Home. The Bible-readings and Gospel-meetings have been well sustained, and many among the visitors have done good outdoor and other evangelistic work during their stay.

WOMAN'S MISSION TO WOMEN.—The work of this agency in various parts of London is at once difficult and encouraging. Since the perpetration of the recent horrors in the East-end, additional efforts have been made to induce outcast women to leave their sad course and evil surroundings. The success has been very marked, and many who were previously inaccessible to the entreaties of the missionaries are now ready to listen to their loving appeals. It is most desirable to extend the work, as the mission houses are full nearly every night. Steps are also being taken to provide temporary shelter; but the want of funds greatly cripples the Committee. The secretary is Mr. A. J. S. Maddison, 32, Charing-cross, S.W.

ORPHAN HOMES OF SCOTLAND.

The annual meeting of friends and subscribers to these Orphan Homes was held last week in the Christian Institute, Glasgow. A band of children from the Bridge of Weir Homes sang with fine effect a number of airs and hymns. Sir William Collins presided, and a well-filled platform of ministerial brethren and local gentlemen supported him.

The Chairman said the past year had been to Mr. Quarrier one of considerable trial; but, although his faith had been tested, he had, as in the past, received the support required. The fact that during the past year he had received more money both for maintenance and for buildings was a great testimony to the value in which Mr. Quarrier's services are held by friends scattered all over the country. It was not astonishing that his demands were increasing, for Mr. Quarrier had seen year after year the need of the enlargement of the work in which he was engaged. The people of Scotland had entire confidence in the way in which he had managed the noble enterprise. The sum required for the maintenance of the Homes is something like £30 per day. Since the commencement of the Mission, Mr. Quarrier has sent about 3000 children to Canada. It is satisfactory to know that 95 per cent. of these have turned out well.

Dr. Marshall Lang spoke of Mr. Quarrier's work as an important contribution towards the solution of the social problems which are exercising the intellect, the heart, and the conscience of our time. It is taking hold of our colleges. A professor of Divinity told him the other day that there were 40,000 one-roomed tenements in the city of Glasgow, and waxed indignant at the landlords of such tenements, wishing they could be summarily dealt with. If we could strike at the root of the evil—viz., the public-house and its baneful influences, we would go far to remedy this overcrowding. Dr. Lang declared this work to be remarkably wise, and admirably administered. He had been round a great bit of the world, and he had seen nothing so fair and nothing so admirable as that children's town at the Bridge of Weir.

Mr. Alex. Allan said he had been struck in reading the report with the fact that contributions came, not only from all parts of Scotland and England, but from various parts of the world. This shows the widespread interest felt in Mr. Quarrier's Homes. As to the social problem alluded to by Dr. Lang, he believed that if the working classes would give up the use of strong drink and cease smoking tobacco, there would soon be no demand for one-roomed houses.

Mr. Quarrier then gave some particulars with regard to the past year's work. The money received from all sources was £18,965 19s. 5d., the second largest sum contributed in one year during seventeen years. It had come in pounds, shillings, and pence, and had arrived just when it was really needed. In the same time 390 children were admitted, and these, with the 622 with which they began the year, made up a total of 1012 who had passed through the Homes in the twelve months. In addition a night's shelter had been given to 1088, who had not even one-roomed houses to live in, but were houseless. Then, to a certain extent the School Board had been assisted by the Mission, for hundreds of children whom no School Board officer could touch, and whom no power on earth could keep in order had been reached by this agency, and by God's blessing set in better paths. During the twenty-four years in which he had been engaged in rescue work he had been asking the magistrates to control the children on the streets, but up to the present time nothing had been done in that direction. In the course of those years thousands of poor children had passed into reformatories, and become criminals. He laid the blame of these children becoming criminals at the door of the magistrates. Every week he saw boys and girls passing into the criminal ranks who could be saved from that fate if these rulers would act. So far as the Homes were concerned, they had been the means of saving to the ratepayers certainly not less than £200,000. Surely, therefore, he had some right to be heard as to the best method of saving street children. Fifteen hundred of them were now on the streets selling newspapers, matches, singing, and begging, and from these largely sprang the criminal class. The citizens should bestir themselves, and teach the men whom they send to the bench that they had a duty towards the poor children. Until something is done to remedy this dreadful evil, by the supervision of the streets, all the efforts of the industrial schools, all the efforts of the Orphan Homes, all the efforts of the training ship Cumberland, all the efforts of Sabbath-school teachers and of others, will be much hampered and interfered with. The surplus of £40,000 from the Glasgow Exhibition, it seemed, was to be spent on an art union. As to the orphan and the fatherless, there was never so much as a whisper about them. He wondered if these men had any heart in them, that they could give all that money to the wealthy and not remember the poor, one of the first doctrines of our common Christianity. The best thing they could do would be to build almshouses with that money. Glasgow required such houses for its houseless ones, for its poor widows; yes, for its decent widows, with probably six mouths to fill and rent to pay on 6s. a week. By far the greater part of those he helped were from Glasgow, and he did not think that the city had yet risen to her responsibility in this matter. Twelve cottages are still required, an Invalid Home for boys, and additional accommodation for laundry work. These, Mr. Quarrier felt sure, would all come, for He who hath helped will help, and would yet do exceeding abundantly above all that we can ask or think.

Mr. CHAS. INGLIS at QUEEN'S PARK.

A most blessed work has been witnessed in the mission just brought to a close in the Queen's-park Hall, Harrow-road. Mr. Chas. Inglis has been preaching nightly to the crowds who thronged the building to hear the message of peace from his lips, and the power of God has been wonderfully displayed. The touching scenes in the after-meetings will not be easily forgotten. Stout-hearted men, who have had their consciences ploughed up, have sobbed like children, as they thought of the past, and have been led to the inquiry-room, to be pointed to the Lord Jesus. Numbers of backsliders (some of whom have been wandering for years from the Father's house) have realised what it is to be forgiven and restored to communion. Many a mother has had the desire of her heart granted, in seeing her children brought to Jesus, and wives, who remained at home to pray for their husbands, have had the joy of seeing them return confessing Christ.

The afternoon meetings, for women only, addressed by various ladies, have been much blessed. God's own people have been greatly blessed. Some who had never been workers before, have been directing the anxious to the Saviour. It has been a great joy to see Christians of all denominations working so unitedly, to extend the Redeemer's kingdom.

EXHIBITION HOUSE.—The Home at 58, Eardley-crescent, South Kensington, for young women employed in the Exhibitions, has proved a great blessing during the past six months. Miss C. M. Gough, of the Restaurant Branch, 14, John-street, Bedford-row, writes that it is very desirable that the Home should be opened again for the winter exhibition at Olympia. Already promises have been received of over half the sum required (£90) to start the Home afresh, free of debt, on Dec. 1. On Dec. 17, a four-days' sale of work will be opened, for the benefit of the Restaurant Branch in John-street.

VILLAGE MISSION WORK.

Mr. W. Catlin thus writes:—I have recently been on a visit to a village pastor and evangelist in Herts, and feel constrained to put on record what I have seen and heard. Some eight or nine years back Mr. G. D. Shipley was invited for a fortnight's mission to Breachwood, situated midway between Luton and Hitchin, the scene of John Bunyan's labours (in this Breachwood Chapel may still be seen the old pulpit in which he preached), this and other places of worship came into existence through the itinerant labours of the Bedfordshire tinker.

The success attending Mr. Shipley's special services led to their nightly continuance for more than two months, and finally to his being asked to take the oversight of the church; the building holds about 400, and has been the scene of a blessed work of God; the district is but thinly peopled, but 150 have been baptized and received into fellowship. It has a Sunday-school of nearly 200 children and young people, a congregation such as is not often to be found in a village; a men's Bible-class has been conducted for years by a good brother in the church, and a women's Bible-class generally led by Mr. Shipley himself, and consisting of about sixty names. This good work got noised abroad, and a cry arose from other dark spots, "Come over and help us," and Mr. Shipley "armed his trained servants born in his own house" (church), and actually undertook not only the supplies but the travelling and other expense.

Breachwood is but a sample of many other places. Dilapidated chapels have been renovated, and not less than twenty well nigh deserted places have been benefited by special missions. They are now in a prosperous condition, several having settled pastors, and over others he still exercises a constant supervision. God only knows what hardships these village missionaries have to endure, to drive day after day through drenching rain, horse, harness, and man soaked and soddened; in the winter through blinding sleet, and on the high hills snow drifts so deep as to be impassable without the use of shovel to cut a way through, and often at the end of a long day's ride but humble accommodation and frugal fare. Twice within a short period this year my friend was pitched out of his trap headlong and stunned, owing to the bad and slippery state of the roads; but these Apostolic labourers account these things no hardship, and think themselves well rewarded by the warm welcome from their humble friends, and the good everywhere so manifestly seen.

The only trial they are conscious of is limited means, and their inability to do what is so much needed; demands are made on the Mission purse continually, and poor brethren who need help abound in villages as well as towns. With the exception of a little help received from a few friends, this work has been done for many years by Mr. Shipley himself; he gives his time, money, talents, horses, and all the means at his command to this his chosen work.

Last week he drove me forty-five miles in two days, over high roads, by-roads, ploughed fields, and through broad streams; and I would here say that any friend wishing for a few days' relaxation from business could not do better than write to Mr. Shipley, and arrange to accompany him on one of his missionary journeys. The Bible in these villages seemed to bring down the people like a scythe in a harvest field, so unlike anything I have seen in London.

Oh that the Lord would give our helpers in the Cow Cross Mission a little change to such work in a quiet, healthy village (not far from London). Mr. Shipley would be glad for me to look after his work in this district, as he is anxious to go and open up other spheres.

EVANGELICAL PREACHING.

The Conference on Evangelical Preaching, held last week in the City Temple, proved profitable to a large number of Christian workers. The speakers, as well as the audience, included Christians of the various evangelical denominations, and many important suggestions were made by well-known men. Rev. Dr. Reynolds, in his paper on Tuesday, which was referred to last week, dealt with the rivalry and opposition which evangelical religion has had to encounter throughout its history, and emphasised the fact that evangelical religion takes its stand on salvation by faith rather than on legal or sacramental principles. To urge, to persuade, to induce men to believe and obey the Gospel, seemed to him to be the key of the whole position, and to bring with it the service, the sacrifice, the philanthropy, the humility, the worship, the song, the obedience, the true humanity, the Christ-likeness of the family of God.

Rev. Dr. Stoughton read a paper on what evangelical preaching has done in Great Britain. After many forcible historical allusions, he said: I am sorry, indeed, to learn that there are departures from beliefs which appear to me exceedingly precious; and that there is a lessening hold on Divine Scripture as the supreme law of Christian thought and faith. But whatever shadows may overcross the prospects of our immediate future, I see glorious sunshine lighting up the fields beyond.

"What evangelical preaching, including doctrine, spirit, purpose, has done in heathen countries," was the subject of a paper by Rev. E. E. Jenkins, who reviewed the mission field and its victories. Rev. Dr. Macfarlane, of New Guinea, followed with a spirited address on the power of simple, earnest, prayerful, practical, positive evangelical preaching in the South Seas. He declared emphatically that this preaching never fails, and in terms of great joy he testified of marvellous things which he himself had seen.

On Tuesday evening a very powerful discourse was delivered by Dr. Fairbairn, on "Christ as the Revealer of God the Father."

Opening the Conference on the second day, Rev. Dr. Green delivered a thoughtful address. He urged more thorough study of the Bible, and maintained that the supreme power and highest glory of evangelical preaching is that it is a witnessing for Christ. Rev. Dr. Clifford dealt with "Mistakes regarding Evangelical Preaching." After some searching definitions and arguments, he maintained that evangelical preaching is essentially a ministry to the conscience.

Rev. Dr. Parker spoke on the evangelical spirit. Preaching to broken hearts will never be "behind the times," and the Cross will, as it has done, overcome all darkness, ignorance, superstition, and sinfulness.

Rev. Dr. Monro Gibson, in a paper on "Evangelical Doctrine in relation to its purpose," held that the moral purpose of the Bible is first. The salvation is primarily a salvation from sin, and the life is primarily a life of obedience and trust. But the moral purpose does not mark the limit; for the salvation, though primarily from sin, includes deliverance from all that is evil; and the life which is offered, though primarily a life of obedience and trust, is without limitation. Professor Davison followed with a paper on "The Breadth and Comprehensiveness of Evanglical Preaching."

In the evening Mr. Percy W. Bunting presided over a public meeting, and delivered a brief address. If the sermons were filled with the grace and truth and spirit of Christ, hearers would be filled with the same. Rev. J. Guinness Rogers spoke a word for a many-sided Gospel for all men and conditions. Some deprecate interference in politics. If, however, politics are steeped in the mire of corruption, and intrigue, and self-seeking, and ambition, it is the Christian's business to let it be seen that there is a nobler side to them, that it is possible to make the lives of men happier in a better way.

Rev. R. F. Horton delivered a telling address on the relation of working men to evangelical preaching. Much preaching lacks intellectual transparency, and this is a reason why intelligent artisans will not attend places of worship. If, said Mr. Horton, I were a listener, as I have been, of course, very often, I would never go and listen to any man who did not seem to me to be preaching what he realised at every step; what he felt, not only as the thing he had learnt as a dogma, but as a thing which had become an experience to him, and was all the outcome of his own spiritual growth. Exclusiveness and pride on the part of many who go to church and chapel, likewise repel thoughtful working men. In conclusion, Mr. Horton urged the preaching of Christ as the Way, the Truth, and the Life, in all the full force and meaning of those words.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes followed, maintaining that Christ must be personally known before He can be effectively preached. A living and not a dead Christ must be proclaimed, not only to the poor but to the heathen aristocracy. Speaking of the needs of the upper classes, Mr. Hughes said: "We cannot walk into the drawing-rooms of Belgravia in the way in which we do into the cottages of the poor, and I do think that some of the most titled and most privileged people in this country deserve our highest sympathy. A great many journalists, and members of Parliament, and all sorts of persons there know nothing at all about Christianity, have never believed a creed, never read the Bible, and never said prayers. People of this kind have come to hear me, and have afterwards confessed to me that they have never prayed since they were born, that they have never read a single chapter in the Bible, and some of these are persons whose names you would know if I were to mention them." Christ must, the speaker said in conclusion, be preached as the Giver of a new life, bringing about a revolution in the very being of those who are created anew in Him.

The Conference closed with a public meeting, presided over by Dr. Parker, at Westbourne Park Chapel. The speeches throughout were weighty and marked by careful preparation. Our endeavour in this summary has been to give some of the more profitable remarks. Those who wish to possess a complete report will find it in an Extra Number of The Christian World Pulpit—a most extraordinary pennyworth.

CARDIFF STRANGERS' REST.—The sixth annual report records a number of incidents of the work. During the year 532 pledges were taken in the Rest, and 458 bags of reading matter given to seamen. The attendance at the English meetings was 26,320, and at Scandinavian meetings 5800. Miss Tilly is the hon. superintendent of the Rest, which is situate at 180, Bute-road, Cardiff.

A DISCHARGED PRISONERS' AID SOCIETY has been formed at Inverness for the northern counties of Scotland. The object of the Society will be to aid prisoners on their discharge from prison to become useful members of society by such means as procuring lodgings, furnishing temporary maintenance in case of need to individuals seeking employment, assisting in obtaining work, in returning them to their homes, or by emigration, and subsequently exercising a friendly supervision over them.

ITALY.—The November issue of A Voice from Italy contains many very cheering notices of earnest evangelical effort. In view of the approaching bicentenary of "the glorious return," several churches, colleges, and other buildings are projected in memory of long-to-be-forgotten sufferings and victories. The reports from various centres tell of a large amount of work, resulting in more fruit than meets the eye of the casual observer. The secretary of the Waldensian Church Missions in Italy is Major M. Frobisher, 118, Pall-mall, London, S.W.

WAKEFIELD CONFERENCE.

The second annual Conference, recently held here, was numerously attended, and the three days spent in exhortation and prayer will not soon be forgotten. The brethren who took part in the Conference were Revs. Dr. S. C. Morgan, Colin Campbell, John Luce, Grattan Guinness, John Sloan, Messrs. Wm. R. Lane, Frederick Sessions, Seton Churchill, Spencer Walton, Reginald Radcliffe, John M. McAuliffe, &c. Mrs. Menzies spoke on behalf of the Y.W.C.A. and women's work.

The subject of Conference was "The Grace of God." The first day was devoted to the consideration of its saving and sanctifying power; the second to its bearing upon the Christian's service in the world, and the hope of the Church the Coming of the Lord; the third, to the aspects of grace in the duty of the Church in the evangelisation of the world and the claims of the heathen.

On the last day addresses were given on South Africa by Mr. W. Spencer Walton, upon zenana work by Major Seton Churchill, upon women's work by Mrs. Menzies, and upon China and its needs by Rev. J. Baller and Rev. E. Williams, late of Leeds.

The afternoons were taken up by accounts of work—seaside work, by Mr. Alfred Haley; wayside work, by John McAuliffe; street preaching, by Mr. W. R. Lane; the Congo, by Rev. H. Grattan Guinness; South Africa, Mr. Spencer Walton; China, Rev. J. Baller; India, Major Seton Churchill; and women's work, by Mrs. Menzies. Gospel meetings were held in workhouses, mills, and other places by the Conference speakers.

Following up the Conference, a large children's gathering was held on Saturday, addressed by Messrs. Ridley, Lane, and Haley. In the evening Mr. W. R. Lane spoke to Christian workers on our Lord's Second Coming. Great interest was manifested. Sunday was a day of great blessing. Mr. Lane conducted three meetings, and the power of the Lord was present in the conviction and conversion of not a few.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS.—Professor G. Lyon Turner, late of Lancashire Independent College, to Highbury Villa, Mount Pleasant, Hastings, until beginning of May, 1889.

ENGLISH DEACONESS IN JERUSALEM.—On Friday, November 9, the Deaconess House was opened and dedicated to God in prayer. Rev. J. Zeller, of the C.M.S. in Jerusalem, presided, and other Christian friends were present. The sisters are asked to instruct the children of missionaries, and teachers and others of the better classes, the need of such tuition having been long felt in Jerusalem. The house is large and spacious, and so they propose to do this. Many of the daughters of Protestants are sent to the convent to be taught by nuns for want of such a school as the Deaconess House will now afford. The nursing sisters hope to go to Jerusalem in January. All information about the Deaconess House in Jerusalem may be had from Miss M. A. Lloyd, 143, Clapham-road, S.W.

EGYPT AND THE HOLY LAND.—On Wednesday and Thursday evenings, last week, two very interesting and instructive lectures were given in the Shaftesbury Hall, Bournemouth, by Mr. G. H. Lord, in connection with the Y.M.C.A. The lectures were illustrated with photographs and paintings of scenery, and by a number of friends in Eastern costume. Captain Dawson presided on the first evening, and the lecture was descriptive of a trip to Cairo, the Pyramids, the Nile, and from Joppa to the walls of Jerusalem. On Thursday evening the subject of the lecture was a tour in the Holy Land, with a vivid description of the customs and every-day life of the inhabitants of Jerusalem. Mr. Lord explained that the object of his lectures was to enable inhabitants of the West to read the Scriptures through Eastern eyes, by which alone they could be properly understood. The Shaftesbury Hall was crowded on both occasions, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Lord for his lectures.

The White Cross Movement.

Dear Sir,—The White Cross Movement has now spread all over the world, even to distant Japan. Upwards of a million of the White Cross papers have been circulated. They have been introduced into many of our large public schools. One of the most experienced house school matrons states that nothing in her experience had done so much good among the boys. The papers are read and re-read with the greatest avidity. Above all, many parents have been helped in fulfilling their function of moral teachers of their own boys, the neglect of which lies at the root of the whole evil. Many a parent finds no difficulty in giving a paper such as "Purity the Guard of Manhood," or "My Little Sister," to their boys, and so opening the door for that perfect confidence between parent and son that is a boy's best safeguard. The fact that men are banding themselves together under the banner of the White Cross to reverence womanhood, to protect young girls from all wrong, to maintain the equal standard of the moral law, and themselves to wear "the white flower of a blameless life," is surely one to fire the imagination of a boy, and go far to supply an ideal of purity in his mind which will make it something to be aimed at as manly, as much as courage and honour.

This vital movement needs to be placed on a sounder financial basis. Its working expenses will always be comparatively small. An active secretary is all that is needed to start branches, and to enrol the members who send in their names from all parts of the kingdom, to conduct an enormous correspondence, to distribute literature, to organise speakers, and to bring personal influence to bear on the extreme reluctance manifested by both clergy and lay workers to grapple with a difficult and painful subject. This is already secured in the person of Rev. G. S. S. Vidal, one of the best speakers of the Oxford Union, and whose headquarters are at that University, where he can gather round him a band of voluntary helpers. These working expenses can be met by an income of from £500 to £600 a year. The Bishop of Durham is raising a fund which will bring in this amount, and £2500 has been promised in legacies.

My personal connection with the movement has ceased owing to my having entirely broken down under the terrible strain of ten years of the saddest and most difficult work that can be found. But it would be an unspeakable comfort and cheer to me if, in my long, unoccupied, and too often painstricken days, I could still give some help to the movement for which I have laid down all that makes life precious. There are mothers and fathers, I feel sure, who have been helped in guarding their own boys, who would gladly give a thank-offering for them; there are men who would willingly show some mark of sympathy to one who has laid down health and strength in fighting the battle of her own womanhood. There are thoughtful minds who know that the greatness of England rests upon the pure manhood of her sons, and on the arrestment of disintegrating forces of impurity, which are silently at work below the surface, and who would gladly help the movement.

The treasurer is Lord Kinnaird, 1, Pall Mall East, London; and the secretary, Rev. G. S. S. Vidal, Museum Close, Oxford.

Very faithfully yours, Ellice Hopkins.
Percy House, Brighton.

Rev. G. S. S. Vidal, Museum Close, Oxford, also writes to say that a great extension of the work of the Society is proposed, by means of special committees in all large towns. He appeals for volunteers, who will undertake to distribute papers to their Bible-classes, and Christian Associations of all kinds.

A HEROIC TEACHER.

A letter recently received from Miss Annie Sanderson, one of the teachers in the girls' school in connection with the China Inland Mission at Chefoo, contains the following particulars relative to the death of Mr. Herbert L. Norris, the headmaster of the boys' school at Chefoo, already referred to:—

"Help, in the way of additional teachers, for the boys' school here has not yet arrived; and the events of the past week render the need now more than doubly urgent, as Mr. Norris has gone in to 'see the King in his beauty.'...His life, and to crown that his death, were a literal laying down his life for those whom he loved. He was terribly overworked, though that was not the cause of his death, and his great trouble was that he could not give the elder boys in the school the attention he felt they needed. But with so many boys (forty), and only two masters, who had not only to teach, but to constantly supervise out of school, he felt it impossible. Besides that, his position as principal involved a good deal of correspondence, &c.

"A week after his return from a brief holiday in Japan he was bitten, in the schoolroom, by a dog which had attempted to attack some of the boys, but he placed himself before it. He stayed to kill the dog before going up to the doctor. That kept him about twenty minutes, and, of course, the poison had circulated. The bite was cauterised and nothing more heard of it. On Sunday week he was at church with the boys, looking particularly bright and well. On Monday he laid up with what he thought a cold; on Tuesday became delirious and acted rather strangely. The doctor had him brought to his house, and treated him so skilfully and mercifully (keeping him under the influence of chloral and opium) that the very painful symptoms of hydrophobia were not allowed to develop. On Thursday morning he entered into rest. He had no idea he was going, so it was just falling asleep and waking with Christ. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon, both schools following. Mr. Norris was shortly expecting out the young lady to whom for some time he had been engaged to be married. He leaves also a mother and sister."

ROME.—Mrs. Dawes, formerly of Pozzuoli, Naples, has opened a hotel at Rome, at 57, Via Sistina. Mrs. Dawes's hotel at Pozzuoli was for many years a pleasant staying-place for English travellers, as well as a centre of Christian effort.

REV. PEACHY T. WILSON, M.D., of the American Methodist Episcopal Mission, Budaun, N.W.P., India, writes on October 30:—We have baptized during 1888 some 240 persons—five of these from Islam, most of the others from low caste Hindus.

UNOCCUPIED FIELDS.—There is not a single Bible missionary in Beloochistan, Afghanistan, and the French possessions in Anam and Tonquin, nor in Siberia or any of the adjoining countries under Russian rule. Church of Christ, wake up!—Bombay Guardian.

WORK IN ROME. — Bishop Cheetham (ex-Bishop of Sierra Leone) has taken the chaplaincy of Trinity Church, Rome, for this season. He is a decided evangelical, and his preaching not only brings out strongly Gospel truth, but has a spirituality in it. Meetings in connection with the Y.W.C.A. are held monthly by the secretaries, Mrs. Young and Miss Simpson. Any members of the Y.W.C.A. coming to Rome will be welcomed, if they call on Miss Simpson, 3, Piazza di Spagna.

FOREIGN EVANGELISATION SOCIETY.—The fifteenth annual report of this Society contains notices of mission work in several countries towards which the Society makes grants. The door is wide open, but the fewness of the labourers is deeply deplored. It is gratifying to read of Catholics being converted, not only to Protestantism, but to Christ, and also to know that an impression is being made upon the irreligious classes in some parts of the Continent. Rev. Horace Noel, Woking, Surrey, is the hon. sec. of the Society.

Feathers for Arrows.

SUNDAY RELIGION.

Many a man sits in his pew on Sunday night and sings "Rock of Ages," and rolls up his eyes very piously, who, on coming out at the close of the service, shuts the pew door, and says, "Good-bye, Religion, I will be back next Sunday!" A religion that does not work all the week as well as on Sunday is no religion at all.—Dr. Talmage.

THE MUSIC OF HEAVEN.

Gottschalk, on a visit to Spain, learned of a poor dying girl who asked but one privilege before she breathed her last—"to hear him make his piano talk." His generous nature responded; and he had his favourite instrument carried to her apartment, and there for hours soothed her sufferings by his master melodies and harmonies. So deep was her enjoyment that while he was playing plaintively she quietly passed away. What might not we accomplish if we had such a passion for souls as would lead us to bear to the huts of the poor and the bedsides of the dying, without money or price, that blessed Gospel which is vocal with the music of heaven!—Dr. A. T. Pierson.

A TRAGEDY IN FIVE ACTS.

Act I. Young man starting from home. Parents and sisters weeping to have him go. Waggon passing over the hills. Farewell kiss thrown back. Ring the bell, and let the curtain drop.

Act II. Marriage altar. Bright lights. Full organ played. White veil trailing through the aisle. Prayer and congratulation, and exclamations of "How well she looks!" Ring the bell, and let the curtain drop.

Act III. Midnight. Woman waiting for staggering steps. Old garments stuck into the broken window-pane. Many marks of hardship on the face. Biting of the nails of bloodless fingers. Neglect, cruelty, disgrace. Ring the bell, and let the curtain drop.

Act IV. Three graves in a very dark place. Grave of child who died from lack of medicine. Grave of wife who died of a broken heart. Grave of husband and father who died of dissipation. Plenty of weeds, but no flowers. O what a blasted heath with three graves! Ring the bell, and let the curtain drop.

Act V. A destroyed soul's eternity. No light; no music; no hope! Despair coiling around the heart with unutterable anguish. Blackness of darkness for ever!—Dr. Talmage.

OBITUARY.

DR. SUMMERS, MISSIONARY TO AFRICA.

We learn with the deepest regret that Dr. W. R. Summers has died at his post in Central Africa. When first reported, the fact was doubted, but now it seems to be beyond question. This earnest worker has finished his course while endeavouring to spread the light in the Dark Continent. We are in possession of two letters written by Dr. Summers in March last; we hope next week to publish some extracts from them.

DUCHESS OF SUTHERLAND.

We regret to record the death of this lady on Sunday evening last, after a brief illness. It may be remembered that she was a not infrequent attender at the meetings held by Messrs. Moody and Sankey in the Haymarket Opera House; on one occasion she was accompanied by the Princess of Wales. The Times, in an obituary notice of the Duchess, says:—"She was formerly a prominent figure in society; but during recent years she has not been much seen in London, but has spent considerable time at Torquay, where she had a villa. Stafford-house has frequently, under her influence, been the scene of meetings and concerts and other entertainments for charitable objects."

SOUTH AFRICA. — Mrs. Samuel Aitchison, writing from Ikwezi-Lamaci, Alfred county, Natal, reports a journey made this summer to Maritzburg, to attend a Missionary Conference with her husband. On the cross-country "treke," much that was encouraging was seen, as well as much that called for more Christian teachers among the natives. The Conference was a season of great profit to many workers who throughout the year are living far apart, in scenes of great spiritual destitution.

For the Young.

AMONG THE FRENCH MOUNTAINS.

My Dear Young Friends,—I have long intended writing to you to tell you something about Volrent, a mountain village where we have been this autumn. Before telling you about it, and some of its inhabitants, I will tell you how we came to find it out. Some years ago I wrote something in The Christian about Ancelon, and the pastor who works there in a village to which no wheel vehicle has ever mounted; where there are no shops; and where the ravines which surround it are of an extraordinary depth. I am sorry to tell you that Pastor M. has been ill all summer. The deep snows and keen winds, in his long walks to his distant annexes, have at length exhausted his strength, and he has been obliged to descend into the plain, and rest in his old homestead by the Rubrion.

What about his people? you will ask. God has provided for them. He has not left Himself without witnesses. I think I wrote last summer how, in a very wonderful way, God had converted one of the peasants of the village. When the pastor had his last service before leaving for his summer's rest, he was hardly able to speak, but one of the Christians of the village spoke, and then this man told, in his own dialect, what great things God had done for him. All this summer, Sunday after Sunday, these two have held meetings: sometimes in the temple, oftener in the distant "granges," on the forests, on the hillside, in the deep ravine, where the Protestants met for worship in the time of persecution, and always the people have come to hear them.

They are poor men, obliged to work hard from dawn to dark to win the bread for their families, and the others knew well that it was no light thing to give up their day of rest in order to announce the Gospel to those who, without them, would have had no message of salvation given them. So Ancelon was provided for, although the two volunteers longed greatly for the return of their pastor.

But Volrent, the most distant of his annexes, was too far for them to reach. It is more than three hours' distance across the mountains. The service should be held there once a month, but when the snow lies deep it is sometimes impossible; and when we crossed it, as we did several times, we could fancy a little how wild and keen the "bise" would sweep over it in winter, where for miles there is absolutely not a tree, and only one solitary hawthorn bush slowly dying on the bleak hillside. The pastor's daughter lives with me, and it was she who suggested: "Cannot we do something for Volrent?" She knew that in her father's absence nothing was done there. Happily there was one room to be had there, which we secured, and then started. Helome's brother drove us to St. Nazaire, the nearest point where there is a road, and thence we walked the three hours, passing I think two houses on the way. We were very glad before sunset to find the village, for it is so hidden behind ridge after ridge of steep long hills that we began to fear we had lost our way.

And now I see that I must leave Volrent for another letter, and tell you instead of our visit to the peasant preacher of whom I have already spoken. He lives in the ruined chateau of Ancelon, higher than the rest of the village. We had only just arrived, but we knew that if we did not see him that night he would be off, to work on the rocks for the barrage, which is to bring a road across the ravine. So, lantern in hand, we passed over the heaps of ruin to his door. We stopped in the wide vestibule to put out our lantern, and to listen to the solemn voice from within. He was reading, with occasional hesitation, his French Bible, and giving explanation and exhortation in "pators" to his family. His voice is wonderful. Formerly they say it was a terrible voice; no one cared to meet him in the street or to hear him abusing wife, children, or cattle, or shouting in the cabaret.

And now as we entered we saw a scene I can never forget. The vast kitchen, vaulted as they were built formerly, was all dark, but for the dim oil lamp on the table; for the hearth fire was almost out. The only light was on his earnest face as he bent over his Bible. Beside him was his little girl, her curly hair resting on the table, fast asleep. On the other side his little boy, his eyes looking up at his father with an expression of loving reverence and wonder, and his wife and a neighbour, were equally intent. I believe I cried for joy! I do know that we knelt down, and rejoiced, and thanked God together for the great things He had done. Will you pray for Amabu, its pastor, and his peasant helpers.—Your sincere friend,

S. R. Geldard.

WORK IN THE LEBANON.

A quiet and good work has for some time been carried on at an important centre between Sidon and Beyrout, by a party of independent English ladies. In hearty sympathy with the American missionaries of that region, these ladies have gained great influence over the natives by practical sympathy in their bodily sufferings, and care for the education of their children. Recently Miss Taylor, medical missionary of the Society for Female Education in the East, stayed some weeks with these ladies, and rendered medical and surgical aid to more than 300 native sufferers. She writes: "I find the Druses most accessible, especially to English people. Past political benefits are not forgotten. I have ridden as freely over Lebanon as I could over the hills and dales of England, meeting with uniform respect and kindness."

One of the workers referred to, after a short absence, is soon returning to her interesting sphere, and is particularly desirous of obtaining help in the medical department, which has been sadly crippled for want of funds. She is also anxious to take with her a number of slides illustrative of Bible subjects, for use with the magic lantern. Rev. H. Jones, 20, Porter's-road, South Norwood, Surrey, late secretary of the Turkish Missions Aid Society, highly commends this unostentatious but truly Christian effort, and will be glad to give information respecting it.

GLASGOW EXHIBITION.—The Trustees of the Stirling Tract Enterprise circulated nearly 400,000 of their publications. In the Exhibition itself over 205,000 booklets were printed, folded and stitched, by machinery, and handed to visitors; while 184,000 Stirling floral tracts, booklets, &c., were distributed at open-air meetings outside the building. Some of the booklets were carried to the Shetland Isles, Cardiff, Ireland, &c.

AT WORK IN BRAZIL.

Dear Sir,—Much good has resulted from the letters, by my husband, you so kindly published. How it would encourage me could I know that earnest prayer is being offered in every home where The Christian enters, for God to bless our efforts in Brazil! The people here, both rich and poor, live such ungodly lives, that they judge us by their own standard, and it would be risking my husband's character for him to enter the home of a Brazilian should the master of the house happen to be out. In some things, therefore, I have to work single-handed. Boys and girls attend separate schools, and this is one obstacle in the way of Sabbath-school work, until the people get to know and have confidence in us.

After but few months' work in this part of the city, I have seen some fruit of my labours; many homes are open for me to visit and read with the women. Several are interested about their souls. One old lady, finding it so hard to get her children to read to her, has asked me to teach her to read, so that she may read the Scriptures for herself. Several mothers are also sending their children to me one afternoon a-week; and after our sewing class we have singing, reading of the Bible, and prayer. The children love music and singing, and it sounds so good to hear them singing "Come to the Saviour" in Portuguese. What joy when these little ones shall learn to love and confide in our loving Saviour! Dear sisters in Christ, will you not pray God to fill me with grace and wisdom to guide these mothers and little ones to Christ?—Your sister in Christ, Grace M. Soper.

In a letter to a helper in this country, Rev. E. H. Soper also writes:—God is blessing our work in this great city of sin and immorality. Next Sunday we hope to baptize several on profession of faith, and many others are anxious about their souls. On all sides God is opening up the way for his work. We hope very soon now to have full liberty to preach in the streets and public parks of the city. The Bill granting full religious liberty to all alike is sure to pass. I cannot understand why there should be so little interest for Christ's work in Brazil among the Christians in England. There is as much need of missionaries here as in Africa or any heathen land. The millions of Brazil are still in darkness; they know not the glad tidings of salvation. I have seen more wickedness here than ever I saw in the interior of Africa or any other part of the world I have visited. Yet the Church of Rome does not condemn such things; it rather encourages them as a means of filling her treasury. The workers of the Lord in Brazil are few; we need at least twelve men for Rio alone, and there are provinces as large as the whole of England where the Gospel has never yet been preached.

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

EXETER HALL.—On Monday, December 3, at the prayer-meeting from 1 till 2, M. A. H. G. de Rougemont will speak upon "The Young Men of France," and how far their religious wants are met. On December 4, Pastor Merle D'Aubigne will speak upon "Work among the Catholics in Belgium."

THE SOCIETY FOR RELIEF OF PERSECUTED JEWS, in token of Christian sympathy, reports with some satisfaction upon its operations during the past year. On the one hand Jews have been enabled to settle among friends in America and elsewhere, and on the other, many have been helped to gaining a livelihood in the Holy Land. Temporary relief has also been given, and much has been done to call forth Hebrew gratitude for Christian kindness. There are now 40,000 Jews in the Holy Land—more than the number taken back from the Babylonish Captivity by Ezra and Nehemiah. The Society is endeavouring to assist some Jews in the formation of agricultural colonies in Palestine rather than increasing the congested population of the towns. Communications should be addressed to the secretary, Mrs. Finn, 41, Parliament-street, Westminster, S.W.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR:—FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Situation surveyed, Defects disclosed, and the Church recalled to her Lord's Instructions.

I.—The Present Outlook.

WHEN Christ had been taken up, and the cloud had received Him from sight, and the voices of the men in white apparel telling of his coming again had died away, the little handful of disciples returned to Jerusalem under the deep consciousness of a heavenly mission. They were to preach the Gospel to all the nations. What was their resource under the pressure of such responsibility? They well knew that a greater power was needed than had accompanied their service for the three years they had followed Christ. They betook themselves to "the very words of Jesus." They obeyed his detailed instructions. In consequence of this, soon "rivers of living water" were flowing from each of them. Now again, in this day, as the cloud that then hid Him begins to enkindle with his returning glory, an aroused Church faces the same tremendous problem. The same inspiring consciousness of a mission from her Lord is upon her; and, remembering the centuries she forgot her vocation, humbled in view of her lethargy since the Reformation, alarmed at the slight impression her testimony has made on the heathen world in the past century, which has witnessed the beginnings of modern missions, conscious of a deep lack somewhere, what can she do but turn again to her Lord's living words and scan again his directions?

Let us first look out upon the field—the world. Gross darkness is everywhere save among the nations of Christendom, and there the prevailing tint is sombre enough. The heavy pall of Papal darkness covers entire kingdoms, and is spreading into lands where "the true light shineth," like the rolling clouds of an oncoming thunderstorm. As smoke from the pit, the infidelity of France has crossed the Channel, and the Rationalism of Germany has passed over the North Sea, and from England has been carried westward and southward to the other Anglo-Saxon peoples. From the mouth of the dragon have come forth the frogs of modern Spiritualism for the masses, and Theosophy for the cultured. In that which bears the name of Christ the outlook is dark. In the Church of England the tide sets Romeward. Among Dissenters "modern thought" comes in like a tidal wave. "Science, falsely so called," builds its nests in the very seats of Christian science, and teaches, as the truth of God, the germ errors of that apostasy that will soon say of God and his Christ, "Let us break their bands asunder, and cast away their cords from us." More alarming than all else is the worldly conformity that not only rules the nominal, but that obtains all but universally among the true. The maxims of earth, the rules of human expediency, have everywhere displaced the simple and fearless obedience of faith, so that all religious institutions, including that of foreign missions, are largely founded and conducted on the principle of prudential foresight rather than living faith.

When the eye is turned abroad a vast column of seven hundred and fifty millions of souls is seen moving steadily, blindfold, into the pit. The head of the column is ever disappearing, irrevocably lost. They have not yet heard of Christ or seen the face of one of his witnesses. How overwhelming!

Of these, something like one hundred and eighty millions are not heathen but Mohammedans, adherents of that false faith which God permitted to come as a scourge upon Eastern Christendom, as the Papacy came upon the West. While through the centuries the Church has been sleeping, her vocation forgotten, this formidable power has been spreading itself by its armies and its missionaries, until now its blight is upon those lands where the Gospel once triumphed. Not only much of Asia, but in Africa all the northern countries are solidly Moslem, while its white mosques gird the entire continent on the coast, and the vast interior is rapidly yielding to its propagators. It finds its apologists among the dignitaries of the Church of England, even as Buddhism has its growing societies of avowed converts in Christian lands. Mohammedanism is Christianity's greatest foe. Let us not be deceived by the thin coating this pill of poison wears. It is one of Satan's masterpieces. It was in such trances and fits as come upon modern mediums that Mohammed received from time to time the Koran. It is little wonder that it degrades Christ to the level of an ordinary prophet, and far beneath Mohammed, and denies both his deity and his death. The regions over which the fire of its fanaticism has passed, to all human appearance, yield no promise of fruit to the messenger of the Cross. But faith looks not at the outward appearance, nor sits down, like Hagar, in supine hopelessness, saying of Ishmael's seed, "Let me not see the death of the lad," but perceives the spring of the water of life, and would lift even these seemingly hopeless ones in her arms and give them to drink.

It is best that we face all the facts, that a wholesome fear may possess our souls; lest, going on still in our own strength to encounter this great array (as, alas! we have done too long), we meet only defeat and shame.

That the full gravity of the situation be realised, contrast our position with that of the Pentecostal Church. To accomplish the evangelisation of the seven hundred and fifty millions we have put some five thousand labourers into the field. They are toiling wearily on, with scanty results, unaided by any of those outward signs and wonders which riveted attention in the early days of Christianity, and with but a comparatively small degree of even inward converting power. At home the societies experience no little difficulty in sustaining the existing agencies. Much perplexity is felt as to how the forces in the field are to be adequately recruited, and how even those eager to go forth can be sent. A grave apprehension has crept into the minds of many of the more spiritual of some radical defects in missionary operations as at present conducted.

But glance now at the Primitive Church. Her many thousands, greatly outnumbering those we have in the field, and all young converts in the glow of their first love, "went everywhere preaching the Word," with memorable success. They were flushed with constant victory; they were supernaturally preserved and sustained; they had the mighty power and demonstration of the Spirit, "the Lord working with them, and confirming the Word with signs following." Their commission was to "preach the Gospel to every creature." This, the Apostle Paul tells us, they did. To all the then known world they gave the glad tidings. Upon every successive generation the same responsibility for the gradually enlarging limits of the known world rested. But no generation since those first golden days has done it.

Behold our position. The accumulated work of some fifty-four slothful generations confronts us, besides the effort we would have had to put forth had all that preceded us been faithful. How the enemy has wrought while the Church has slept! How tremendous are the odds! But let no man's heart fail him. Be strong and of good courage. Let the fearful and unbelieving be sifted out; and if but a Gideon's three hundred remain, if they will but have recourse to that which is the open secret of the power of the Apostolic Church—a deep reverence for the commands of Christ, and a quick obedience to them when discerned—they need not fear. This with us, as with them, will issue in a mighty baptism of the Spirit, before which these obstacles of centuries will be like the green withs which bound Samson. As

ISRAEL: A PRINCE WITH GOD.

The Story of Jacob Re-told.

By F. B. MEYER, B.A.

With full-page Illustrations of the River Jordan and Jacob's Well.

Sixth Thousand. Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

From The Baptist Messenger:—

"We have had considerable pleasure in reading this book on the Life of Jacob. Mr. Meyer has great descriptive power. He can tell a narrative well. The subject in his hand glows with life; and the scenes and events in the history of his hero pass vividly before you, and are ever being used to force home on the readers some great and important principle. The volume is prettily got up, well bound, and embellished with frontispiece and illustrations."

From The Sword and Trowel:—

"Exceedingly good. Not only spiritual, as everything from our brother Mr. Meyer would be, but also thoughtful, fresh, suggestive, and thoroughly practical."

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

A Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple.

By Rev. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

Principal of Bristol Baptist College.

With two Chromo-lithographic Views.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon says: "Preachers abound; but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter; but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. James Culross; and in his work entitled 'John, whom Jesus Loved,' we have found a book. Many writers are mere echoes of other men's voices—they imitate the good steward in bringing forth things old, but things new are quite out of their way. One of the excellences of Dr. Culross is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way."

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."

The Sword and Trowel.

"Dr. Culross has handled his subject in such a way as to have produced the most complete as well as the most interesting biography of the Apostle John it has ever been our privilege to peruse. To his task, or rather, we should say, labour of love, he has brought a well-furnished and evenly-balanced mind: great literary skill and taste: and an unusually profound spiritual insight."

Stirling Observer.

Cheap Edition: Tinted covers, 2s.; Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

BEHOLD I STAND AT THE DOOR AND KNOCK.

Christ's Message to the Church at Laodicea.

By Rev. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"Two evils are obvious enough among us—Ritualism and Rationalism. But there is a third, more terrible and more insidious than either of these—the Laodicean spirit, with its blended lukewarmness and pride. It is this spirit that Dr. Culross examines, describes, and rebukes. All who admire the author's insight, his delicacy of perception, his felicity of language, his broad and tender sympathies, his grasp of great truths, will welcome this volume."—The Freeman.

"Another 'gem of purest ray serene' from the deep waters of our brother's teeming mind. He possesses a ripeness of thought and a beauty of expression which, in our judgment, are scarcely equalled, and in not one instance surpassed, by those of any other living teacher known to us."—The Sword and Trowel.

Cheap Editions: Tinted covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT EPHESUS.

By Rev. J. CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"The glow, as from a golden sunset, which the imagination sheds over the author's style, gives it a great charm."—The British Messenger.

"We do not know a higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly; these latter adjectives we find it impossible to use concerning many of the devotional books produced in our day. Because we may honestly use them in this case, we heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."—The Sunday School Chronicle.

From The Rock:—

"The lessons to be learnt from the life of this prophet are well drawn out and emphasised in the pages before us. . . . Mr. Meyer's language is clear, forcible, descriptive, and interesting; his doctrine is always pure and elevating."

From The Presbyterian Messenger:—

"This is a most stimulating book. It sparkles with heavenly light, and glows with heavenly fire from beginning to end. We honestly and heartily recommend it."

CHRISTIAN LIVING.

Fifth Thousand. By F. B. MEYER, B.A.

Cloth boards, 1s.

Presentation Edition: Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 1s. 6d.

From The Christian Commonwealth:—

"Every page is full of stimulating thought for Christian workers; and we heartily commend its earnest admonitions, and cheering appeals for a higher life. From beginning to end it is a live book; and is worthy of a place in every Christian library."

an honoured brother has just written me: "It is one of the promises that the years which the locust hath eaten shall be restored, and it may be that a great fulfilment of this is to be seen in our day, and that the locust-eaten years since Pentecost will be restored in this generation, and this Gospel of the kingdom be preached in the next decade to all nations, and then the end come—Jesus come on the clouds of heaven, and the mystery of God be finished."

> Oh! scenes surpassing fable, and yet true,
> Scenes of accomplished bliss.

We propose, having now surveyed the field, to go on to examine the forces which are supposed to be available, seeking to learn their true value as tested by God's principles; after which we hope for wisdom to point out the hindrances and defects which we are assured account for the friction in the home machinery, and the disappointing results abroad, and which, as far as we know, have yet to be faithfully laid bare. The ground will then be cleared to consider the true methods of foreign mission work laid down by the Lord Jesus.

Orphans at Bagshot.

In company with Mr. Gilbert McCaul, the well-known Australian merchant, and a member of the managing committee of the Royal Albert Orphan Asylum, one of our staff recently paid a visit to that institution. He was greatly delighted with what he saw, and is anxious to enlist on its behalf the practical sympathies of the readers of The Christian.

The institution appears to be, in most respects, an ideal one. Its situation, on the breezy heath-covered heights above Bagshot, is splendid. No wonder that the 200 odd boy and girl residents looked pictures of perfect health. The immunity of this Orphanage from disease or serious ailment is both gratifying and easy to be explained. The original pile of building, named Collingwood Court, was intended for a private residence, and it had to be adapted for the purposes of the institution. An addition was erected, comprising workshops for the boys and a large dining-hall, which also serves as a chapel for morning and evening prayer. Attached to the house there are 200 acres of land; only a part of this is under cultivation, but enough to form a farm and large garden from which to supply the children with milk, fruit, vegetables, and other articles of diet.

Here, then, we have all the elements for such a successful rearing and training of boys and girls as will prepare them to take an honourable place in the ranks of the world's workers. Judging from what our representative saw of the daily life of the institution, that training leaves nothing to be desired. About noon the children were gathered for the meal that divides the labours of the day. One had only to glance at the ruddy faces and well-knit forms of the boys and girls alike to see that their creature comforts are well looked after. Due economy is, at the same time, observed in the working of the place—a thing not only essential, but desirable, in view of the future prospects of the children. They have all to fight their own way as working bees in the great human hive, and any pampering in early life would be doing them the worst possible service.

After dinner the children sang various pieces in a way that testified not only to youthful purity and richness of voice, but to care and taste in training. Then they dispersed to their varied occupations. To say all that might well be said about this interesting department would much more than exhaust our space. One little band of boys, who have chosen the tailoring vocation, were busy stitching with the needle, or pressing with the hot-iron goose. Another small company, convinced, we may suppose, that "there is nothing like leather," were being trained as shoemakers and shoemenders; looking at the long array of small boots waiting to be cobbled, they had their winter's work cut out for them. Then in succession we visited the bakehouse, where all the bread eaten by the large family is prepared; the shop of the carpenter, that most sacred of callings; the great kitchen garden, where a bevy of lads were manuring and digging around some raspberry canes; and finally the farm, with its health-giving and varied occupations of tending the live stock and tilling the soil.

Inside the main building the girls were distributed and were actively at work, under proper supervision, washing, ironing, sewing, knitting, darning, patching, cooking, waiting at table, and we know not what. They seem to be carefully taught all the diverse operations that go to make up housekeeping, so that when their period of tuition is expired they can at once enter on the responsible work of domestic service. We were not surprised to learn that there is a great and constant demand for these girls when they are ready to leave the fostering roof of the institution.

Perhaps the school work should have been mentioned before the industrial training; but it matters little, as both branches go on simultaneously, on the "half time" system. That is to say, the boys and girls who do manual work in the forenoon, are at the school desk or in class, during the afternoon, and vice versa. This plan does away with any possibility of over-tasking either brain or muscle, and is really beautiful in its naturalness and practical value. As to the tuition in the school we need only say that the last report of the Government inspector is a singulary favourable and satisfactory one. Again we are constrained to remark that the system of training adopted is one of ideal excellence. The children are well clothed, well fed, and carefully initiated into the apprentice work of the handicrafts they have elected to follow. When they bid farewell to the institution, at the age of sixteen or thereabouts, they are able at once to do skilled work, and to earn their own living. We cannot refrain from recording the impression formed by our visit that the Committee are most fortunate in their managing officers. Along with alertness and governing capacity, we could discern that sympathetic consideration so needful in dealing with a large body of children, born in different homes and having such varied temperaments or capacities.

We have left almost to the last the mention of one of the most distinctive features of the institution. It was founded in 1864, as a memorial of the then deseased Prince Consort, and was designed specially to avoid the baneful principle of canvassing for votes. The subscribers of course possess the elective authority in proportion to the amount of their contributions, but the election of candidates is carried through purely on the merits of each case. This method, which abolishes the traffic in votes and secures help to the most needy and deserving cases, should alone commend the Royal Albert Orphan Asylum to the heartiest countenance and support of the philanthropic public. Its benefits are available, as a rule, for children who have lost the bread-winning parent, and whose mothers have a heavy burden to carry. To many of these it has been as a very messenger of mercy and help from heaven. The loud claims of those who have suffered from any great catastrophe are also heard and heeded when it is possible to do so. Several children were taken in who were orphaned by the sinking of the ss. Princess Alice in the Thames several years ago, and more recently by the disastrous and fatal fire at Exeter theatre. Such readiness to step into the breach is another reason why this Orphanage should not be forgotten by the giving public.

The fact that it is to a certain extent self-contained, through the industry of the children, promotes economy; the average annual cost of each child is only about £22. Still, we regret to say, its financial burdens are pressing. There is no endowment of any sort. From the beginning a heavy mortgage on the property has been a drag on the management, and causes many anxious hours to the friends—mostly active City gentlemen—who oversee the affairs of the institution. Mr. Samuel Morley was, during later life, one of its most energetic and generous helpers.

We have three suggestions for our readers, who, we feel certain, regard with a specially tender interest the case of the orphan and the widow. First, let all who can, pay a visit to the place and see its working. If that is impossible, and in any case, send to the secretary, Mr. Richard Witherby, 62, King William-street, E.C, for some literature giving fuller particulars than we can furnish in this brief notice. Finally, give due weight to the fact stated about the non-traffic in votes. If the world's wealth were well distributed there would certainly be enough and to spare in the coffers of this Home that perpetuates the name and memory of Albert the Good; that casts gleams of sunshine across the shaded pathway of the sorrowing widow; and that gives so many young lads and lasses a fair and well-furnished start in the stern battle of modern life.

PARIS.—For over thirty years M. Vignal has borne testimony for Christ in Paris; and from "Recollections of a Paris Evangelist," part 30, just published, it appears that he is still heartily co-operating with others in France in making known the love of God and the way of life. Copies of the report may be had from Miss E. W. Clift, 10, Trafalgar-terrace, St. Mary Church-road, Torquay.

MRS. GEORGE C. NEEDHAM is, during the month of November, conducting a series of drawing-room meetings in Philadelphia. Large numbers are responding to personal invitation. The object of this mission is to reach the higher class ladies of Philadelphia, whose superior social surroundings often sadly interfere with the culture of the Christian life. Mrs. Needham also delivers a weekly Scripture lecture in the Women's College. This is for medical students and young ladies intending to devote themselves to the foreign mission field, who are anxious to equip themselves for their important work by a clearer doctrinal understanding of the Scriptures.

AN ENGLISH COLONY IN BRAZIL.—For nearly twenty years a small English colony has been settled in Assunguy, Brazil. These poor people are practically cut off from civilisation, and their lot has been a very hard one. The projected roads to the colony have not been made, and the journey to the nearest city is one of great peril. The nearest medical man resides sixty miles off, and his fee for visiting the colony is quite prohibitory. Mr. William Westley, one of the settlers, has a knowledge of homœopathy, and his services, both medical and spiritual, have been simply invaluable to his fellow colonists. The people, however, are too poor to buy medicines. At the request of Mr. John Pearce, of 73, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C., the Imperial Government of Brazil has undertaken to convey to Mr. Westley (free of charge) a package of medicine, medical books, and surgical appliances, and Mr. Pearce, who is anxious to utilise to the fullest extent this valuable concession, asks contributions to enable him to send out a really valuable consignment, addressed to him as above.

MISS MACPHERSON'S REPORT.

'One soweth and another reapeth" is very generally the law of Christian work. Those, however, who seek to rescue neglected children, and train them for God, frequently experience the double joy of casting in the seed and bearing home the golden sheaves. So it is with Miss Macpherson and her helpers. For the greater part of the year our sister is busy in London finding out and manipulating the raw material. Then in the fitting autumn time she crosses the Atlantic, and there beholds the full fruition of her toil, in the different stages of that blessed evolution which transforms the East-end waifs into blooming, happy children; young men and maidens, whose lines have fallen in pleasant places; or the more matured, devoted Christian worker, ready for service wherever the Master may appoint.

The workers' meeting at 29, Bethnal Green-road, on Wednesday week, was the occasion of Miss Macpherson's first appearance after her return from the far West. The report she had to give was extremely pleasing to hear; radiant indeed were the wreathed smiles that overspread the faces of the large company as she passed from point to point in her narrative. First of all she recapitulated somewhat her experiences in journeying to and from Canada and the States with Mr. Hudson Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Radcliffe, and others. That wonderful missionary campaign has already been partially described in these pages. Then we were carried away in thought to the rolling prairies of Manitoba, in order to hear something of the "new departure"—the 640 acre farm near Winnipeg, the gift of a kind Scotch friend. Miss Macpherson went almost into raptures about this location. "The air; oh, the air!"—it was well she stopped for lack of adjectives, or she would have made it difficult for us to reconcile ourselves to the fogs that await us in London 'twixt now and spring. Her nephew told her that in ploughing the land he had uprooted tens of thousands of blooming rose trees! The flowers bedecked themselves in colours unspeakable. Even the cows were of an abnormal kind, for they had developed extraordinary agility in scouring the prairie when it was not milking time. This Manitoba farm is clearly going to play a very important part in the future of the work. From the land, Miss Macpherson passed to the still more important lads and lasses. The history of one, Emma, was rehearsed in a few graphic touches, and we saw before our very eyes, as it were, the poor orphan girl growing into the industrious and well-paid young woman who is about to make a happy home under the bright Canadian skies for her widowed mother and the younger children. A boy's story was about one Jasper Jackson, who was sent out as a lad, and who has so well improved his opportunities that he has fitted himself for service in the foreign mission field, whither he greatly desires to go. Hinting that she could go on "at any length" in expounding such a congenial theme, Miss Macpherson imparted the good news of a gift of £500 from a kind friend, which has encouraged her to aim at sending out to Canada in the coming season 400, instead of 300 children. She did not of course forget the home work, and had very pathetic words to say about the special effort that is now being made to gather in some of the lost sisters among whom the cruel hand of the assassin has been so busy in these dark weeks bygone.

Miss Stock was able admirably to supplement the statement of Miss Macpherson, whom she accompanied to Canada. She spoke of the heavy end of the work that has to be borne by Mrs. Merry and her helpers at Stratford, in fitting the children for being transplanted into new homes, and in dealing with them in all the vicissitudes of their life. Miss Stock afforded no small diversion by telling the story of a Christian couple "over the border" in the States, who wished to adopt some children, having none of their own. The wife wrote that her husband had not a coarse thread in his nature! Her heart was capacious enough to prompt her to ask for four girls and two boys! The result of much anxious cogitation at Stratford was the sending of two girls and a boy—Frankie, Dolly, and Flossie. These were duly taken, and left with her by Miss Stock, who told us she discovered that the lady was at the same time bringing up two other poor children, sending them to school, and herself teaching them domestic duties. Here, surely, is a practical hint for some of the many well-to-do English ladies whose hearts are unsatisfied with the pleasures that are "like poppies spread," and whose time hangs heavy on their hands. After some further particulars as to the doings in Canada, Miss Stock closed with the excusable exclamation, "It is a great joy this blessed work!"

The more solid speaking of the evening was an address by Rev. F. B. Meyer, on "The Conditions of Successful Christian Work." These, in brief, were, agreement with Christ in his purpose—the glorifying of the Father; in his principle of action—the emptying of self that He might be filled with the Spirit; in the plan of his work—referring all to God; in his use of the great weapon, the Word of God; and in the matter of being clean vessels or instruments fitted for Divine use. The points were impressively elaborated and applied. Some searching words as to the removal of hindrances, such as exaltation of self, or jealousy of others, were pressed home. At the close Mr. Meyer led in the language of confession, and renewed consecration of heart and life. Miss Barclay, a young lady soon to proceed to China, and Dr. and Mrs. Wilson, of the China Inland Mission, each in a few words desired to have fellowship in prayer with the assembled workers, for power in their future service.

GOSPEL WORK IN ROME.

A commodious hall for undenominational evangelistic work has been secured in an admirably central part of this city. The Gospel work to be carried on in this centre, it is hoped, will be a means of strengthening the hands of the brethren who are already occupying this important and difficult field. In addition to Gospel work for the Italians, meetings for united prayer are being arranged, and an evangelistic service in English will be held every Sunday evening, to which strangers passing through the city will be cordially welcomed.

Major Colquhoun, the superintendent of the Roman Evangelistic Mission, will be glad to see Christian visitors during their stay in Rome, and will be happy to put them in the way of becoming acquainted with the Roman workers, and the work they are doing for the Master.

THE "NEPAUL" STEAMSHIP, belonging to the P. & O. Company, which was referred to in a recent article, was not "wrecked at Marseilles," as stated. The vessel ran aground, but it has since been safely set afloat, and put in proper repair.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES IN THEATRES.—The Committee for Special Services in Theatres and Halls, in a circular just issued, express the conviction that the sad revelations respecting the conditions of human life in parts of London should quicken the conscience alike of every disciple of Christ and every lover of his country. Thousands of people are, it is stated, now hearing the Gospel in the Pavilion Theatre, Whitechapel, and the third Shaftesbury Memorial City Mission Hall in Union-street, Borough, will shortly be opened. It has been admitted that the great mass of the working population is untouched by the religious organisations; the Committee seeks to make to this very class of people an offer of the Gospel of Christ, free from a system of pew-rents and the denominational characteristics which alike "puzzle and paralyse" them. The secretary of the Committee is Mr. C. M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, New Bridge-street, E.C.

A FATAL WHISPER.

A whisper stole upon the air,
A vague, uncertain sound;
Loosely it floated here and there,
Sailing and circling round,
Like those light spider-threads that stray,
About on a calm summer's day.

Wherever two or three were met,
It, eddying, near them drew;
And then, as if in motion set
By their lips' breath, it flew
Away to others, that like these Caught it, and sent it with the breeze.

And thus it sailed and circled on,
A faint and formless thing;
Yet many felt when it was gone
It left a trailing sting;
Such as the swimmer feels when he
Meets the medusa in the sea.

At length it lighted!—round the frame
Of a strong man it coiled:
His eyes, they flashed into a flame,
His bosom heaved and boiled;
His heart was seized with piercing pains,
His blood was poisoned in his veins.

Against this subtle foe he fought,
But fought without avail;
Its nature and its source he sought,
But only sought to fail:
Though many knew, yet none would speak,
To tell him where he was to seek.

Could he but trace from whence it came,
He there might find its cure;
A breath, a hint, a word, a name,
Might health and hope ensure;
But name, or word, or hint, or breath
Comes not to shield his soul from death.

His spirits droop, his strength departs,
His flesh falls off his bones;
Awake, he stammers and he starts,
And in his sleep he moans:
He shuns the crowd; and, as he walks
Alone, unto himself he talks.

At last he sinks upon his bed,
Never to rise again;
One thought runs through his weary head,
And racks his wandering brain:
That whisper faint, that vagrant sound,
Has brought the strong man to the ground!

The slander of a vicious tongue
Broke down a spirit brave;
Its poisoned folds around him clung,
And dragged him to the grave:
While those who could have saved stood by,
And saw him perish—by a lie!

BATH PUBLIC-HOUSE AND CABMEN'S MISSION.—Under the auspices of this Society, over eighty Bath chairmen a few days ago sat down to tea in St. James's Hall. The occasion was much enjoyed by the men, and the proceedings were very cheering to the friends of the Mission. Addresses were delivered by some of the local clergy, Mr. Charles Smith, the missionary, and Miss Skinner, the secretary, author of the well-known "Friendly Letters." Particulars of this good work may be had by addressing Miss Skinner, 5, St. James's-square, Bath, who will also gladly acknowledge book or tracts sent for distribution among the men.

DEACON ABRAHAM.—Dr. J. Shedd, of the American Mission, Ooromiah, Persia, with Mrs. Shedd, spent a few days in England, en route for a short rest in America. Dr. Shedd addressed a public meeting in Andover, Hants, on behalf of Deacon Abraham's Nestorian Orphanages. It is now twenty-nine years since Dr. Shedd commenced his work in Ooromiah, and during this time he has had an intimate acquaintance with the Deacon. He spoke in the warmest praise of the work done at the Orphanage, the moral and industrial training the children receive, and the economy with which the whole work is conducted. Information and collecting boxes may be had from Henry Tasker, Brookside, Andover, Hants.

The Book World.

* Prices of books sent for review will be given if stated.*

Mr. Spurgeon's "Interpreter."

Among the many priceless services that the Tabernacle pastor has rendered to the Church of God, we deem the preparation of this manual of family devotion to be one of the greatest; right gladly do we welcome a new and cheaper edition. In the preface Mr. Spurgeon points out that the book contains the gist of the complete Bible, the omitted passages being generally epitomised; further, that it is only intended for concerted family reading, and not as a substitute for fuller individual study. The interpolated comments are pithy and pregnant with profit. We do not doubt that there are many thousands of Christian households where the aid afforded by this compilation will be of extreme worth. We would counsel every young Christian couple to treat themselves to a copy as a New Year's possession, and to accompany Mr. Spurgeon, by its pages, throughout the year. We may mention that one friend has purchased 2500 copies as gift books. (12s. 6d. Passmore & Alabaster.)

The Fernley Lecture.

The Christian Conscience. By Rev. W. T. Davison, M.A. 3s. T. Woolmer. We congratulate Professor Davison on his choice of a theme for the Fernley Lecture of the current year. Conscience lies at the very heart of ethics and religion; and any system of ethical or religious belief which fails duly to correlate and explain the phenomena and functions of conscience is self-convicted and condemned. While attempting to give only an outline of this large question, the author has at the same time, we think, written up to date, and adequately met the various modern systems which misapprehend the nature and largely eliminate the authority of this voice from heaven in the soul. It is demonstrated that morals cannot be explained in terms only of man's descent from the lower animals; the like conclusion is established as it concerns every scheme of mere pleasure-seeking or hedonism. While the scientific or philosophical bearings of this work are valuable, its spiritual bearings are still more important. We have much pleasure in commending this Fernley Lecture as an able, sound, and spiritually helpful contribution to an important department of Christian ethics.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Modern Miracles. By Laila Thompson, with preface by Alex. Maclaren, D.D. James Nisbet & Co. This is not a treatise on faith healing, but a series of well-told narratives of conversions to God. The last chapter is headed "A Peep at Mannedorf." It is a useful book for Christian workers.

Twilight Verses. By Agnes Giberne. Nisbet & Co. Verses from a consecrated pen and cultured mind. "Difficulties" and "The Old Mower and Child" have a special charm. "Drifting," suggested by a letter of Miss Havergal's when her valuable life was all but spent, will touch many hearts.

Will it Lift? By Rev. Jackson Wray. 3s. 6d Nisbet & Co. A chance encounter in a London fog forms the ground-work for this cleverly constructed story with a somewhat complicated plot that gets unravelled at last. Life in both hemispheres is incidentally illustrated, and the character sketching is up to Mr. Wray's usual mark.

Miss Annie Swan's story, Miss Baxter's Bequest (2s. Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier) is a charming sketch of Scottish life and character, that will be specially welcome in the Border country because of the local colouring. The influence for good exercised by a young lady imbued with the Christian spirit is admirably portrayed.

A Short Life of Christ. By Cunningham Geikie, D.D. 6s. Hatchards. Notwithstanding the many lives of Christ which have lately appeared, we agree with the author that there is room for this book. It is not an abridgment of his larger work, but an attempt to present vividly, and in smaller compass, the story of our Lord's wonderful life. We anticipate that this will be as popular among general readers, as that is and will continue to be among students. Numerous illustrations, and a useful index of subjects, and of Scriptural texts, increase the value of the book. It is written in Dr. Geikie's bright, graphic style, and will be found pleasant and profitable reading to old and young.

Palestine of To-day. Under this title Messrs. Marshall Brothers are issuing in parts an illustrated work describing the Holy Land. Each part will contain ten views with descriptive matter, the illustrations being well-executed photo-gravures Single parts 6s. each; if a series of ten be taken, 5s. each.

The Drummond Book Depôt has published two excellent little books from Rev. Andrew Carter's pen. In Scripture Scenes and their Lessons, thoughts calculated to stimulate devotion are woven around some of the outstanding events in the Gospel story. "To Him that Overcometh" contains words of cheer for all Christian soldiers, based upon promises in the Apocalyptic Epistles to the Seven Churches. Both books are rich in experimental teaching. (1s. each.)

Persia. By S. G. W. Benjamin. 5s. T. Fisher Unwin. This is another volume of the attractive "Story of the Nations" series. Amply illustrated and supplied with maps, it presents an outline of the history of Persia, from the earliest times, so rich in legend, to the present day, when the country gives much promise of an interesting future. The author has an intimate acquaintance with Persia and its affairs, and he shows considerable power of historical interpretation. When events of special significance come under notice, his writing is both eloquent and forceful.

Not Cunningly Devised Fables. By the late Rev. Alex. Ewing. Hodder & Stoughton. This is a memorable volume, which will be highly valued, not only by those who were personally acquainted with the late author, but by all lovers of evangelical truth. The author evidently possessed a cultivated and well-stored mind, and a devout reverence for the Word of God. His sermons are thoughtful and inspiring, and his style vigorous and clear. A photograph of the author and an interesting memorial sketch by his widow increase the value of the book.

Recent Events and a Clue to their Solution. By Lord Robert Montagu. New edition. 6s. Hodder & Stoughton. When the first edition of this work appeared, in 1886, we indicated its remarkable character, and are not surprised that two editions have been exhausted. In the preface to this third edition, Lord Robert Montagu says he has received letters from correspondents in all parts of the world who believe with him that there is a vast conspiracy in these days, just as there was in the times of the Stuarts—and especially during the reign of James II.—to bring England under the dominion of the Pope.

A Memorial of Professor Graham. This volume of essays, by the brilliant Presbyterian Professor whose death was so widely lamented, is prefaced by a vivid and altogether admirable biographical fragment from the friendly pen of his fellow Presbyter in Liverpool, Dr. William Taylor, now of New York. The sketches are of four Reformers—Wiclif, Luther, Calvin, and Knox; three Missionaries—St. Columba, Xavier, and Brainerd; Milton and Burns as poets, and three of his contemporary ministerial workers. Here is a varied field for the exercise of the Professor's great gifts in the analysis of character and his powers of graphic description. All the sketches are so deeply interesting that we can only sound a general note of admiration, and hope for the book a host of readers. (5s. James Nisbet & Co.)

Life and Times of Girolamo Savonarola. By Professor Pasquale Villari. 2 vols. 32s. T. Fisher Unwin. This is a new edition of a work which has appeared in several forms during the past twenty years. It is here translated from the Italian into excellent English by Linda Villari, and embellished by a number of portraits and illustrations. The story of the eloquent monk is powerfully told, and with great regard for accuracy of detail. The times and circumstances likewise are graphically delineated, and, while Savonarola is shown to stand out boldly as a religious reformer and political leader, denouncing vice and corruption, and pleading the cause of the down-trodden and helpless, no effort is made to gloss over his many weaknesses and inconsistencies. If his martyrdom arrested his projects, it certainly did not extinguish his influence, and this biography has many important lessons for the present time.

"Feeling Saved"; or, Difficulties Dissolved. This little tract, by Rev. W. Carlile, of the Church Army, is full of searching questions and cogent answers. (6d. per dozen. Marshall Brothers.)

Popular Poets of the Period. Edited by F. A. H. Eyles. 6d. Griffith, Farran & Co. Here are brief biographies of living British poets, with choice selections from their works. Ten well-known writers are represented in the first two series.

The Gospel in Song is the title of a penny hymnal just brought out by The Sunday School Union.

The second part of Cassell's Popular Educator, which is just published, contains the first of a series of maps in colours, specially prepared for this new edition, in which the commercial aspect of geography is to receive special attention.

Miller Manning. By Matthew Forester. 1s. Bible Christian Book Room, 26, Paternoster-row. A well-written and thoroughly readable sketch of the honoured career of a Cornish Methodist local preacher. The book abounds in quaint anecdotes and revival incidents.

The first monthly part of the People's Edition of the Doré Bible (a weekly issue of which has been commenced in halfpenny numbers) will be published at the end of this month. By means of this edition the work will be procurable at one-twentieth of its original cost.

Food and Shelter for the Poor.

Hunger at any time is bad enough, but it is doubly hard to bear when it treads on the heels of cold and nakedness. So at this season of the year many of the workers among the great army of London's poor, redouble their efforts to cope with the abounding distress. We have received appeals from some of these friends; we hope their pathetic calls for help may be heard and heeded by those of our readers who are able to respond:—

Rev. P. Gast, 12, Noel-street, Islington, N., says he has in his district a long list of widows with large families, and of wives with sick husbands, besides many who are extremely. He pleads for blankets, boots, clothing, and money.

Mr. Wm. Catlin, 17, Claremont-square, Pentonville, N., wants to give a great many halfpenny dinners to Clerkenwell children with empty stomachs, but many of them come also with empty hands; and so he asks that kind Christians who fare sumptuously every day will supply the needed coins.

Passing from London's centre to the teeming East, we have a bitter cry from Rev. J. Rolfe Fisher, 26, Cottage-grove, Bow, E., who says:—"Day by day I meet the wailing cry of hundreds of starving half-clad children; and the pale, wan faces of heart-crushed men and women tell a deeper tale of want and sorrow than words can express." He would like, in the name of his Master, to distribute portions of soup, bread, coals, and clothing to these deserving poor.

Mr. James Sharpless, of the Spitalfields Gospel Mission, 14, Sydney-square, E., says the poor homeless waifs of the district come flocking to their Gospel hall on Saturday nights expecting shelter and some warm refreshment. His heart is moved with compassion towards them, but his exchequer is empty.

Rev. W. E. Hurndall, 16, Cottage-grove, Bow-road, E., is purposing to give a good Christmas dinner in their own homes to ten thousand of the East-end poor. He adds that donors may, if they prefer it, have part of their gifts devoted to the continuous relief of specially needy cases.

Notices.

Mr. William Forbes, Gospel temperance evangelist, has removed from 71, Windsor-road, to 71, Tollington-road, Holloway, N.

MISSION AT TORQUAY.

A simultaneous mission is being held at Torquay in connection with the established Churches and Nonconformist bodies. It is proving absorbingly interesting, all the places of worship being open. Large numbers of persons have been holding up their hands for prayer and remaining to the inquiry meetings. Morning prayer-meetings, midday meetings for working men, and afternoon Bible-readings are being held and numerously attended.

By common consent the shops of the town have been closed at an early hour in the evening; and the Gospel as a Divine message to men has been the one theme of conversation. Rev. W. Hay Aitken has been doing hearty and good service in the churches. Intensely earnest, and faithfully evangelical, he has been listened to with profit by believers and with conviction by many others. Rev. Newman Hall, one of the Nonconformist mission preachers, addressing a meeting of men, gave the substance of one of Mr. Aitken's powerful addresses, and the appreciation was very manifest. It is gratifying to be able to report that the evangelical bodies of the town have been seeing so much blessing upon their combined testimony.

THE "CARTER" BOYS' HOME.

On the occasion of the formal opening of the spacious new premises in High-street, Clapham, on Wednesday last week, the friends of the "Carter" Home for Destitute Boys were much cheered by the increased public interest manifested in the welfare of the institution. Among those who attended the afternoon meeting were the Earl of Aberdeen, Mr. J. S. Gilliat, M.P., Mr. T. A. Denny, and Miss Macpherson; and while praise was offered to God for the success which has hitherto attended the operations of the Home and the efforts of the Committee to extend its usefulness, earnest prayer was offered for future guidance and blessing.

At a public meeting, in the evening, Sir John Kennaway, M.P., who is president of the Home, occupied the chair. Dr. Eugene Cronin, treasurer, outlined the rise and progress of the institution, pointing out that every step had been taken in dependence upon God, and although difficulties have presented themselves, prosperity has, nevertheless, been continuous from the first. In securing the new premises, formerly a college in the charge of Jesuits, the Committee have certainly done a very good stroke of business, and it is hoped that they will soon be clear of the incubus of an indebtedness thus contracted, and have a free mind for developing the resources of the Home for the benefit of destitute youths.

In the course of a hearty address, Sir John Kennaway pointed out that the House makes useful citizens of its inmates by training them in industry, and fits them for every circumstance of life by instructing them in Divine truth. He enlarged upon the Christian origin of all such endeavours, and in language which showed the mind of the Spirit he impressed upon all workers in such spheres the importance of individual interest and appeal in dealing with the young. Mr. J. B. Gray, master of the Home followed with an account of the emigration work, which is to be extended, and Mr. Reader Harris also spoke. Destitute boys, of from six to sixteen years of age, are received at any time. Mr T. Jones is the secretary of the Home.

JAPAN AND INDIA.—At the noonday prayer-meeting, at the Y.M.C.A., Aldersgate-street, E.C., on Monday last, a Japanese Christian journalist spoke of the spiritual needs of his native country. Rev. Dennis Osborne, of India, remarked at the same time upon the responsibility of Britain in relation to her great Eastern Dependency.

Personalia.

The Bishop of Durham is now able to take the air in a bath chair, and the threatening aspect of the attack appears to be fading out; the medical advisers give every hope of a slow but sure return to convalescence.

Mr. Philip Phillips.—Many friends of this exponent of sacred song will be glad to know that he will give his new illustrated song addresses at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, December 11, 12, and 14, and at the Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end, December 13.

Rev. W. Newell.—The American Church in the Rue de Berry, Paris, has just lost its minister, Rev. Mr. Newell. On Sunday, November 11, he preached his farewell sermon to a large congregation. Both he and his wife will be regretted by the many friends they have made during their stay in Paris.

Dr. A. J. Gordon, of Boston, U.S., and Mrs. Gordon, lately celebrated their silver wedding. Many friends gathered for the occasion in the parlours of Clarendon-street Church, and words of warm appreciation were addressed to the pastor and his helpmeet. Dr. Gordon has ministered to this church for nineteen years.

Mr. Denham Smith.—We are sorry to announce that the happy reports from Mr. Denham Smith's sick-room which we have lately been able to give are again interrupted by the occurrence of another attack of the same nature as those which have so prostrated him in the past. This relapse, however, is so far of a milder character than the last, and it is hoped that the accompanying prostration will be less.

Princess Maud of Wales, according to The New York World, receives an allowance, a considerable part of which she spends in charity. There are so many appeals to her sympathy that her little fund is entirely inadequate to meet them, so she has hit upon a method of replenishing her exchequer. She makes a habit of gathering up all the peacock feathers that are dropped by the great flock of pea-fowl at Sandringham, and these she weaves into fans and fire-screens to be sold at charity fairs. The fact that they are made by a Princess, and also that they are very prettily and tastefully done, gives them a considerable value, and she reaps from them a neat little sum for her pet pensioners.

The new American President.—The following interesting incident with respect to the President-elect of the United States, is told by one of the elders in the Presbyterian Church, Indianapolis:—"On the morning after the nomination of General Harrison for President, I thought I would step around and see how my brother elder was taking the news, and congratulate him on the event. Reaching his house, I learned at the door that the family were done breakfasting, and had just retired to the library for the usual morning devotions. Stepping inside, I stood waiting and listening. I heard the General's familiar voice; he was reading from the Book of Psalms. Soon there was a pause, and I heard him leading in prayer. While he was praying I was rejoicing in the conviction that God was preparing him for the exalted place at the head of the nation."

CHINA INLAND MISSION.—A large public meeting and valedictory service, on the occasion of the departure of missionaries for China, was held in the Union Tabernacle, Wandsworth-road, on Thursday, Nov. 22, to commend unto God a party of missionaries, who sailed yesterday, the 29th inst.

EVANGELISATION IN BELGIUM.—On Thursday, last week, Pastor Charles Merle d'Aubigne, son of the famous historian of the Reformation, was present at the noon prayer-meeting at 186, Aldersgate-street, London, and gave some interesting information concerning the work of the Evangelical Missionary Church in Belgium. There is not a country in Europe, he said, which is so thoroughly Roman Catholic as Belgium; but the priests are rapidly losing their hold of the masses of the people, who gladly listen to the evangelists of the Missionary Church, as they earnestly make known the way of salvation through Jesus Christ. Whereas forty years ago the name of Protestantism was unknown in Belgium, now there are several thousands of Christian men and women who will not bend the knee before the elevated "host," while the future prospects of evangelistic effort in the country are exceedingly bright.

Letters to the Editor.

BISHOP BICKERSTETH'S WORKS.

Sir,—Will you allow me to draw attention to two works of Bishop Bickersteth, especially suited to mourners, that your editorial notice has omitted? "The Shadowed Home and the Light Beyond," being Thoughts on the Funeral Service of the Church of England; and to the deeply touching Memoir of his daughter Alice, in "The Master's Home Call." At the last of his clergy quiet days at Hampstead, in Oct. 1879, I said that with at least a hundred I had at different times got into real religious conversation, through that little book, with its beautiful poems of "Alice" herself, and its thrilling descripton of the Master bringing her godchild "Irene," eight weeks after Alice's home-going, as "an added joy to heaven."—Yours faithfully, Arthur W. Phelps.

ANTI-INFIDEL TRACT ENTERPRISE.

Dear Sir,—When I tell you that at A—— there is an old man in the habit of getting a number of young lads in his yard every Sunday morning, and reading to them The National Reformer, The Freethinker, and books of the vilest imaginable character, you will quite see with me the need for the Anti-Infidel Tract Enterprise in which I am engaged. To my certain knowledge this case is far from being isolated. Accompanied by a friend, I called upon this man, and sought to point out how wrong it was for an old man to seek to corrupt youthful minds; but all I could get from him was this: "I don't want to have anything to say to you. I don't believe in a God, a devil, or a hell. I don't want to be converted." If, therefore, in consequence of men having grown old in sin, such cases are all but hopeless, should we not be stirred up to greater diligence to save the lads? I do not think the Lord would have me cease, and until He closes the door I must continue. It is not only Infidelity I am fighting; it is what is beneath the surface—I mean Impurity.

Asking an interest in your prayers, and thanking you most sincerely for all your kind sympathy,

Yours faithfully, W. R. Bradlaugh.

A Bonfire of Bibles.

The Madrid correspondent of The Daily News writes:—

"The Liberal Government tries in vain to enforce the spirit of toleration among the authorities and subjects of his Catholic Majesty. Very recently in Biscay an agent of the Bible Society was attacked and insulted by twenty young Catholic students led by a Jesuit Father, who excited the lads to take possession of, tear up, and make a pious bonfire of the Bibles, Testaments, and tracts. The Spanish judges after carefully investigating the case declined to send the offenders before the Tribunal for the assault and the destruction of the property of the Foreign Bible Society. The students and not the Jesuit Father, who was the principal instigator of the outrage, will have to appear before the Municipal Magistrate, who can only inflict a fine and a few days' arrest even if they are convicted. Whilst this treatment is meted out to foreigners and Protestants, the Spanish Courts of Justice send journalists to penal servitude for criticising the State religion."

RATCLIFF STRANGERS' REST.

The work done at the Strangers' Rest for Sailors, 163, St. George's-street, Ratcliff-highway, E., was deservedly eulogised at the eleventh annual meeting, held on Friday evening last, under the presidency of Mr. G. Williams. The eulogy was not in praise of man, however, but rather a hearty acknowledgment of what God has wrought through human instrumentality. The Rest is the centre of much vigorous effort put forth through the constraining love of Christ, and the living bread which is there dispensed is, in more senses than one, "cast upon the waters," happily to be seen "after many days." Besides, many point to the Rest and say, with spiritual emphasis, "This man was born there."

The meeting having been led in devotions by Mr. Charles Inglis, the Hon. Secretary (Mr. T. J. Isaac) gave some account of the work during the past year. All the departments have been carried on with cheering results, Englishmen and foreigners of many nations, and not a few Jews, having listened to the word of life, and been personally looked after in many ways. Among the most blessed means of influencing the sailors is the system of correspondence; the addresses of men are taken, and they greatly appreciate the letters that are sent to them. Mr. Isaac referred to the variety of the work, whereby the Gospel is actually sent to all parts of the earth; as a rule, the men are not Gospel-hardened, and when they do receive the truth, they tell it out with earnestness wherever they go. The unsectarian and voluntary features of the work having been mentioned, an appeal was made for continued help, as well as for presents for the Christmas tree, for which preparations are being made. Mr. H. Kellaway, hon. treasurer, reported with pleasure that funds have come in as needed.

Mr. Reginald Radcliffe was expected to attend the meeting, but business detained him in Liverpool. Mr. J. E. Mathieson read the following deeply interesting letter received from him:—

Liverpool, November 21, 1888.

To the Workers and Friends of the London Strangers' Rest.

This year it must not be my happy lot to take part in your annual meeting to-morrow. It would, indeed, have made my heart full of joy to have been amongst you all. May God bless every one of you. Once again let me remind you that when Miss Macpherson, eleven years ago, and about a year after the starting of the Liverpool Strangers' Rest, invited me to come to London to advocate a similar Rest being started in London, I explained that it would not be for sailors merely, but (1) for sailors; (2) for Christendom; (3) for heathendom.

Eleven years have now rolled away, and how faithfully and nobly has our God enabled you to carry out in your Rest this threefold purpose. Thank God you have rightfully taken Israelites with Christendom, and Mohammedans with heathendom. Thus we can say your object is as wide as "The Evangelisation of the World."

It would take too long to attempt to detail or even to refer to instances of good to the seamen of the many nations who have passed through your hands, but it may encourage you, and be very useful to show you from a few actual cases connected with the London Rest, the Welcome Home, the Liverpool Rest work, &c., how remarkably has God blessed your efforts regarding the other objects.

Let us begin far away with—

Iceland.—Louis Johnson, an Icelander, got blessing, and went as a missionary to his native isle.

Denmark.—Markisson, converted at Liverpool Rest, has been labouring in Denmark for years. Miss R——, Copenhagen, visited Rest in England, and went back and introduced similar work in Denmark.

Norway.—Printed appeals for the heathen were, I hear, taken by sailors from one of our Strangers' Rests to Norway, and resulted in Miss Reuter and Miss Jacobson, two Norwegians, coming to London, and going to China as missionaries with the China Inland Mission. They have since been most remarkably used by God in the burning of idols and conversion of the Chinese.

Sweden.—Oulsen, a Christian Swede, blessed at the Welcome Home, is now working in Sweden in the Salvation Army.

Finland.—A sailor converted has since, for years, been working in that country.

Russia.—From this country you have had as helpers some earnest workers of the upper classes. A Russian sailor named Hans, converted in the Liverpool Rest, said after his conversion he would go back to his own land, fearing no prison.

Germany.—A Rest has been opened by workers from the Liverpool Rest in Hamburg, and one in Bremerhaven. Five of the English Rest workers have visited those Rests and worked there. One of the Rest workers returning from Russia through Hamburg, had a number of young German landsmen introduced to him, as having been converted in that Rest.

France.—There is a most valuable Rest at Havre, connected with one of the earnest lady workers. It cannot but have an excellent effect in France.

Spain.—One of the lady workers is now a missionary in Spain.

Italy.—An Italian seamen, converted at the Liverpool Rest, preached at his own charges both on board ship and at ports between Liverpool and his own country. He then went preaching in his own country.

Turkey.—The Rest at Constantinople has been much blessed. Lately we heard of an awakening from it amongst mountaineers at a distance from Constantinople.

Smyrna.—A Rest arose here, and led to an extensive work amongst resident Greeks and others.

South Africa.—Miss Lowe suggested to Mrs. Osborn: "Have you never thought of foreign work?" Mrs. Osborn began her work amongst soldiers and natives at Cape Colony, and Mr. Hannington, brother of the martyred bishop, was induced to go there. Now the work is spreading extensively, and likely to be taken up by Mr. Spencer Walton.

Australia, &c.—What could not our former worker, Mr. Wilkie, now superintendent of the Emigrants' Home, tell us of the many conversions in that Home, and of what some of those young converts are now doing in many foreign lands.

Jewish Converts.—There have been not a few, and deeply interesting some of them. They may affect the very heart of Russia.

Scandinavian Home. — What could not Miss Hedenström report of conversions, which affect not only the North of Europe, but some parts of the United States and Canada.

China.—Miss Lowe writes:—"So many who have worked have gone to China, that I have looked on it as quite a training school for foreign work."

The Heathen.—Mr. Isaac writes detailing special cases of workers who have gone to the foreign field in consequence of working at the Rest, and of a sailor converted there who went to work in South Africa. He adds the names of several of the Rest workers now in China, and says:—"Scarcely a month goes by without one or another saying, 'Good-bye,' for Africa, China, or elsewhere. We often tell the workers we wish they would all go, as we should not be the losers."

America.—I want some workers to stand in the midst of the streams of emigrants that flow from Europe through Hamburg, Bremen, Holland, and Havre, for America. Having for years had somewhat to do with the flood of foreign emigrants weekly passing through Liverpool to America, not a few of whom have been converted at the Strangers' Rest during the two nights they sleep in Liverpool, I was a few weeks since, in America, greatly concerned that something more should be done for the vast multitudes from Europe who arrive at New York and settle in multitudes in certain American towns. One day we were pledged to preach in Cincinnati in English, and pass on; no time to speak in German, though there were over one hundred thousand Germans in that city, and although I had been accustomed to preach to them in the towns of their own former Fatherland. I can tell you it was hard to be thus unable. Germans and other foreigners are swarming into America. Many of them, I understand, never frequent a place of worship. We should at least supply them with reading as they lodge in and pass out of ports of Northern Europe. Cannot we also follow them to the places where they concentrate in masses in America, or at least send a deputation to our warm-hearted American brethren, and encourage them to co-work with us?

Then, if God has so blessed your simple agencies to seamen, so blessed you amongst many of the nations of Christendom, as well as so specially amongst the Israelites, and sent so many of those whom we have had the privilege of working with to labour amongst the heathen, what may He not do in days to come with you for the evangelisation of the whole world?

Already, we are living in a very different day from the day the Strangers' Rest was begun. Let me conclude with a verse given me in America:—

We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time;
In an age on ages telling
To be living is sublime.

Reginald Radcliffe.

In the course of some remarks on world-wide evangelisation, Mr. Mathieson remarked that he believed that the great missionary societies purpose soon to throw open their doors for the reception of men who have not gone through a long training or curriculum, and send them forth on some such lines as the China Inland Mission.

Some hearty words having been spoken by the chairman, Miss Hedenström told of the success of the efforts among Scandinavians, in which she lends valuable aid. Rev. D. M. Cameron followed with an earnest address. Then three seafaring men, who found the Lord at the Rest, spoke words of gratitude to God and cheer to his servants. Capt. Lowe, of the London City Mission, also addressed the meeting. The proceedings closed with the observance of the Lord's Supper.

Tuesday, Jan. 8.—The Holy Spirit in the Church.—For the demonstration of the Spirit and power; for his abundant grace and effectual operation as the Spirit of truth, holiness, comfort, and love; that multitudes may be convinced of sin, and converted to God; that backsliders may be restored; that believers may walk in newness of life; that divisions among Christians may be healed, and the spirit of humility increased.—John xvi. 8—15; Rom. viii. 14—17; 1 Cor. xii. 13; Gal. v. 22—26; Phil. ii. 5—16.

Wednesday, Jan. 9.—Families and Schools.—That husbands and wives, parents and children, masters and servants may, in their mutual relations, observe the law of Christ; that family worship may be more generally observed; and that domestic life may be sweetened and hallowed by godliness. For a spiritual awakening among the Oriental Churches. For Christian missionaries to the heathen; for native churches and converts, preachers and teachers; and for mission colleges, schools, and hospitals. That the work to be done may be wisely distributed among the missionary agencies of Protestant Christendom; also that the ignorance of Islam may be removed, and the Word of the Lord have free course among the Moslem nations.—Matt. xxviii. 18—20; Acts xiv. 46—50; Gal. ii. 9; 1 Cor. i. 21—24; 2 Tim. iii. 10—17; 2 Thess. iii. 1—5.

Sunday, Jan. 13.—Sermon.

SOCIAL QUESTIONS IN FRANCE.—A large and influential meeting of Protestants, which included many well-known pastors, was recently held at Nîmes for the practical consideration of social questions. Special remedies were suggested for special causes of pauperism: For sickness, mutual help societies; prison, help to liberated prisoners; alcoholism, temperance societies; debt, co-operative societies; stoppage of works through new inventions, freaks of fashion, &c.; agricultural colonies where measures should be devised to retain the workers in the country. Some of the remedies would need Government aid for their application.—L'Evangéliste.

GIDEON'S ARMY.

JUDGES vii. 1—8; GOLDEN TEXT, ZECH. iv. 6.

ISRAEL'S STRAITS.—It would be hard to imagine anything more desperate than Israel's condition. For seven years the fierce hordes of the desert, Midianites, Amalekites, and various Arab tribes had swarmed across Jordan into the central plain of Esdraelon, reaching even to the western seashore. "They swept almost the whole land, pitched their tents, and fed their camels in the midst of the rich cornfields of Israel. The people fled to mountain fastnesses, and hid themselves in caves. The land lay uncultivated, the cattle were destroyed, and a grievous famine ensued." In one of the many skirmishes of these times Gideon's brothers were killed (chap. viii. 18). Words could never describe the horror of such invasions. It was a riot of cruelty, oppression, and bloodshed. The enemy, on this last occasion, was at least 135,000 strong, while Israel was disorganised, unarmed, and dispirited. All this a picture (1) of God's Church overrun with worldliness, or error; or, (2) of a soul in the power of evil, desolated and enslaved by sin.

ISRAEL'S DELIVERER.—(1) Was humble, both in position and spirit—his family "poor in Manasseh," and he "the least" (vi. 15). See 1 Cor. i. 26—29. How modest he is! "God's heroes ever shrink from great tasks, and are humbled, not exalted, when large fields of service open before them. It is the spirit in which alone true work for God is ever done. Braggart self-confidence, and ambitious seeking for high position, as peacocks will get up on a wall to show their tails, should have no place in the hearts of God's soldiers."—McLaren. (2) Was devout (vi. 11—20).—The spirit of deep reverence breathes in all his speech with the angel of the Lord. Some boys think it brave to make fun of good things, but the really brave are devout and reverent. (3) Was patriotic, with his country's cause at heart, ready to do anything for her deliverance. (4) Very cautious, being most careful not to go unless quite sure he was sent of God. Distinguish carefully between the rash credulity, which accepts any plausible tale, and the true faith, which first weighs and tests to the uttermost, and then trusts without reserve. (5) Was grandly courageous, both in destroying Baal's altar (vi. 25—32), and in the great attack with only 300 men.

ISRAEL'S ARMY.—Was but one-tenth of its proper size—only 32,000 answered the summons, whereas Israel could have sent 300,000 or more. This shows how demoralised the nation was. Yet they were too many; for "man's extremity is God's opportunity." The army was made up of three classes: (1) The Cowards, 22,000. Remember how their courage was tested—32,000 facing, at least, 135,000! But when all is said, they are cowards. Why? They do not believe God's promise. Why not? Perhaps an evil conscience told them of ill-desert, as though God's mercy was to be measured by our merit! There is no place for cowards in God's army. See Deut. xx. 8. God expects his people to be bold in faith, in word, in deed. (2) The self-indulgent—the 9700 who went down on their faces to drink. These were brave men, and they were not sent home, but only to their tents, where they remained as a sort of reserve force. They showed their character by the way they drank—a little thing! But straws show how the wind blows, and little things reveal character. They chose the slower method of drinking, as though in no hurry to meet the enemy. (3) The brave and single-hearted—the 300 who lapped—eagerness for the battle; they snatched their drink, perhaps as they marched, like dogs eager in the chase who drink as they run.

LESSONS.

(1) Be brave and hopeful even in the darkest times. (2) If we would be fully delivered, we must assume a God-honouring attitude. Victory must honour Him, rather than ourselves. (3) The value of true courage in God's service. "Only be thou strong, and very courageous." God wants brave men. "He that loveth his life shall lose it," &c. (4) Never mind being in a minority, if only you are in the right. (5) This story is a parable of the history of almost every good cause. The battle for righteousness has been won again and again by a little band of consecrated men against the whole world. Vide Pentecost and modern missions.

OUTLINES PREPARED BY HENRY THORNE.

Sunday Afternoon, December 2.

A GOOD WIFE.—PROV. xxxi. 10—31.

MARRIAGE was instituted before the Fall, and it is one of the blessings that have survived it. Christians are to marry only in the Lord (2 Cor. vi. 14). When Eleazar was sent to seek a wife for Isaac, he prayed for guidance (Gen. xxiv. 12), and it would be well if all believers, seeking for wives, would follow his example. Good men have often made a bad choice.

Our lesson contains words uttered by a mother to her son (ver. 1). Solomon's wisdom was not conspicuous in relation to the question of marriage. Let others guard against his mistakes by pondering seriously what were probably his mother's words. We may notice concerning the good wife, of this graphic portion of Scripture, that she is:—

(1) VIRTUOUS (ver. 10).—Virtue is a priceless jewel. It is a thing of the heart (Matt. v. 8), and it finds expression in the countenance and in the apparel (1 Tim. ii. 9).

(2) RELIABLE (ver. 11).—Mutual confidence is one of the most precious qualities of the conjugal relation.

(3) BENEFICENT (ver. 12).—Practical goodness is revealed here, and that goodness finds expression in beneficent acts; this is a Christlike quality (Acts x. 38).

(4) INDUSTRIOUS.—Ten of the twenty-one verses in our lesson speak of this. There is no rank of life in which idleness is becoming. The labour of the good wife is useful (ver. 13), profitable (ver. 14), self-denying (ver. 15), healthy (ver. 17), toilsome (ver. 19), tasty (ver. 22).

(5) DOMESTICATED.—Cares for the household (ver. 15). Home piety regards home duties. Religion in the house of God is worthless if it is not seen in our own house.

(6) GODLY.—She "feareth the Lord" (ver. 30). This is the highest of all her qualities and the root of them all. For such a woman there will be a blessing from her children and from her husband (ver. 28), and with good reason, for the husband is by her influence made a better citizen (ver. 23), and her children grow up with the consciousness of the beauty of her character.

MR. WILLIAM BENZIE, a blind evangelist, has been conducting Gospel services in the Congregational Church Hall, New Deer, N.B.

RESCUE WORK.—With the aid of many zealous Christian friends meetings of fallen women have been held at Bath, Plymouth, Falmouth, and Bristol, during the last few weeks by Mr. John H. L. Christien, organising superintendent of the Midnight Meeting Movement.

MISS JESSIE P. RHIND, of Shawlands, Glasgow, the first European missionary sent out under the auspices of the Soul-Winning and Prayer Union, sailed yesterday, the 29th inst., by the s.s. Nepaul, for China. Farewell meetings were held at 186, Aldersgate-street, at the Zenana Medical College, and at the Union Tabernacle, and a number of friends gathered on the vessel to commend Miss Rhind to God upon her departure. Miss Rhind has been provided by the Soul-Winning and Prayer Union with means for the support of three native Biblewomen, and asks prayer that the right selections may be made. Mr. J. C. Smith, the secretary of this Union, will be glad to receive the names of candidates for the foreign mission field. His address is Newport-on-Tay, N.B.

EVANGELISTIC MISSION.—The recent mission at Malden Hall, conducted by Mr. John Connor and Mr. Grove, has proved a time of much blessing. Perhaps the prominent feature of the mission has been the solemn earnestness manifested alike in the preachers, the workers, and the people. At the close of the address it was quite an unusual thing for more than a dozen people to leave; practically the whole congregation remained to the after-meeting, and we believe many received the Lord Jesus as Saviour. One special request in the prayers of the workers was that the relatives of believers might be saved, and this prayer God has signally honoured. A mission, extending over a fortnight, has also been held by Mr. H. Veasey at West Kensington Hall, Hammersmith-road, with encouraging results.

Appeals.

Enkel-street, Holloway, N.—We have started a "Young Boys' Christian Society," in order to obtain Christian influence over the poor boys in the lodging-houses of Finsbury-park and Holloway. Any help in funds, books, clothes, &c., will be thankfully received by T. C. ROBERTS-HORSFIELD, 11, Upper Tollington-road, Holloway, N.

Factory Helpers' Union.—The Hon. Sec. would be grateful for any cast-off clothes for the factory girls amongst whom she is working. The things most acceptable are dresses, jackets, boots, and shoes. The girls themselves buy the things at a low price, and are then taught to mend and alter them at the sewing classes. Parcels may be sent to the HON. SEC. Factory Helpers' Union (Clothing Department), 16a, Old Cavendish-street, London, W.

The Phœbe Home of Rest, Clacton-on-Sea.—This Home is open to receive patients paying reasonable charges. The surroundings are very desirable, and Christian workers of limited means would find a congenial atmosphere. So far there are no funds to the good, and free cases cannot be received. Further particulars may be obtained by addressing THE MATRON, 2, Merton Villas, Holland-road, Clacton-on-Sea. Some articles of utility and decoration are needed, and help in the funds is also solicited.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

There are 2608 public-houses and beer-shops in Manchester, or one for every twenty-nine families.

Dr. Russell, medical officer, Glasgow, has once more called attention to the terrible evils of over-crowding in the city.

Mr. Coad recently conducted very successful temperance missions in Mr. Councillor McDougall's Mission Halls, Manchester.

Alderman Barrow, Mayor of Birmingham, has announced that he is a total abstainer, and in any mayoral entertainments will act accordingly.

Hundreds of men in Swansea and neighbourhood are working at the furnaces of steel, copper, silver, and tin-plate works who are total abstainers.

In the Merchant Seamen Branch of the Church of England Temperance Society 8612 pledges were taken last year. This shows most commendable activity.

The Bishop of Manchester recently said that many working men by giving up the drink might at once double their resources for the comforts and necessaries of life.

Mr. George Rough, an ex-Provost of Dundee, died last week, aged 88 years. He was the first teetotal Provost in Scotland, and during his reign licences in Dundee were reduced from 620 to 306.

The Commander-in-Chief has ordered that at all the home stations of the Army, where practicable, the chaplains shall have at their service a room for temperance and social and other meetings for the soldiers.

An eight days' Gospel temperance mission has been conducted by the Liverpool Diocesan C.E.T.S. Meetings were held in about 60 parishes, addressed entirely by local speakers. The Women's Branch took a very active part.

Alderman Agar, Lord Mayor of York, during the seven years which have elapsed since he filled the office, has been even "more fully convinced of the righteousness and the advantage of having adopted teetotal principles."

Mr. George Blaiklock, of Hoxton Hall, has held successful temperance meetings in Boston, Lincolnshire, during the past week. Mr. Blaiklock has also visited Stourport, and his lectures have been eagerly listened to. There is always the true Gospel ring about Mr. Blaiklock's addresses.

Canon Wilberforce, preaching on Sunday morning, November 18, in St. Mary's Church, Southampton, spoke of drinking as that form of sin which has the most fatal power of over-shadowing the innocent happiness of human beings, and filling them with misery. Canon Barker, in the evening, dwelt upon the immense progress that has been made of late years in creating a healthy public opinion on temperance.

In a recent sermon, Rev. R. F. Horton said:—"I have seen some drunkards, but I never saw one that I thought hopeless. I have before my mind now a woman—and a drunken woman is ever harder to bring back than a drunken man—who had gone so far on the way that leads to hell that she had actually squandered in the course of a few weeks £200 in drink, and to-day she is rejoicing in Jesus Christ, saved and cured. I want just to leave this message with everyone, teacher or no teacher: Never give a drunkard up."

Jews in Russia.—During the last three months nearly 2500 foreign Jews have quitted Odessa, in obedience to the edict, published in the spring, ordering their expulsion. The greater part of these are poor artisans, while many are without any means of subsistence. They have emigrated to the United States and to England.—Le Réveil.

German Deaconesses.—The "Martha House" was opened in October at Stuttgart. It is a large building, containing rooms for medical mission work, for servants out of situations, for more than 100 young girls who, having finished their school-days, desire to be useful. There are twenty-two rooms at different prices where lonely women may find a home. These evangelical deaconesses are enlarging their sphere of work in Würthemberg, and thus helping to solve the Socialistic question in a spirit of Christian love.—Journal Réligieux.

RESCUE WORK IN INDIA.

THE EXISTING EVIL.

While recent events have stirred up many people in England to feel the need of rescue and purity work in India, very few have any accurate or adequate conception of the sort of effort needed, or the kind of difficulties to be encountered in undertaking such work in this country. I propose in this paper, therefore, to give an account of such facts and experiences as have come under my notice during the past twelve months, that may help to increase the interest of friends at home, and guide those whom God is calling to come over and help us.

The longer one remains in this country, the more intensely one feels this need, as well as the importance of keeping closely to a crusade on Gospel lines, and upholding a preaching of righteousness, that all, heathen and nominal Christian alike, may be lifted to a higher level. While the heathen have no conception of what purity of life is, Christianity has not much helped them yet, the light of the few saved ones being almost overclouded amid the mass of nominal Christianity, whose light is darkness, and by whose example the heathen are more swayed than by the teachings of the former. All classes alike are permeated with this miasma of impurity. Hindu worship is inextricably mixed with obscene practices. Their gods are revolting, their priests lascivious wretches, their temples abodes of infamy, and throngs of women dedicated to the service of sin are attached to them. Then, again, the priests are the only men admitted into a Hindu zenana. I have seen a priest performing "poojah" (worship) in a zenana where the women would be considered guilty of crime if they permitted their faces to be seen by any other man. The havoc that these priests work among ignorant women in the zenanas is unspeakable. It is an act of religion to yield to all their demands, and case after case is known where a wife has left her husband and her home to follow one of these priests about as a pilgrim.

The Hindu women who lead an evil life are mainly recruited by three classes. (1) Girls of one particular caste who are brought up as dancing girls from childhood. In one village in the hills all the girl children are reared for immoral purposes, wives for the boys being sought elsewhere. As the girls attain the age of six or seven they are consigned to the care of prostitutes in some of the neighbouring cities, by whom they are taught to dance and sing, and trained for their life of vice. Later, when this evil training is complete, they are sold for the harems of native princes, for temple service, or to licentious Europeans, just, of course, to the highest bidder. A missionary's wife once tried to purchase some of these unfortunate children, with the view of training them carefully in an orphanage, but her offer was simply scoffed at.

Some Christian officials of the district have tried to put this custom down, but it is so profitable that the people resort to every possible scheme to evade the law. Sir Henry Ramsey advocates new and special legislation in the following words:—

> When the children are removed to the Plains no one takes any interest in them, while the prostitutes find many friends and legal advisers, which renders it almost impossible for the Kumaon officials to prepare a case that will stand an appeal to a "revising" Judge of the High Court; and such cases ought, according to the penal code, to be taken up where the crimes occurred, i.e., in the Plains. The present system practically legalises children of Kumaon and Garhwal being brought up for prostitution in the Plains, where nothing is known of their history or their moral murderers. I believe there never was a case of "Patter" being punished in the Plains Courts for the crimes specified in sections 372, 373 of the Indian Penal Code, although some of these unfortunate children are hopelessly ruined every year. The object of the parents in sacrificing their daughters to a life of infamy is that they thus make money. If the female children are prevented from being apprenticed to harlots, they will not have the opportunity of acquiring the accomplishments which now make them so attractive; and their parents, finding it difficult to keep them in their villages till they are sixteen years of age, will adopt the system of marrying them. Everything that can be done to put a stop to this abominable trade has been attempted, but the Naites and Patters have baffled the Hill authorities by sending their female children, at the age of five or six years, to the Plains, and they never return to the Hills till they are hopelessly ruined.

With a view of making their profession still more attractive, the trainers of these children avail themselves of the advantages of Government education for the children—greatly to the detriment of the other pupils in the schools they patronise.

(2) Widows.—Under the joint family system, widows are cared for by their own or their husband's relations. As many of these are virgin widows whose husband's have died during their childhood's days, the cruelty of condemning them to a life of servitude is obvious. It is a fact that thousands of them lead lives of shame, some openly, others in perhaps greater numbers are kept for evil purposes by the men of the family. When one contemplates the fate of so many Indian widows, one feels tempted to ask if the abolition of Suttee was such a boon after all.

(3) Discarded wives.—As it is an article of faith among Hindus, that he only is blest, and assured of happiness in the next world who possesses a son, it is permissible to discard a childless wife and take another. If she has no relatives to shelter her, the discarded wife has no alternative but to accept the "protection" of some other man, or go into open vice. One who had chosen the former life as the lesser of two evils, after trying in vain to gain a living by grinding corn, assured me, through the zenana visitor who had kept track of her through many vicissitudes, that she was forced to live as she did to keep from starvation. The atrocious system of child-marriage is responsible for much of this evil. Numberless wives of tender years are physically ruined and child-bearing rendered impossible.

Amid the multiplicity of castes, it is true, there are many where families live as faithfully, one man with one wife, as is the case in nominally Christian countries; yet in other castes, various degrees of immorality are allowed.

In regard to personal purity of life, the Parsee Mohammedans are not one whit better than the Hindus. A very large proportion of publicly fallen women belong to the latter community.

In many respects the heathen are better than their creed, while the Christians are worse. An intelligent Hindu once remarked to a Christian, "Your religion is beautiful, but your people are vile." The natives look at our practice, not at our profession.

Instead of raising a strong standard of purity to counteract the impurities of heathenism, our Christian Government licensed and raised to a level of respectability the calling of the prostitute. In Bombay there are less than 500 adult native Christians in full standing, while, until the recent abolition of licensed sin, there were 500 women licensed by our so-called Christian Government to carry out the sin of impurity. Most of those who will read this are familiar with what has been lately written about the Government regulation of vice, so that I need only make a passing allusion to its deadening influence and bar to all true progress in the way of a national movement towards purity, transferring, as it does, the sin from the vice to the disease, calling good evil and evil good.

We hear of many Europeans, official and military, openly indulging in vice, employing their native servants as procurers, making themselves a scandal in the eyes of the natives by their private lives, and endorsing the impurities of heathenism by their public acts. A European official recently headed a procession of nude fakeers at one of the large religious fairs. Government officials lend their presence and sanction frequently to Nautch parties. On the occasion of a native wedding in a central city a few months ago, a Nautch was provided. It was the first, or preliminary, marriage of the infant son of a man of some position. Many of the highest European officials in the place were present. The walls of the principal apartment were adorned with European immoral photos. Thus, in addition to the vices of heathenism, we have the vices peculiar to civilisation in full force. Bradlaugh's immoral publications and Zola's novels are all here, thrust into notice on every side. From recent inquiries at a railway bookstall at an important junction station, it transpired that the largest sales were made from the shelf devoted to this literary filth. Young India is rapidly learning to read English; what will the future be if these are their studies? English Christians hear that the Hindus are forsaking their idols as education and enlightenment progress, and that they are drifting into scepticism instead. But English Christians do not realise that with the spread of infidelity there is also this active propaganda of its inseparable and insidious accompaniment of impurity—a tenfold worse phase of impurity than the immoral rites of their former paganism. An apt illustration of the condition of India in this respect is to be found in St. Matthew's Gospel xii. 43—45.

Rescue work, as we understand it at home, is yet in its infancy in this country. Excellent beginnings have been made, but what has been done is but as a drop in the ocean. The larger proportion of candidates for the existing Homes are chiefly from the Eurasian class. Like the poor whites of the Southern States of America, the condition of many of these people is very gloomy. Brought up with European tastes and habits, they are at an utter disadvantage in the competition for work with the educated natives who can live comfortably on what the others would starve on. A missionary's wife in the North-Western Provinces told me how, in visiting amongst the poor of this class, cases of immoral living were continually coming to light, cases of children trained to vice, and of all the other evils which make a Criminal Law Amendment Act as needful in India as in England. She also told me of one poor woman who, deserted by her husband, although in a position to earn her own living and honestly trying to keep respectable, was constantly subject to persecution from men of all classes to induce her to lead an immoral life. Other workers who know this class tell stories of the same character, as to what shifts some of these poor women are brought in order to live, and how the tempter is ever near in the shape of some well-to-do man who wants a "mistress."

At all the large stations where British troops are kept there is a large population of this poorest class of the mixed races, as well as a percentage of European Army "leavings." The work among these alone would be sufficient to employ the energies of many workers.

Next week I shall show how these evils may be remedied. Helen S. Dyer.

Bombay.

THE SYSTEM OF SIN-LICENSING is creeping into Canada. A health bill has been quietly slipped through the Parliament at Ottawa, with a clause which authorises the establishment of state harlotry. The party of impurity in the Dominion have achieved their design by a trick, just as the wicked Acts were passed in the dark at Westminster.

EVADING THE LAW.—So far as we can make out, it is evident that the military authorities in India are resolved to maintain the system of licensed sin, while pretending to obey the instructions from home consequent on the action taken by the Imperial Legislature. At Darjeeling and elsewhere the Cantonment Acts continue in full swing, though it was asserted by Lord Cross months ago that the whole of the regulations under these Acts were "absolutely suspended and non-existent." This seems to be an absolute falsehood, though we presume Lord Cross believes it to be true. The officials in India, in such a case as this, appear to do pretty much as they like; and they are not overburdened by scruples.—Christian Leader.

The Agapemone Iniquity.

We have received a letter from Christiania, Norway, in which the writer says :—

> In your esteemed magazine I see something about a kind of religious people known as the Agapemone or Princeites. Some teachers of these erroneous doctrines, have also come to our country a short time ago. There is a Mr. Ker and Mr. Fox, who travel about, and not a few have been beguiled with their enticing words about redemption of their bodies from which Satan is cast out by faith in their Testimony! The same results have followed here as there. Alienations between Christian friends and family discords have arisen.
> I write this to ask if you could send me information of what you call immorality. They say that all this is slander, because of their Testimony for the truth. If you could favour me with some information in this respect, it might help to reclaim those that are giving themselves over to his delusion.
> Hoping you will excuse my liberty in writing you, the reason of which is a knowledge of the sad results here, and the rather wide spreading of it in a short time. I trust to receive an answer.

As we have been challenged more than once as to the revolting immorality which we have charged upon this evil delusion, we will, however shocking it may be, let it speak for itself :—In 1856—7 a series of pamphlets was published entitled, "The Little Book Open. The Testimony of Br. Prince concerning what Jesus Christ has done by his Spirit to redeem the Earth. In Voices from Heaven." We have not been able to obtain "Voice the First." "Voice the Second" was published by Messrs. Houlston & Stoneman; but "Voices Third, Fourth, and Fifth" bear no publishers' names; they were issued from the Agapemone.

The first page of each of the "Voices" is occupied with the following imitation of, and addition to, Scripture :—

THE TESTIMONY.—The Son of Man so loved the earth that He gave his own Spirit, that whosoever believeth in Him should not die, but be alive, and abide the coming of the Lord. Behold He cometh!

We now quote from these "Voices." The italics are their own.

> Voice the Second, p. 26.—This opening of what the Holy Ghost came to be and to do in God's people, will serve to make quite clear what is meant by his fulfilling the gospel in Br. Prince. It means that all He came to be and to do in the gospel, He was and did fully in Br. Prince; so that he left not anything undone of all that was in Him, as the Spirit of the dispensation, to perform. Briefly, He took him entirely out of self, entirely into Christ. In other words, He raised him up out of self, as wholly dead in the first Adam, and united him to God his life in the second Adam; or, He emptied him entirely of self, and filled him with all the fulness of God in Christ Jesus.
> Voice the Third, p. 8.—As He who fulfilled the law did also introduce the gospel, viz., Jesus Christ; even so, He who fulfilled the gospel has introduced the judgment, that is, the Holy Ghost in Br. Prince.
> P. 10.—He declared absolutely—did the Holy Ghost in Br. Prince—that the gospel as a dispensation was ended, and that Jesus Christ did come, not in grace, but in Judgment...This was that Servant of the Lord, the angel or messenger—angel means messenger—whom He did send, and who came in the spirit and power of Elias to prepare the way before Him.
> Pp. 16, 17.—The door being shut, the sun of the gospel dispensation having set, those that had rejected his message were left by God in outer darkness—the darkness of the shadow of death, wherein they now sit.
> It was not so with those He had taken, and whom He kept absolutely in his hand for the fulfilment of his counsel. He watched over them with a jealous eye, and led them in a narrow way. He separated them more and more from the world around them, and drew them more and more to Him, until at length He chose one place wherein to put his name, and there He met with them—that place was the Agapemoné—the Abode of Love.
> Voice the Fourth, p. 22.—Jesus Christ began his work of creating a new earth in the very place where began the fall of the old earth; that is, in the human consciousness. The fall of the old earth did not begin in the ground, or in the trees, or in the cattle—though all these were earth—but in Adam's flesh; that is, in Eve. Eve was conscious earth—earth alive—that is, flesh.
> P. 23.—As the fall of the old earth began in the human consciousness in Adam's flesh—in Eve, the woman; so also has Jesus Christ, by his Spirit, begun the restoration of the earth by a new creation in the human consciousness, in flesh, in a woman.
> P. 24.—Now the body by which the Holy Ghost did carry out this counsel of the Lord concerning earth was Br. Prince as a spiritual body (that Br. Prince whom He had raised from the dead, as has been before mentioned), not Br. Prince as a natural body, because the living soul of Br. Prince was not the life of it; that having been entirely taken into Christ by the complete fulfilment of the gospel in him: but Br. Prince as a spiritual body, because the Holy Ghost was the life of it.
> P. 25.—These two things, then, were needful as preparatory steps to the creation of a new earth; and accordingly, these two things the Holy Ghost accomplished. How He accomplished them has been declared in the two preceding Voices. In them it was shown how he created a new heaven—by fulfilling the gospel in Br. Prince, and raising him up a spiritual body; and how He dissolved the old heaven—by superseding the gospel as a dispensation, and introducing the judgment. Therein it was shown also, how He at the same time called out a people from the professing Church and the world through the Testimony of Jesus, Behold He cometh, and afterwards gathered them together in one place—The Agapemoné.
> P. 26.—Having taken these two preparatory steps; and having a people who had known and acknowledged Him in this work of superseding the gospel, that is of laying aside the spiritual dispensation: Jesus Christ did now, by his Spirit, proceed to create a new earth.
> Pp. 27, 28.—He assembled the peculiar people whom God had called out from the Church and world, and gathered into one place—the Agapemoné—and whom He had prepared for this very thing...He reminded them of what God had done—that He had perfected his work in spirit, and had laid aside the gospel as a dispensation; he then proceeded to declare that it was now God's purpose to extend his love from heaven to earth, from spirit to flesh, from soul to body. He told them that they were flesh, and that God so regarded them; and that having completed his work with the Spirit, and laid aside the Gospel, it was his intention henceforth to make Himself known to flesh.

What follows is incomparably the most wicked, the most blasphemous, piece of writing we have ever read. With the most Satanic subtlety it pourtrays a breach of the seventh commandment, and attributes it to the Holy Ghost in Br. Prince as a spiritual body. If Zola's writings are "earthly, sensual," this is "devilish" (James iii. 15).

> P. 32.—Thus the Holy Ghost took flesh and made it one with Him; and so made it new flesh. He created it a new consciousness.
> Thus the third thing that the Christ did to redeem the earth was, having created a new heaven and dissolved the old, to create a new earth; for the Son of Man so loved the earth, that He gave his own Spirit, that whosoever believeth in Him should not die, but be alive, and abide the coming of the Lord. Behold He cometh.
> Voice the Fifth, p. 5.—The fourth thing that Jesus Christ did by his Spirit to redeem the earth was, having created a new earth, to dissolve the old. As He created the new heaven and dissolved the old, and created the new earth, according to promise, so also did He dissolve the old earth according to promise.
> P. 6.—The reader may be reminded of what the very thing was that He did in creating a new earth, namely, creating flesh a new consciousness. The thing then that Jesus Christ did by his Spirit, and which is expressed by the words "dissolved the old earth," is this:—He has destroyed the old consciousness of flesh.

Let us now look back and see what The Testimony amounts to.

First—Br. Prince is declared to have died and risen again, and so to have become not a natural body but a spiritual body. Thus the Holy Ghost created a new heaven.

Second—He dissolved the old heaven, by superseding the gospel as a dispensation, and introducing the judgment. These two were needful, "not only in order that the gospel as a dispensation might be laid aside, but that the Holy Ghost might have a spiritual body through which to fulfil His purpose."

Third—Having gathered into the Agapemoné those who had received The Testimony, He proceeded to create a new earth: that is, to create flesh a new consciousness.

Fourth—He dissolved the old earth, that is, He destroyed the old consciousness of flesh.

In other words, having obtained a spiritual body, Br. Prince gets rid of the gospel—which forbids not only the sinful act but the sinful look. Then he commits sin in his spiritual (?) body, and pretends that the flesh thus becomes a new consciousness. Then he gets rid of the old consciousness. For consciousness read conscience, and we are not surprised to find that a new conscience was necessary in order to relief from the old one.

It may be said that Messrs. Ker and Fox and the rest who are spreading this Testimony, are not immoral persons. We do not say they are; but we say that the core and essence of The Testimony is adultery. It seems impossible to read these "Voices" without coming to the conclusion that the Testimony was invented in order to excuse the abomination described in Voice the Fourth, and to whitewash the sinner who took a young and innocent girl, without her consent, in the presence of the assembled congregation, and made her his mistress.

A friend with whom we read the Fourth Voice, and who had some years ago been intimate with the foremost present teacher of this delusion, as we read such passages as, "Conscious earth, that is flesh," &c., said, again and again, "That's exactly what —— says." Is it possible that The Testimony will fail to produce in its present teachers or disciples what it produced in its first propounder?

It has been a practice to take parties of young people and others for a few days' visit to the Agapemoné. Some months ago a working man, who had been converted, was taken there. On the way he was told that in this sanctified life there was not found the same necessity of abstinence that he had been accustomed to, and he would probably find wine on the table. Having been saved from drink, he felt he would be on dangerous ground, and thought he ought to get out at the next station and return home. However, he went on, and got through dinner without tasting the wine. But he said that the familiarities which he described as taking place in the grounds, and in the sumptuous room where they worship, might be safe for others, but would not be safe for him.

The career of the so-called Army of the Lord at Brighton, which has been a coarser version of the Agapemoné, is another indication of what may be expected as the outcome of The Testimony of these deceived deceivers.

Dr. Ziemann in Germany.

The German papers contain some interesting reports of Dr. Ziemann's labours in Schleswig-Holstein. He had been invited to attend the Conferences of the Church Congress in Neuminster, October 3 to 5. Accompanied by Pastor Braune, the secretary of the Evangelisation Society, he afterwards visited Flensburg, Glückstadt, Preetz, Schleswig, and Serup. Says one writer :—"To the Congress the Doctor came as an old friend, and a very hearty welcome was accorded to him. He delivered a very powerful address on our present wants and difficulties. He gave a dreadful picture of the abounding forces working iniquity, and contended that all work against them must be Christian work, while he related many remarkable Gospel triumphs from his own experience in the work in Germany. The audience was deeply impressed. In the provinces he had very crowded meetings, and it is chiefly owing to his energy that different local associations have been started for vigilance and rescue work in connection with the Evangelisation Society. The Doctor won even the most cautious people. His language is simple and direct, and he has the power of arresting attention and holding his audience spell-bound from the first word to the last. We thank God for him and for the results which have attended his work."

PASTOR CHINIQUY writes to a friend that he has recently been on a lecturing campaign in New England; that many Romanists have relinquished their errors, and accepted the pure Gospel of justification by faith.

SEVERAL NEW YORK GENTLEMEN, believing that they could wisely help the poor who lived in the more degraded regions of the city by providing better apartments at the usual rents, formed themselves into a tenement house building company. Last December the first buildings were finished, and all the apartments, containing from one to five rooms, each with a window on the open air, were rented at sums varying from 6.50 dollars to 14 dollars a month, according to size. The rules in regard to cleanliness, behaviour, and the payment of rent are very strict. Connected with the tenements are a kindergarten and a young people's club. It is hoped that the success of this experiment will incite other capitalists to erect similar buildings in New York and elsewhere.

SICK RELIEF IN NECESSITOUS CASES.
SOUP DISTRIBUTION TWICE IN THE WEEK.
CHRISTMAS DINNERS TO THE DESERVING.

Great care is exercised in Distribution, and a little timely help has enabled many poor families to enjoy at the hallowed season a little more than the bare necessaries of existence.

This additional expenditure is only to be sustained by the co-operation of those whom the Lord has blessed in basket and in store.

It will surely add to the pleasures of many to whom the season is one of joyful reunion and loving intercourse, to feel that in some measure they have striven to kindle a fire on some humble hearth, otherwise cold and cheerless, and helped some desponding brother to realise the Fatherhood of God, and the Brotherhood of humanity.

Subscriptions will be gratefully received by the above Officers of the Mission.

NOTICE TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN"
Who may be personally or relatively
INTERESTED in THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this Journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

CASE of Mr. BERNARD IBBOTSON, WALLINGWELLS, WORKSOP.

This patient applied to me on the 27th Jan. last. His illness had commenced with a violent cold. "My chest (he says) was very sore. I felt dreadfully weak; expectoration was streaked with blood. I had severe sweats in the night, after which I felt exceedingly cold. My heart palpitated very much at times. I have had a violent pain below the left breast. I lost four pounds' weight in one week."

This patient gradually recovered by use of my medicines and advice.

On 24th August last, he writes: "I must thank you for the great benefit I have received from your treatment. I am a stone heavier than when first I wrote to you. I shall always consider that I owe my life to you. I have mentioned it to many, and shall be glad to answer any enquiries. You can make what use you please of this."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The living of Spitalfields vacated by Bishop Billing has been accepted by Rev. J. H. Scott, rector of Melcombe Regis, Weymouth.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Alexander MacLeod, D.D., of Claughton, Birkenhead, has been selected for the Moderatorship of the next English Presbyterian Synod.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Since Rev. Colmer B. Symes settled at Leytonstone his ministry there has been greatly appreciated; large crowds have flocked to hear him, and the church has been so crowded that the sitting accommodation has had to be considerably increased.

A mission house has been erected at the angle of Commercial-road and Flanders-street, Liverpool, by Crosby Church, of which Rev. T. H. Darlow is pastor. About forty ladies and gentlemen will assist an experienced missioner in the works carried on there.—Another Lancashire church—that at Liscard, near Birkenhead—has built a new mission house which has become the centre of much earnest and useful work.

METHODIST.

The proposal to hold a triennial General Methodist Church Congress is being very warmly supported, mainly on the ground that it will bring the various offshoots of Methodism and the parent body into closer union.

The entire £3000 aimed at has been received by Rev. Hugh Price Hughes. The next step, it is expected, will be an effort to secure a permanent building for the West London Mission, similar to the Mildmay Conference Hall.

An important Wesleyan Connexional Committee has been meeting in the Centenary Hall, London. It was reported that revived interest in foreign missions is general throughout the country; also that the proposal to raise £10,000 by Christmas family offerings is being taken up with great heartiness. Rev. J. E. Clapham reported a revived interest in home missions, as witnessed by the large and enthusiastic conventions held in the great centres of population.

BAPTIST.

The Council of the Baptist Union and the Committee of the London Baptist Association have arranged to hold a special ten-days' mission in the churches throughout the Metropolis during the first and second weeks in February. The churches are requested to pray for the Divine blessing upon this special effort.

The church at Frogmore-street, Abergavenny, Mon., is enjoying a "time of refreshing." A week of earnest waiting upon God was followed by some special services which resulted in the decision of several young people for whom teachers and others had long laboured and prayed. In other branches of the church's work there are cheering tokens of good, which have filled the hearts of faithful workers with thankfulness and joy.

In connection with the Baptist Total Abstinence Association a series of local meetings have been arranged for the winter months, to which the pastors, deacons, Sunday-school superintendents, and workers of the London Baptist churches are specially invited for the purpose of taking counsel together as to the best way of stimulating the interest of the churches in temperance work. The first meeting of the series was held on Thursday, November 15, at Regent's-park Chapel, Rev. F. B. Meyer presiding. A number of useful suggestions were made, some of which will, doubtless, be profitably acted upon in future work. The next meeting of the series will be held on Tuesday next, at Borough-road Chapel, S.E.

SALVATION ARMY.

Staff Capt. and Mrs. Otway have completed 2000 miles on a tandem tricycle, evangelising amongst the villages of the Eastern Counties.

A Swiss, writing to the Gazette de Lausanne, in reference to the treatment the Salvationists are receiving, says: "It is forced upon me that our people lack intelligence, tolerance—that they are brutal, coarse, and violent in their disapprobation and actions."

The first anniversary of the junior soldiers' work will be held at Exeter Hall Monday, December 10, on the eve of the great Convention, or "Two Days with God." Some startling facts about children are being collected, and a tremendous demonstration is expected.

There is no law to prevent the circulation of atheistical and indecent literature, &c., amongst the children of Switzerland; the strict embargo is upon making them Christians, for which Captain Stirling is still in Chillon Castle. The announcement of her release by the telegram of The Daily News was premature.

When in Queensland (writes a friend) we had service held at the station I was staying at by three Army men; they were uneducated, but very zealous in the cause of salvation. Their weekly occupation was killing kangaroos for the skins, which have become very valuable. On Sundays they held services in the settlers' houses, or in the school-houses of the district, and report says they have persuaded many careless ones to come to Christ. I believe them to be a power used by God to reach those whom the regular clergy never touch. There are clergymen who visit the settlers regularly, but their congregations are not half so numerous as those of the Army.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

Tuesday week was observed in Belfast by the Presbyterian ministers as a day of special prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on themselves and on their congregations.

The annual meeting of the Belfast branch of the Evangelical Alliance has been held. The report stated that there are now 700 members of the Alliance in Ireland, and of these 106 are in Belfast.

The manner in which the Roman Catholic Church teaches the people morals will be seen from the fact that at a bazaar held last week in the Ulster Hall, Belfast, under the sanction of the Bishop, for paying the debts of Roman Catholic churches in Belfast, whisky, brandy, gin, port, sherry, and claret were offered to the public.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

The recently formed Y.M.C.A., Strathaven, continues to draw a goodly number of young men.

Saturday Gospel temperance meetings have been started in the Temperance Hall, Cumbernauld, with great success.

By a bequest of the late Mr. Kedslie, of Edinburgh, a missionary has been appointed for the Inveraray and Minard district of Lochfyneside.

Rev. Dr. Paton J. Gloag, of Galashiels, has been chosen Moderator of the next Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and Rev. John Laird, of Cupar, Fife, is to occupy the same position of honour in the Free Church.

Rev. Robert H. Logan, of Renton, who was originally a merchant in Glasgow, but who abandoned commerce for the pulpit, has been elected to the pastorate of Chalmers Free Church, Dundee, vacant by the sad death of Rev. Robert Milligan, who was drowned in the summer at Montrose.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. Joseph Jordan, vicar of Holy Trinity, Woolwich.—Rev. Thomas Truscott, a devoted missionary of the United Methodist Free Churches at Sierra Leone, West Africa.—Rev. Robert Black, of the Free Church, Kilsyth, N.B.—Rev. R. Cheeseman, of Scarborough, an eminent minister of the Primitive Methodist Connexion.—Rev. W. J. Hall, for several years pastor of the Congregational Chapel, Greenhill-street, Greenheys, Manchester.—Mr. John Seaman, of Bath, known for many years in the districts around Bath as an earnest lay evangelist.

Will all who are preparing gifts for the ANNUAL SALE on behalf of these Homes

Well-made woollen shawls are frequently asked for, and, indeed, women's garments of all kinds would be especially useful. Of course, besides these, jewellery, old coins, old china, curios, musical instruments, and fancy work, trinkets, articles of vertu, books, drawings, bric-a-brac, and other examples of the thousand-and-one tasteful ornaments which are sought for by purchasers, will be very gratefully received and acknowledged. Valuable help would be afforded if donors of gifts of old china, foreign goods, articles of vertu, &c., would kindly mark on them their value, or indicate the price which is likely to be obtained.

The SALE will this year be of the SAME CHARACTER as for the LAST FEW YEARS; that is to say, Instead of holding a Public Bazaar at the West End of London during the month of December, as formerly, all the Goods received will be made up into

£5 and £10 Boxes. These Boxes will each contain a very excellent selection, of at least the value of £6 and £12 respectively, and will be sent to any part of the country on receipt of P.O. Order or Cheque made payable to Mr. J. T. Page.

Ladies willing to order these Boxes confer a great benefit on the "Homes"; for by this easy method all the articles received may be disposed of without any loss in the way of such expenses as are usually incurred by holding a Bazaar at the West End.

Many kind-hearted sympathisers have repeatedly expressed warm approval of this plan, and have promised to purchase Boxes, with the contents of which they propose to hold in their own houses, to which their personal friends can be invited during the winter season.

If there be many articles left over unsold, they can be disposed of in the last week of January (D.V.), in the Large Hall of the "Edinburgh Castle," Limehouse, London, E.

Dr. Barnardo earnestly invites all who love poor children to co-operate with him in this effective plan to increase the funds of the "Homes," by which, too, all the wearying, disappointing, and expensive drawbacks of a public Bazaar may be avoided.

The Boxes, carefully lined and packed ready for transmission, can be despatched on receipt of remittance to any railway station in the Kingdom. Applications (Prepaid), with full instructions as to conveyance, &c., should be sent in as soon as possible, addressed to

THE TRADE MANAGER,
18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

To all who have already in any degree helped by Contributions of Useful or Fancy Articles, Dr. Barnardo desires to offer the expression of his very grateful acknowledgments and hearty thanks.

18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

REV. JAMES A. SPURGEON,

Baptist Church, Croydon.

WHEN, by the special endowment or achievements of one of its members, a family becomes famous, the rest must expect to be designated by terms which express their relationship; they must also accept the position assigned them by comparison with their rightly honoured kinsman. Whatever may be their personal excellences, they must suffer some disparagement, as they will of necessity be referred to an arbitrary standard of an exceptional character.

This is very marked in the case of the Spurgeon family. Mr. C. H. Spurgeon is, by universal consent, sui generis; and all who bear his name are, beyond their own immediate sphere, designated by the relationship in which they stand to him. Thus Rev. John Spurgeon is described as "Mr. Spurgeon's father," Rev. J. A. Spurgeon as "Mr. Spurgeon's brother," and Revs. Charles and Thomas Spurgeon as "Mr. Spurgeon's sons." This is inevitable, perhaps, but it is not strictly just towards those who have other claims than the accident of birth to regard or notice. All the members of his family rejoice in the position and influence of the pastor of the Tabernacle, and unite to bless the Lord for his remarkable character and life work; so the peculiar disadvantage personal to themselves excites no feeling of envy or regret.

That MR. JAMES SPURGEON is a man of no ordinary ability and attainments is attested on all hands, and, had he pursued an independent course, he would without doubt have been more easily appraised at his true worth. Being led, however, into association with his brother as co-pastor, he has had to suffer from the comparison incidental to their close companionship as well as from their family connection. A stranger with another name holding the same position would not have been placed at so great a disadvantage, but then a stranger could not have rendered the same service as a brother. Their confidence is mutual, and their affection reciprocal; and if the qualities of the two men differ in any respect or degree, the differences are not divisive but complementary. Mr. C. H. Spurgeon may originate and direct, but in the administration of detail he needs a second, and in this capacity his brother has, with commendable self-abnegation, displayed qualities of the highest order.

(From Photograph by Messrs. Elliott & Fry.)

When it is borne in mind that the church at the Tabernacle numbers nearly six thousand baptized members; that the Pastors' College has about seventy young men in training for the ministry; that the Stockwell Orphanage shelters nearly five hundred fatherless children; that the Colportage Association maintains an average of eighty colporteurs, who carry the Word of God and pure literature to all parts of the kingdom; and that the usual agencies of a live Christian church are in full operation, it will be seen that the senior pastor must depend very largely upon his chief lieutenant for their administration and control. For this work, especially as to all matters of finance, Mr. James Spurgeon has a remarkable aptitude.

The outer world may know but little of the work and the anxiety incidental to the direction of such a gigantic institution as that of the church at the Tabernacle and its affiliated societies, but a moment's reflection will suffice to show that only unwearied devotion and rare administrative ability could keep the machinery in full working order. We are not surprised that Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, who knows his worth, has thanked God again and again in public for giving him a brother, and that his brother is all that he is to him in the work which he holds so dear.

Absorbed as James must have been by his avocations, it was impossible for preaching to monopolise his powers; still his sermons betray diligent study and varied attainment, and compare very favourably with those of many men devoted exclusively to the ministry of the word. Preaching without MS. or pulpit notes, his style is fluent and his language felicitous, abounding with choice and original metaphors and similes. He has the making of an orator, though he does not seem to have cultivated oratory as an art. There is no wisdom in comparing the sermons of the two brothers. Sermons, like the distinctive styles of architecture, follow a law of their own, and they should not be required to conform to any one standard, excepting in this, that they really expound the theme in hand, and contain a clearly defined statement of the Gospel. Mr. James Spurgeon is intensely evangelical in his preaching, and he is always in earnest when enforcing the claims of the Gospel or in descanting upon its wondrous provision. On one occasion he was accosted by an Irishman who was in doubt as to which of the pastors he had been listening to, and he addressed to him the question, "Sure, and are you your brother?" The question may excite a smile, but it was an unwitting tribute to the excellence of the discourse.

The senior pastor of course occupies the pulpit at the Tabernacle whenever he is able to do so, and, his services not being required on the Lord's Day excepting at the evening communion once a month, Mr. James Spurgeon was free to minister to other churches or to concentrate his efforts upon one centre. This latter he deemed to be the wiser course to pursue, and in 1869 his attention was directed to Croydon. The small iron chapel in which he began to minister soon proved too small, and the services were transferred to the Public Hall pending the erection of a more commodious building. The congregations increased, souls were saved, and a church of baptized believers formed. It was soon found, however, that the new building was inadequate, and in 1873 the present chapel, erected at a cost of £8000, was opened. Six years later additional class-rooms were designed to complete the block at a cost of £1500. The whole of the money has been cheerfully subscribed, and there is no debt remaining. At the present time there are 436 members on the revised church roll, and the chapel, which holds nearly nine hundred persons, is well filled on the Lord's Day by attentive congregations.

The West Croydon Baptist Church embraces an unusual number of busy workers, who have covered the district with a network of Christian agencies. In the Sunday-schools there are about 1400 scholars and a staff of 80 teachers. Several mission stations, one building erected by the church, are maintained, and workers are also supplied for other centres. Bible-classes for young men and young women are held every Lord's Day, and each class sustains a week-night prayer-meeting. The young women meet once a month to work for the Stockwell Orphanage, and, under the direction of Mrs. Spurgeon, a bazaar is held annually, the proceeds being sent to the Orphanage, in addition to the garments which are supplied to the children from time to time. In connection with the schools there are a Young Christians' Band and a Band of Hope, and the members of the church sustain the usual benevolent societies.

In the conduct of the work at Croydon Mrs. James Spurgeon is a true helpmeet, and devotes herself with commendable tact and zeal to every department in which a pastor's wife is expected to second the labours of her husband. They have two children, the elder a boy, and should he be called to the ministry he will be enriched by the heritage of the prayers of a family of preachers, and thousands will fervently pray that he may be as distinguished for usefulness as by the honoured name he bears.

SOUL-WINNING AND PRAYER UNION.—Text for Dec. 10 (Ps. cxix. 49):—"Remember the word unto thy servant, upon which Thou hast caused me to hope."

CEYLON.—We are desired, both by Rev. W. Haslam and Rev. Hubert Brooke, to contradict the statement made on the authority of The Ceylon Observer, that they about to make an evangelistic visit to that island.

Apocalyptic Interpretation.

II.

The chief point at issue between the Historical and the Futurist Schools of Prophetic interpretation, so far at least as concerns the Apocalypse, is as to the time contemplated in the visions of that book. Whether, in fact, they refer to the present or future dispensation; whether they relate to events spread more or less over the whole period between the first and second coming of Christ, or whether the events symbolised do not begin until the Church has been caught up to meet the Lord in the air.

It is manifest that this point is one of the utmost importance in interpreting the Apocalypse, and every ray of light which can be obtained from the book itself upon this subject is to be most eagerly sought for. The most distinct note of time that we get in the first chapter, and which is admitted to be such by writers of all schools, is our Lord's threefold division of that which John was told to write: (1) "The things which thou hast seen," i.e., the appearance of the Lord Himself (ch. i.): (2) "The things which are," i.e., the state of the churches described (ii., iii.); and (3) "The things which shall be hereafter" (iv.—xxii.).

The solution of this whole problem as to time hinges on the period we assign to the third of these divisions, and that again on the extent of time covered by the second, "the things that are."

The Epistles to the Seven Churches in Asia have a primary and literal application to seven churches then and there existing. Seven seem to have been chosen as representative churches, in order to set forth different phases of church life existing at that period. They also, doubtless, have a secondary and mystical meaning; shadowing forth seven successive ages of church history, or seven stages of the Church's progress upon earth. But this secondary and mystical meaning must not be allowed to supplant the primary one; and hence the natural interpretation of "the things that are" would limit it to the then existing time, for that alone could be truly spoken of in the Apostle John's day as "the things which are."

It is by no means fair, therefore, to explain the second division, "the things that are," exclusively in a mystical manner, as spread over the whole dispensation, and as thrusting forward the third division to the future dispensation. The simpler and more natural interpretation would allow the third division to begin after the actual state of things on earth in St. John's days, as set forth in the Epistles to the then existing Churches. The Futurist view in this respect does violence to the plain literal meaning of "the things which are," as uttered in the Apostle's days. To suppose that our Lord in speaking in the first century of "the things which are" meant by that phrase to cover events in the nineteenth century is strange indeed. Some words of Edward Irving, that great pioneer in prophetic investigation, may well be quoted in reference to the importance of maintaining in its place the primary application of the Epistles to the Seven Churches.

"These," he says, "were, I have no doubt, seven actual churches, as Babylon, and Egypt, and Jerusalem, were actual places, and that their encouragements, admonitions, threatenings, and promises were both needed by them and carried to them by the messenger to whom they were entrusted. And as I perceive, moreover, that the threatenings contained in them have all an allusion to the pagan persecutions which were about to come upon them, I am very much disposed to confine these Epistles to that specific object. But if anyone, considering the broad characteristic differences which there is amongst them, and the promises all applicable to the coming of the Lord, and the mystical import of the number seven, be disposed to regard them as including in some larger sense the successive states of the whole Christian Church up to the coming of the Lord, I am not careful to controvert that position, so that it be granted to me that this part of the book which is called 'the things that are' had a real and literal application to those seven churches to which it is by name addressed."

Those who maintain a double fulfilment would probably here insist on the primary meaning of "the things that are" being limited to St. John's own time, while allowing for a secondary extension of the time indicated in accord with the mystical meaning of the Epistles. This double view of fulfilment has its difficulties, but it at least avoids this serious objection to the exclusively Futurist view, that it does violence to the plain language in which our Lord announces the threefold division of the contents of the book.

The next note of time is a very important one, but the consideration of it must be reserved for another paper. H. E. B.

A MARKET MISSION.—During the past four years Mr. Henry Till has been engaged in an endeavour to reach market dealers throughout England. Lately he has been labouring in London, going from one market to another daily, distributing books and seeking opportunities for preaching the Gospel. His efforts have been greatly blessed, many drunkards having been reclaimed. Mr. Till's present address is 58, Chalfont's-road, St. James's-road, Holloway, N.

THE CHILI MISSION is under the care of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, U.S.A. It carries on an important school of eighty pupils in Santiago, a city of 250,000 inhabitants, under the management of Rev. S. J. and Madame Christen (known to many friends in England as Mdlle. Sophie Kilpfer). In this Institution special pains are taken to give instruction in Bible truth, and there are public services every Sunday. Just now there is urgent need for a suitable building in which to carry on this promising school. If any of our readers incline to help in establishing what it is hoped will prove a Christian College for Chili, communications may be addressed to Miss D. Wright, Forest Villa, Mansfield.

The Position in East Africa.

WHY are we helping Germany to blockade the coast of East Africa? Ostensibly in order to check the slave trade. We do not doubt the sincerity of our Government in the matter; but what is Prince Bismarck's design? Why is this particular moment chosen for two European fleets to assemble for the purpose of stopping a few Arab dhows with their slave cargoes?

The story is not a pleasant one. First, the dominant influence of England at Zanzibar was thrown away, and Germany was allowed to assume exclusive rights of protectorate and "influence" over immense territories on the mainland. A German company thereupon sent its agents to settle at various points and open up trade; but so wanton and overbearing was the conduct of these "pioneers of civilisation" with the natives that, despite the humane efforts of the missionaries at some places (particularly Dr. Pruen, of the C.M.S., at Mpwapwa) to prevent fighting and bloodshed, the whole country rose against the aggressors, and simply turned them out. Now, what the blockade is really to do is to punish the natives and frighten them into admitting the German traders again; and the best English authorities on the coast, travellers and missionaries, fear that our joining in it will identify us with the Germans, and bring trouble upon us for their faults. Hitherto the natives have distinguished the one from the other, and carefully limited their hostility to the Germans. If the joint action of the fleets should lead them, as it well may, to drop the distinction, very real peril will accrue to the English missions in the interior.

The missions affected may be thus described. The traveller landing on the mainland from Zanzibar, with a view to going due west along the road to Lake Tanganyika or the Victoria Nyanza, finds no mission at once as he disembarks, except a French Roman Catholic one; but on his right hand, northward, stretches the hilly country of Usambara, in which the (High Church) Universities' Mission, under Bishop Smythies, has some important and successful work; while far away on his left, southward, is the country towards Lake Nyassa, in which the same Mission has stations. Proceeding westwards into the interior, he comes, after a march of 180 miles, to Mamboia, a C.M.S. station, now occupied by Rev. A. N. Wood and Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe. Sixty miles further, at Mpwapwa, he finds Rev. J. C. Price, and Rev. H. Cole and Mrs. Cole, also of the C.M.S. Dr. and Mrs. Pruen, who were there, have lately come down to Zanzibar. Nearly three hundred miles further is Uyui, a C.M.S. station at present unoccupied. More than a hundred miles north of this are two more stations of the same Society, at the south end of the Victoria Nyanza. At one, Usambiro, the scene of Bishop Parker's death, is Mr. Mackay, alone; at the other, Nassa, are Mr. Douglas Hooper, and Mr. Deekes. Then northward again, two hundred miles, across the Great Lake, is Uganda, where are Revs. E. C. Gordon and R. H. Walker. All these missions and missionaries are seriously imperilled by the present action of England in joining the German blockade.

Returning to the coast, and sailing northward, we come to that portion of East Africa not allotted to Germany, but now the sphere of the new Imperial British East Africa Company, whose headquarters are at Mombasa. Here we find a new group of mission stations, Frere Town and Rabai, of the C.M.S., and Jomvu and Ribe, belonging to the United Free Methodists. At the C.M.S. stations there are just now fifteen or twenty missionaries, some of them waiting to go into the interior and reinforce Mr. Mackay and the others, but unable to get through, owing to the revolt against the Germans. Inland from this, in a north-westerly direction, at a distance of about 150 and 300 miles, are the Taita and Chagga Missions of the C.M.S., with three more missionaries. How far these will be affected is at present uncertain.

At the stations near Mombasa, the troubles have been of a different kind. For several years fugitive slaves have sought refuge there. These the missions have had no right to harbour, as they are the legal property of their Mohammedan owners. The "freed slaves" at the stations are quite different. These have been rescued from slaveships on the high seas, and are now legally free. Every effort has been made to prevent mere runaways from settling around the stations; but it has lately been found that many who came to "join the Book" (i.e., to come under Christian teaching), and who were supposed to be free natives, were really fugitive slaves. Many of them have embraced Christianity, been baptized, and are leading "quiet and peaceable lives in all godliness and honesty." Suddenly the Mohammedans of Mombasa took alarm, and threatened destruction to the missions unless these people were given up to them, that is, sent back into slavery. The poor creatures declared that they would resist, and fight for their families and homes, and Rev. W. S. Price, the veteran C.M.S. missionary, was extremely anxious, and could only commit all to the Lord.

The danger is now happily averted, as we learn from The Times' telegrams, by the wise and timely action of the new British Company. Mr. Mackenzie, the chief agent of the Company, saw that if its régime in the country began with the restoration of a thousand escaped slaves to the slave owners, his Company's influence would be seriously injured. He has, therefore, undertaken to compensate the Arab slave owners, paying (it is believed) £3000 down, on condition that the whole of this fugitive slave population, a large portion of which is Christian, are declared free for ever. The arrangement, as the telegrams of this week tell us, has delighted all parties. A grand feast has been given by the Mohammedans of Mombasa to Mr. Mackenzie, while the slaves are set free, and the missions are saved. This is a happy illustration, indeed, of what British commerce may do for peace and truth, if only it pleases. It is in strong contrast with the conduct of the Germans, and emphasises the importance of our keeping separate from them as much as possible.

We regret to have to censure any action of the Germans. We do not forget that German missionaries (albeit of an English Society, the C.M.S.), Ludwig Krapf and John Rebmann, first opened up East Africa, and that German travellers, like Schweinfurth and Nachtigal, have been foremost in explorations in the further interior. But the great Teutonic nation has been badly represented by its recent pioneers.

Much prayer is asked that all these events may be overruled to the extension of God's kingdom.

Points for Preachers.

[THIS week we extract "points" exclusively from MANY INFALLIBLE PROOFS; or, THE WRITTEN AND LIVING WORD OF GOD, by Rev. Dr. A. T. Pierson, of Philadelphia—a work of which an English edition is about to be issued by Messrs. Morgan & Scott. 2s. 6d.]

THE PERSON OF CHRIST.

ONE of the most sublime facts in connection with the Person of Christ is the strange hold He has upon millions of believers at this remote age. After eighteen centuries have passed, a large proportion of the human race, the most intelligent and the most lovely, can with Paul say of Christ, "whom having not seen, we love." Everything connected with his personal life on earth has perished. We can only guess at the spot where He was born, the place where He lived, the site of the cross and the tomb; and yet millions are living for Him, and would die for Him.

THE GOD-MAN.

The God-Man! The "Daysman betwixt us both, who can lay his hand upon us both," because He is of us both! The way of God to man—the way of man to God; the true Jacob's ladder between heaven and earth. God above it to come down—man beneath it to go up! The God-Man, in Himself our pledge that as God in Christ became a partaker of the human nature, so man in Christ becomes a partaker of the Divine nature. Born of a woman, made like unto us, that we might be born of God, and be made like unto Him! The God-Man is not only a mystery and a miracle, but a prophecy and a promise. He tells us what man shall be, when, by faith in Jesus, he is for evermore made like unto the Son of God.

"NOW, LEARN A PARABLE."

Let us learn of the bee. See him alight on the flower and linger there, thrusting his trunk down into the heart of the bloom, where the sweet juices lie in a flask fairer than alabaster. Honest, earnest, studious searching of the Scriptures, lingering on the heavenly blossoms, the patient and prayerful penetration which touches the heart of the Word of God is our great need. He who sucks the honey needs no other proof that the flower-cup holds the nectar! He who has stored the symmetrical cells of memory and heart with the treasures of God's truth, and has found full satisfaction and delight in it, needs no other proof. He exclaims:—

> How sweet is thy Word unto my taste!
> Yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth!

SCIENCE AND REVELATION.

For what has modern science more earnestly contended than for the reign of law throughout the creation of God! Yet mark the stress laid by the Bible on this fact, that even those things which seem most capricious and uncertain are under the control of fixed order. The rain obeys a decree, and the thunder and lightning move obedient to law—the sea can go but so far, and the wind returns according to its circuits. Sir John Herschel was so much impressed with the harmony between the facts of physical science and the Word of God that he remarked: "All human discoveries seem to be made only for the purpose of confirming more strongly the truths that have come from on high, and are contained in the sacred writings."

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we hope to give portrait and sketch of Rev. Peter Thompson, of the East London Wesleyan Mission.

Sunday next, December 9, is the centenary of the death of Charles Wesley, the Christian poet. In many of the churches of America, and also in connection with the Y.M.C.A., sermons will be preached, having reference to this hundred years of sacred song. We do not hear that our Wesleyan friends on this side the Atlantic are making any special arrangements for celebrating the occasion. But the songs of Charles Wesley are the heritage of all the churches, and we doubt not many of our preachers and evangelists will make the occasion one of thanksgiving to God for this channel of spiritual blessing, which has widened so greatly since Wesley's day.

A Roman Catholic publishing firm has recently sent out a large edition of the New Testament at the price of sixpence per copy. Unfortunately no Roman Catholic in England is permitted to have God's Word in his possession without written permission, at the cost of not receiving "absolution." It cannot, therefore, be expected that the sale will be very large. We shall, however, look with considerable interest for the result of the experiment.

The fact that much of our most valuable information respecting the East comes to us from the West is again strikingly illustrated by a charming paper in the current number of The Century Magazine, under the heading of "From Sinai to Shechem," a paper in which Mr. Wilson goes carefully over the ground, from the Hill of the Golden Calf to the Promised Land. The able reproduction of Mr. Wilson's beautiful photographs makes the narrative of the journey doubly interesting, and the article is of great value as a thoughtful and capable contribution to our knowledge of Bible lands.

From a long and exhaustive report furnished by Mr. John Burnett upon the nail and small-chain-making industries of the "Black Country," it is abundantly evident that the conditions under which these trades are carried on urgently need reform. It is gathered that under the system of family workshops which prevails, husbands, wives, and children (both boys and girls) labour at home, and are practically subject to no regulation or restriction either as to age, sex, or hours of employment. One of the results is that women are allowed prematurely to exhaust themselves by rough toil for which they are physically quite unfitted; and it is only by a vigorous enforcement of the compulsory clauses of the Education Act that the employment of young children is kept within comparatively narrow limits. This female labour is denounced by the workers themselves as a fruitful source of trouble and distress, but it appears that both sexes are unanimously opposed to its total prohibition, their representatives wishing only for its regulation. At present the factory inspectors, who are too few in number for the thorough performance of their duties, have no power over these family workshops. Obviously, therefore, the first step towards an amendment of these evils is, as suggested by the report, the extension of the Factory Acts so as to meet the circumstances of these trades.

One of the delegates to the Trades Union Congress in 1887 produced a ponderous iron chain which had been made by a woman for the splendid sum of three halfpence. Apart from the economical evils entailed—for the cheap labour of workmen's wives and daughters forces down the already small wages lower and lower—it is a disgrace to a Christian country, and to our boasted civilisation, that women should be allowed to do such work. Moreover, as sweating is stated to exist in the nail and chain industries, the Committee of the House of Lords, now sitting on this subject, would do well to include these trades in their investigations.

An interesting report has lately been published of a movement organised by the working men of Sheffield, the object of which is, by means of a levy of sixpence in the pound on the average wages, to give full compensation for loss of earnings to all who may be obliged to abstain from work by reason of any member of the family suffering from infectious disease. Orginating last winter with the employés of Messrs. Dixon & Sons, Ironfounders (who cordially co-operated in the scheme), the workmen's association then formed has now become a permanent one, and the system has spread over the town, so that there are now over one hundred and thirty assurance funds of this description in operation, and the number of individuals thus insured is stated to be upwards of thirty-three thousand. During the past few months compensation has been awarded in more than two thousand cases, involving an expenditure of more than £6000—the voluntary contributions of workmen and their employers. This movement, serving the twofold purpose of encouraging thrift and of materially reducing a danger to the public health, reflects great credit upon the working-classes of Sheffield.

OUR DAY, the excellent monthly published at Boston, Mass., is to have several new features next year. Among them will be a series of articles by Rev. Dr. Parker, of London, in reply to the popular novel, "Robert Elsmere." Mr. Joseph Cook's well-known Boston Monday lectures appear in this magazine, which specially addresses itself to preachers, politicians, students, reformers, and the educated classes in general. The publishers are OUR DAY Publishing Company, 28, Beacon-street, Boston. Annual subscription, 10s. 6d.

The present-day remarkable movement among the Jews in the direction of Christian light and liberty is illustrated in a most interesting manner by a case described in the December issue of The Jewish Intelligence, published by the London Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews. A learned Rabbi in Russia, realising the darkness and slavery of traditional Judaism, recently became disposed impartially to consider the long-ignored claims of Christ. After anxious longing for a real ground of faith and hope, he gladly borrowed a New Testament. He could only retain the precious book three days, but in that brief period of time he read it attentively from beginning to end. Having a perfectly open mind, he naturally found the book to be at once a revelation and a beacon, and both heart and spirit rejoiced. With a wonderful grasp of Divine truth, he then wrote to a Hebrew Christian, upon whom he invoked the blessing of Jehovah, and from whom he earnestly begged such instruction as might dissipate his doubts, and solve the difficulties which were embarrassing him. This case is typical of many in which those who claim Abraham for their father are now seeking after the Lord their God, and Jesus their Messiah.

The alliances of our times are at once surprising and portentous. A French writer, M. Drumont, has sent out a book called "La Fin d'un Monde," which, we are told, is having a very wide circulation, and which is uniting different revolutionary societies against the Jews, recommending the seizure of their property, and the transplanting of them once more into Asia. The Jews are declared to have grasped the financial influence of the world, and their talent in amassing wealth is made an occasion for arousing against them a bitter Continental hatred. The remarkable feature of the circulation of such literature in Europe is that it is uniting in one aim the various bodies of Anarchists and Socialists. To the Christian, however, the threatening storm that is, to all appearance, gathering around Israel on the Continent, brings hope that again, as in Egypt, the Hebrews will awake from their dream of earthly wealth and turn for guidance and deliverance unto the God of their fathers.

An interesting and encouraging illustration of the great results which may spring from small beginnings has been given by The Hospital in a story of the "Victoria Infirmary," the building of which is rapidly being proceeded with at Tynemouth. It appears that in 1875 a number of young people who attended a Sunday Bible-class commenced a flower mission, the members visiting the sick, and singing for them and comforting them in many ways. Two years afterwards there was a development in the direction of lending out sick-room utensils. Then in 1884 an "Infirmary and Benevolent" Society was started, and last year the foundation-stone of the new hospital was laid. This is an example worthy of imitation.

The meeting in connection with the Missionary and Evangelistic Bureau announced to be held at 186, Aldersgate-street, next Wednesday afternoon, is another indication of the rising tide of missionary interest. We are a little doubtful as to the utility of multiplying "unions" and organisations; but if there were a more abounding life, the form in which it should express itself is a secondary consideration.

The current Fortnightly Review contains the official reply to Canon Isaac Taylor's attack in the same Review on the Church Missionary Society. The reply deals with sixteen of the Canon's criticisms, and after careful perusal it must be felt to be a clear and firm rejoinder. It is not for us, and would be impossible in this note, were we so minded, to enter into the controversy which has been so ungraciously raised. But this we ought to say: when the Church of Christ is showing some signs of awakening as to its duty to the majority of the human race which does not know Him who came forth from God as its Saviour, a critic ought to be very sure of his ground before he assails the book-keeping, expenditure, and methods of a great Society. Mr. Stock's article leaves on our mind very grave doubts whether the Canon has anything like adequately attempted to do this; and any who are withholding subscriptions because of his animadversions, may surely be expected to read the official reply. See also Mr. Stock's letter to us on a subsequent page.

It were to be wished that the Postmaster-General, in his desire to ascertain the feeling of the public in regard to the discontinuance of the Sunday post, had consulted that public, and not merely the corporations of the eight largest provincial towns in England, as he said last Friday night he had done. Town councillors by no means represent, as a rule, the sentiment of the people on such a question, and at very little expense the true opinion of the selected communities might have been obtained. The result in this latter case would have been far more satisfactory to all concerned.

Mr. Edward Wright is prepared to assist ministers and principals of missions in London during the next two months by giving free meals to the destitute in needy districts, and preaching the Gospel to them without charge. In prospect of the trying time which is sure to come upon the poorer classes this winter, many will, no doubt, be glad to avail themselves of this offer. Such should write to the Secretary of the Christian Workers' Mission, 32, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, W., in order to secure help in this direction. We need scarcely remind our readers that aid towards this special effort will be welcome and judiciously used.

What is the meaning of the following passage in The Northern Advance, which was lately announced as a new weekly paper intended "to promote the great principles of Protestant Nonconformity" in the northern and midland counties? The passage occurs in "Notes from Cambridge, from Our Own Correspondent." Lord Plunket's University sermon is spoken of as a sample of "the unhealthy diet on which bigoted Irish Protestants are reared," and then the writer says:—

> The Archbishop of Dublin was terribly afraid lest a belief in the actual presence of the Deity in consecrated bread and holy water should gain ground. Yet he defends with blindest zeal every scrap of miracle or superstition contained in his Testament. We can assure the Archbishop that the grosser beliefs of the Romish Church are not infectious here, and that even his own peculiar form of superstition is ceasing to be attractive. Despite his abhorrence, the Catholic religion in some respects responds perhaps more truly to the yearnings of human nature than the Protestant.

In our notice of this paper we said, "We sincerely trust it will worthily perform the functions of its important mission." We must say that if the above is a sample of its principles, we are grievously disappointed.

A subtle reserve has always marked the tactics of Romanism. It has known, with consummate wisdom, how to wait its opportunity. The system, which in the sixteenth century had made the Church a huge scandal to Christendom, had grown up gradually, and changes had cautiously been introduced that had at length made Popery and Christianity two most opposite things. High Ritualism in England has, through one of its exponents, apparently departed from this caution of reserve. Wide attention has been called to an avowed advocacy of a Popish Sunday in The Church Times. A Protestant Sabbath is assailed; Church-going according to English usages is caricatured; the separation of families and the isolation of each worshipper, after the Romanist fashion, is advocated, and a worship is suggested which would give attendance at "the celebration of the Eucharist," and leave the rest of the day for pleasure. This Parisian Sunday has, we would hope, been somewhat prematurely broached.

A few weeks ago we referred to the appointment of Canon Jayne to the bishopric of Chester, quoting a statement from The Record as to his particular church principles. We are asked to state, on the authority of a Leeds newspaper, that the Canon was highly esteemed in the Yorkshire town for his success in carrying out philanthropic work.

Our contemporary, The Irish Catholic, in which week by week there is appearing much abuse of Protestant effort in Dublin, has in a recent issue given publicity to what is termed "The Providential Proposal," founded at a church in Genoa where there are twelve altars, at each of which a daily mass is celebrated for the members, and the writer adds that the Pope has decreed that "whoever shall inscribe their names and pay one shilling once in their lives shall enjoy the same benefits as if they had caused the said twelve masses to be said daily, for all time, for their intentions."

As if this were not sufficient, the Pope has also granted that "new-born babies" may have their names inscribed, or even the names of "departed friends or relatives," in which case "they also enjoy the same privileges after death as whilst living." Similar privileges may be obtained at Lerius for another shilling, 23,559 masses having been said at the latter place, "in all of which the members participate."

In Mr. Rennell Rodd's deeply interesting biography of the late Emperor Frederick of Germany, there is a passage that throws light on the doings of "the power behind the Pope," and, generally, on the pretensions of the Papacy. In 1878, negociations had been reopened between Germany and the Vatican; we can judge of the claims advanced by the self-styled "Vicar of Christ" from the answer of the Crown Prince Frederick, then acting as Regent for the Emperor. The Crown Prince wrote:—

> The demand advanced in your letter of April 17, that the Constitution and the laws of Prussia should be modified to meet the principles of the Roman Catholic Church, is one which no Prussian sovereign will be able to admit; because the independence of the monarchy, which it is now my duty to defend, as an inheritance received from my fathers, and an obligation owed to my country, would cease to be absolute if the free development of its legislation were to be subordinated to the control of another power without....I am, nevertheless, prepared to meet the difficulties which both parties have inherited in this conflict, in the peace-loving and conciliatory spirit which my convictions as a Christian enjoin.

These firm yet friendly words show the Christian statesman, and afford one of the many proofs of the great loss that Europe sustained when this noble-minded monarch was removed from the earthly scene. Would that all rulers displayed the same backbone in dealing with the monstrous demands of that bastard Christianity which cares nothing for the true welfare of the people so long as its own selfish interests are conserved.

☞ In our next issue we shall publish a list, occupying four pages, of all Protestant Foreign Mission Organisations in Great Britain and Ireland.

The most notorious dancing-saloon in the neighbourhood of Ratcliff-highway, which was closed as such through the prayer and effort of Christian workers in that locality, has been offered to Miss Child, of the Sailors' Welcome Home, for evangelistic and philanthropic purposes. The rent and taxes will be under £100, and a present outlay of the same amount will be necessary. It will be of the greatest use for the winter work, if secured immediately. Of course the only hindrance is ways and means. It is a fine opportunity for an investment on the terms of giving to the poor and lending to the Lord.

> Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honourable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on [take account of] these things.

This wise and godly counsel has relation to ourselves and others. Feed yourselves with that which is good, and not, like the prodigal, fill yourselves with the husks that the swine eat. Take account, in others, of whatsoever things are honest, pure, lovely, and of good report. If there be any virtue in them, if there be anything that deserves praise, take account of these things, rather than of those things which are the reverse of these. There are insects which suck the poison from the flowers, but the bees suck the honey. To find only the evil argues that we are evil: the good extract the good. Love rejoices not in iniquity, but rejoices in the truth.

A YOUNG WOMEN'S TEA PARTY.

IF the height of happiness be found in making others happy, that altitude must have been gained one evening last week by Miss Dudin Brown and Mr. John Shrimpton. This estimable lady renewed her annual invitation to tea for the inmates of the Homes for Working Girls in London. The feast was spread at the spacious Portman Rooms, Baker-street, and the invitation of course was widely accepted. It would be a very big obstacle that would keep any of these young friends away from this gathering, especially when Mr. Shrimpton is there as master of the ceremonies.

Of the tea and its concomitants we cannot speak, but will refer briefly to the feast of music and the flow of soul that followed. As for the music, a grand piano and a violin, both of them most deftly and skilfully handled, and two beautiful lady voices, contributed to the melody and harmony of the evening. The contralto singer gave us "The Better Land" and "Oh, Rest in the Lord," and very thrilling they both were. The lady violinist brought really exquisite music out of bow and strings. But all was first-rate, and the young women showed in hearty style how they enjoyed it.

The speaking was equally good. Professor Elmslie's very practical and clever talk about the heart, and the need of having it well garrisoned, will surely be long remembered. So, we think, will Rev. E. A. Stuart's acrostic address on the word Jesus, which was full of Gospel truth, simply and finely put. Miss Dudin Brown was not present to see the beaming, interested faces of her guests, but Mr. Shrimpton doubtless conveyed to her the thanks that were so vigorously expressed. We scarcely know who ought to feel the happiest, the hostess or her humbler sisters, whom she so royally entertained.

The Epistle to the Hebrews.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Regent's Park Chapel.

VII.—THE DEATH OF DEATH.

Hebrews ii. 14, &c.

We fear death with a double fear. There is, first, the instinctive fear, shared also by the animal creation, for the very brutes tremble as the moment of death draws near. Surely this fear is not wrong. It is often congenital and involuntary, and afflicts some of God's noblest saints; though doubtless these will some day confess that it was most unwarrantable, and that the moment of dissolution was calm, and sweet, and blessed.

It is a growing opinion among thoughtful men that the moment of death, when the spirit passes from its earthly tabernacle, is probably the most painless and happy moment of its whole earthly story. And if this be so generally, how much more must it be the case with those on whose sight are breaking the glories of Paradise! The child whose eyes feast upon a glowing vista of flower and fruit, beckoning it through the garden gate, hardly notices the rough woodwork of the gate itself as it bounds through; and probably the soul, becoming aware of the beauty of the King and the glories of its home, is too absorbed to notice the act of death, till it suddenly finds itself free to mount, and soar, and revel in the dawning light.

But there is another fear of death, which is spiritual. (1) We dread its mystery.—What is it? Whither does it lead? Why does it come just now? What is the nature of the life beyond? We see the movements on the other side of the thick curtain, which sways to and fro, but we can distinguish no form. The dying ones are conscious of sights and sounds for which we strain eye and ear in vain.

(2) We dread its leave-taking.—The heathen poet sang sadly of leaving earth, and home, and family. Long habit endears the homeliest lot, and the roughest comrades; how much more the true-hearted and congenial; and it is hard to part from them. If only we could all go together, there would be nothing in it. But this separate dropping-off, this departing one by one, this drift from the anchorage alone! Who can deny that it is a lonesome thing?

(3) Men dread the after-death.—"The sting of death is sin." The sinner dreads to die, because he knows that, on the other side of death, he must meet the God against whom he has sinned, and stand at his bar to give an account and receive the due reward of his deeds. How can he face that burning glory? How can he answer for one of a thousand? How can mortal man be just with God? How can he escape hell, and find his place amid the happy, festal throngs of the Golden City?

All these fears were known to Christ. And He knew that they would be felt by many who were to be closely related to Him as brethren. If, then, He was prompted by ordinary feelings of compassion to the great masses of mankind, he would be especially moved to relieve those with whom He had so close an affinity, as these marvellous verses unfold. He and they are all of one (ver. 11). He calls them brethren through the lips of psalmist and prophet (ver. 12). He takes his stand in the assembled Church, and sings his Father's praise in its company (ver. 12). He even associates Himself with them in their humble childlike trust (ver. 13). He dares to accost the gaze of all worlds, as He comes forward leading them by the hand (ver. 13). Oh, marvellous identification! Oh, rapturous association! More wondrous far than if a seraph should cherish friendship with a worm! But the preciousness of this relationship lies in the fact that Jesus will do all He can to alleviate that fear of death, which is more or less common to us all.

But in order to do it, He must die.—He could not be the death of death, unless He had personally tasted death. He needed to fulfil the law of death, by dying, before He could abolish death. Our David must go into the valley of Elah, and grapple with our giant foe, and wrest from him his power, and slay him with his own sword. As in the old fable, Prometheus could not slay the Minotaur, unless he accompanied the yearly freight of victims, so must Jesus go with the myriads of our race into the dark confines of the tomb, that death might do its worst in vain, that the grave might lose its victory, and that the grim gaoler might be shown powerless to hold the Resurrection and the Life. Had Christ not died, it might have been affirmed that, in one place at least, death and sin, chaos and darkness were supreme. "It behoved Him, therefore, to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." And, like another Samson, carrying the gates of his prison-house, he came forth, demonstrating for ever that light is stronger than darkness, salvation than sin, life than death. Hear his triumphant cry, as thrice the risen and ascended Master exclaims, "I died, and, lo, I am alive for evermore, and have the keys of Hades and of death." Death and hell chose their own battle-ground—their strongest—and there, in the hour of his weakness, our King defeated them, and now carries the trophy of victory at his girdle for evermore. Hallelujah!

But He could only have died by becoming man.—Perhaps there is no race in the universe that can die but our own. So that there is no other spot in the wide universe of God seamed with graves, shadowed by the outspread wings of the angel of death, or marked by the plague-spot of sin. "Sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all." In order then to die, Christ must take on Himself our human nature. Others die, because they are born; Christ was born that He might die. It is as if He said: "Of thee, oh human mother, must I be born; and I must suffer the aches, and pains, and sorrows of mortal life; and I must hasten quickly to the destined goal of human life; I have come into the world to die." "Forasmuch as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, He also Himself likewise took part of the same, in order that through death, He might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil; and deliver them who, through fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to bondage."

I. By death Christ destroyed the power of death.—Scripture has no doubt as to the existence of the devil. And those who know much of their own inner life, and of the sudden assaults of evil to which we are liable, cannot but realise his terrible power. And from this passage we infer that that power was even greater before Jesus died. "He had the power of death." It was a chief weapon in his infernal armoury. The dread of it was so great as to drive men to yield to any demands made by the priests of false religions, with their dark impurities and hideous rites. Thus timid sheep are scared by horrid shouts and blows into the butcher's shambles.

But since Jesus died, the devil and his power are destroyed. Destroyed! Certainly. Not in the sense of being extinct. Still he assails the Christian warrior, though armed from head to foot; and goes about seeking whom he may devour, and deceives men to ruin. Yet he is destroyed. Are we not all familiar with objects which are destroyed without being actually ended. Destroyed as objects of dread, though they linger in an attenuated and impotent existence.

The aged woman exists, but her power to bless or blast as a witch is gone. The insect still taps its signal in the woodwork, but it no longer gives the dread signal for death. The giant sits in his cave, gnawing his teeth in rage at the pilgrims, but too crazy in his joints to touch them. The lion is there, but toothless; the serpent, but it has lost its fang. Satan exists as a strong man, he is no longer armed, and is the attenuated shadow of his former self.

And his power was broken at the cross and grave of Jesus. The hour of Gethsemane was the hour and power of darkness. And so far from alluring Christ to his death, I believe that the devil did his utmost to arrest Him. "See," said the Prince of Hell, "man rejects Thee, thy chosen forget Thee, the load of a world's sin is too much for Thee; back, back, take not another step; back, Prince of Life; back to thine own bright home." But Jesus persisted to drink the cup from the Father's hand. And Satan must have watched the death-scene of Calvary in despair. It was the knell of his destiny. It sealed his doom. The prince of this world was judged and cast out from the seat of power (John xii. 31, xvi. 11). The serpent's head was bruised beyond remedy.

Fear not the devil, O child of God; nor death. These make much noise, but they have no power. The Breaker has gone before thee, clearing thy way. Only keep close behind Him. Hark! He gives thee power over all the power of the enemy, and nothing shall by any means hurt thee (Luke x. 19). No robber shall pluck thee from thy Shepherd's hand.

II. By death Christ delivers from the fear of death.—A child was in the habit of playing in a large and beautiful garden, with sunny lawns; but there was one part of it, a long and winding path, down which he never ventured; indeed he dreaded to go near it, because some silly nurse had told him that ogres and goblins dwelt within its darksome gloom. At last his eldest brother heard of his fear, and, after playing one day with him, went with him to the embowered entrance of the grove, and, leaving him there terror-stricken, went singing through its length, and returned, and reasoned with the child, proving his fears were groundless. At last he took the lad's hand, and they went through it together, and from that moment the fear which had haunted the place fled. And the memory of that brother's presence took its place. So has Jesus done for us.

Fear not the mystery of death.—Jesus has died, and has shown us that it is the gateway into another life, more fair and blessed than this—a life in which human words are understood, and human faces smile, and human affections linger still. The forty days of his resurrection life have solved many of the problems, and illumined most of the mystery. To die is to go at once to be with Him. No chasm, no interval, no weary delay in purgatory. Absent from the body, present with the Lord. One moment here in conditions of mortality; the next beyond the stars.

Fear not the loneliness of death.—The soul in the dark valley becomes aware of another at its side, "Thou art with me." Death cannot separate us, even for a moment, from the love of God, which is in Jesus Christ our Lord. In the hour of death Jesus fulfils his own promise, "I will come again and take you unto Myself." And on the other side we step into a vast circle of loving spirits, who welcome the new comer with festal songs (2 Peter i. 11).

Fear not the after-death.—The curse and penalty of sin have been borne by Him. Death, the supreme sentence on sinners, has been suffered for us by our substitute. In Him we have indeed passed on to the other side of the doom, which is justly ours, as members of a sinful race. "Who is He that condemneth? Is it Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again?"

Death! How shall they die who have already died in Christ? That which others call death, we call sleep. We dread it no more than sleep. Our bodies lie down exhausted with the long working-day to awake in the fresh energy of the eternal morning. But in the meanwhile the spirit is presented faultless in his presence with exceeding joy.

NOTES FROM NORTHFIELD.

Those who have been at the Northfield Summer Conference will remember the singularly clear and scholarly speaker, Rev. W. W. Clark, of Brooklyn, N.Y. A graduate of Williams, a successful business man, the son of a gifted preacher, he became so greatly interested in the Bible as to abandon a lucrative profession for further study. He has the gift of presenting truth in a fresh, vivid manner, and is able to unfold the Word with great clearness. Himself all aglow by contact with the Bible, he commands the thoughtful attention of large audiences. He is now doing evangelistic work.

For a month he gives daily lessons on the Bible to Mr. Moody's two schools. He tells us that seldom has he found so large a class of young men so keenly alive and hungry for the unfolding of the Scriptures as at Mount Hermon. After a lecture, when time is given, they rain down questions upon him, which indicate great thoughtfulness, and which demand in reply alertness and thorough knowledge. Mr. Moody's training of the school is a grand foundation on which to build. After leaving Northfield, Mr. Clark goes to the Moody School of Evangelistic Workers at Chicago for a month, a cordial invitation having been given him by pastors and workers of that city.

Professor Drummond has left his stamp upon the schools. A healthful, manly, earnest Christianity is being developed grandly here, and the Professor's name is held in grateful remembrance.

The new Church building at Northfield is a model of roominess and convenience, and will be finished next summer probably. Let the readers of The Christian come over next August in large numbers to this most delightful of all New England villages, and to the annual Conference. S. E. B.

REV. F. J. HOBBINS, 25, Stepney-green East, E., will be happy to receive sums in aid of a fund to provide a few dinners for some 300 aged poor of the district, and children attending the Sunday-schools. Much distress prevails, and this effort is being organised by the committee and friends of the Silver-street, Stepney, branch of the London City Mission.

Dr. Saphir on the Bible.—5.

An increasing interest is being manifested in the series of addresses on the Bible which Rev. Dr. Saphir is delivering in St. John's Presbyterian Church, Allen-street, Kensington. On Thursday last week the subject was "The Jews, the custodians of the Old Testament Scriptures, and witnesses of the truth of Bible history and prophecy." As a preliminary exercise, John v. 33—47 was read, a passage in which our Lord told hostile Jews that Moses, in whom they put their trust, wrote of Him, while of the Holy Scriptures, which they accepted, He also said, "They testify of Me."

In the Epistle to the Romans, after showing that both Jews and Gentiles are guilty before God, and that the Jew, having received greater privileges, is under greater condemnation, the Apostle Paul asks: "What advantage then hath the Jew?" (Rom. iii. 1). And he answers: "Much every way: chiefly, because that unto them were committed the oracles of God." Here, said Dr. Saphir, the Apostle uses the very strongest possible expression to show that the Scriptures are the very words of God—"oracles"—authoritative and everlasting; he also employs another term—"were committed"—to teach us that these oracles, the Word of God, communicated unto Israel, and written so as to be easily transmitted to future generations, came down from heaven, and were merely entrusted to the guardianship of Israel. Israel did not produce the oracles, but only received them. Moreover, the Apostle points out that in this guardianship consists the sum and substance of the privileges and advantages of Israel.

Having observed how the Jews and their affairs lie embedded in both Old and New Testament writings, Dr. Saphir remarked that the oracles of God were all written by Jews. Pharaoh had a dream, and Joseph interpreted it; again, Nebuchadnezzar had a dream, and Daniel made known the interpretation. Israel is the prophetic nation, chosen by God for that purpose, and, accordingly, all the writers of Scripture belonged to the chosen people. This was not said in praise of the Jews, but to show that in his wisdom God appointed them to be the recipients and vehicles of Divine treasures for the world. Proceeding to notice the contention of some modern writers, that the peculiarities of the Old Testament may be accounted for by the peculiarities of the Semitic race, Dr. Saphir urged the folly of speculation in the face of historical facts. Israel did not find God; on the contrary, God found Israel. The religions of other nations may be accounted for by the peculiarities of the people, but we cannot truthfully say, "As was Israel, so was Israel's religion." Israel's religion came from God.

Developing this thought, the speaker showed that from the first Israel was not only stubborn and stiff-necked, but idolatrous at heart. Hence, it is certain that Israel could not have made its religion. It was only through the sad experience of the captivity that the tendency to idolatry was burnt out of the nation. God entrusted his oracles unto this people. Therefore Moses and the prophets wrote by inspiration. They were not the products of their age, nor the exponents of the nation's thoughts. They represented the elect of the nation, had the Spirit of God guiding them, and received the truth from heaven. Referring to the contention of some that the books of Moses were fabricated after the exile, Dr. Saphir said: There is no nation on the face of the earth that could be induced to preserve books picturing their sins and turpitude, their unthankfulness, their constant apostasies, and comparing them with other nations of the world by saying, "You are worse than any other nation, less loyal to Me than any other nations to their false gods." The five books of Moses depict the wickedness and ingratitude of Israel; the other historical books do the same; and the prophets say, "Be not as your fathers." Yet, though they killed the prophets, and stoned those that were sent unto them, the Jews never dared to touch the written record of the lives and testimonies of God's servants, because they reverenced the record, and looked upon it as given by the Most High, as it claims on the face to have been.

God often commanded his servants in old times to "write in a book" certain things. Such cases were noticed in detail, and the composition of the Old Testament was dwelt upon. The Jews always discriminated between the sacred writings and ordinary literature. The Apocryphal books, moreover, are not only different from Holy Scripture, but they themselves do not profess to occupy the same high level. Nothing is needed to bridge the chasm between Old and New Testaments, for there was no prophetic development in the meantime. The Old ends with an intimation of the coming of the forerunner of the Mesiah, and the New begins with an announcement of "the man sent from God, whose name was John." In the times of our Saviour the Jews had the Old Testament Scriptures in their present form, having since the Babylonish captivity thrown all their energy into the study of them. Alas! that their veneration should have become a false one; for the Book was practically put in the place of the Living God. To the self-righteous people the words of the prophets were of secondary importance; and so the law was hedged about by traditional safeguards, while its true spiritual object was quite lost sight of. When Jesus came, then, He truly found the people believing the Scriptures, but He had to tell them, "Ye have not the word of God in yourselves." Therefore, they rejected Christ. There were, however, some still faithful, who had heard the voice of God in the Scriptures. Among these are named John the Baptist, the Virgin Mary, Zacharias, and Simeon, who were "waiting for the consolation of Israel."

Dr. Saphir went on to show the wide scope of many of the prophetic passages of the Old Testament, and to maintain that God's declared purpose regarding Israel will in due time be fulfilled to the letter. He likewise examined the words of the Apostle Paul in Romans ix. 4—5, specially dwelling upon the significance of the clause "Whose are the fathers." Having filled up the cup of their iniquity by crucifying the Lord, God had to chastise privileged Israel, and the Temple was laid in the dust, and the people were dispersed among the nations of the earth. They are to-day a witness to the truth of Bible history. In conclusion, Dr. Saphir drew attention to the hopeful words, "All Israel shall be saved," found in Rom. xi. 26.

WORK IN CEYLON.

Rev. L. G. P. Liesching, C.M.S. missionary, Kandy, Ceylon, recently held a very successful mission in the large village of Talampitiya. The place has a population of about 1000, of whom about 200 are Christians.

Writing to a friend in England, Mrs. Liesching, who accompanied her husband, says: "In the morning there were meetings for Christians, and in the evening gatherings for Buddhists at various native houses. God abundantly blessed the effort, giving us sixty-five souls. The Spirit was evidently working amongst the people, and making them conscious of sin, and longing for pardon. We have left a really consecrated catechist in charge of the new converts. He will instruct them more perfectly in the ways of God, and prepare them for baptism; Mr. Liesching, moreover, will visit them every month, and I shall go as often as I can.

"All the meetings were conducted in Church Army fashion, and I feel more and more anxious to introduce the Church Army into Ceylon. Their methods are manifestly blessed of God, and they are just what we need at the present time."

MAJOR WHITTLE IN BELFAST.

THIS mission, memorable to many in our city, has come to a close. Since the beginning of October Major Whittle has been labouring in our midst with more than ordinary acceptance. His style of delivery, his great earnestness, his mode of illustration, his logical faculty, and above all his close adhesion to all the old verities of the faith, make him peculiarly acceptable to north of Ireland audiences.

The services have been held in churches in different parts of the city. The plan worked admirably. On Sundays the meetings were generally held in the great Ulster Hall at hours which did not conflict with the regular church services. At all these gatherings the people not merely filled the buildings—they were packed with eager auditors, and often many were turned away, unable to obtain admission. To the glory of God be it recorded, his servant was much owned among us. God greatly blessed the Word to the conviction and conver- of sinners, and to the restoration of backsliders.

The inquiry meetings which followed the addresses were really battlefields where solemn encounters took place as between light and darkness, heaven and hell. God was there. As a rule, the young men met in the Lecture Hall of the church and here solemn business for eternity was transacted until a late hour. A great many football and lacrosse players have decided for Christ, and have made a manly confession of it before their companions. Major Whittle has been greatly blessed among young men, and his son, Mr. Charles Whittle, has made his way to the hearts of a large circle of them. He has been of real service during the course of the mission, especially among the undecided youths with whom he came in contact. One of the most interesting meetings convened was that for students, medical and theological. It was held in the Presbyterian College Chapel. The venerable and distinguished president (Dr. Killen) opened the proceedings and delivered a short address. He not only spoke kindly of the evangelist, whom he said God had so honoured in their midst, but he spoke frankly and solemnly to the large gathering of students present. An unconverted minister, he said, was a living lie; his best sermon would be his worst condemnation. Let no one dare to enter the ministry of the Gospel until he had experienced the power of it in his own heart. Major Whittle followed with a kindly conceived and earnest word dealing largely with confession of our faith in Christ. He received a cordial hearing. At the close of his address several brief, pointed, yet modest testimonies were given, after which the meeting dispersed. Several students have professed conversion during the progress of the Mission. At the students' meeting Professors Watts, Robinson, and Leitch were also present, and in full sympathy with the proceedings.

One notable feature of the Mission was the constant co-operation of the ministers of various evangelical bodies. Night after night they were to be found in hearty sympathy and active service for the Master.

The musical department greatly missed the accomplished and devoted singers who accompanied Major Whittle on his former visit. Mr. and Mrs. McGranahan were much beloved in the Lord for the helpful part they took in the service of praise and Gospel song, and many prayers have gone up for them that God would specially and abundantly bless them, now that through the illness of Mr. McGranahan they can no longer actively help in the work of the Lord. The songs our brother has written, and the music to which he has set many of our most valued pieces will live long after his work has been finished here. Mr. Vance and his choir rendered ready aid as often as possible during the mission.

The closing meeting was a solemn, stimulating sight. The admission was by ticket only, and was for those who either had been led to decision during the mission, or who wanted to decide. Aisles and every available spot were occupied. It was an inspiration to hear the hearty burst of song, and to see the shining faces of the happy throng. The Major delivered his closing word; it was clear, full of Gospel, and very tender. His eyes were wet, for he was looking at a sight he would never see on earth again; and with Dr. Watts on one side of him in the pulpit, and Rev. R. J. Lynd, Moderator of the General Assembly, on the other, and many ministerial brethren scattered over the building, he offered his last prayer, full of pathos and power, asking blessing on young converts and anxious ministers and workers, commitee and secretaries, and on the city at large. After the benediction groups still remained in church and Lecture Hall, and spoke of the things concerning the kingdom. Major Whittle is now at work in Ballymena, in whose immediate neighbourhood the revival of 1859 began.

A LADY'S WORK IN INDIA.

DEAR SIR,—Miss A. E. Mullins, of Brixton, London, promotes, as well as directly conducts, a many-sided Christian work in Bangalore and elsewhere. As regards Miss Mullins herself, she is an English lady who, having consecrated herself to the service of her Redeemer, left her native land, bright with all the comforts of an English home and the social joys and happiness of the circle of her beloved ones and friends, to spend her life and means for the salvation of the millions of India.

The work which she is carrying on may be classified under two heads. There is, first, a direct personal work, which is entirely controlled and managed by herself, viz.:—

(a) The work of education. She has founded a school in Bangalore for the children of the poor. She pays also for the education of several poor Christian Hindu and Brahmin lads in the Government Colleges.

(b) There are two temperance and reading rooms; one is situated in the military and civil station of Bangalore, and the other in the Pettah (i.e., the Maharajah's dominion). These rooms are available to all on every day of the week (except Sunday). Miss Mullins presides at one room every Saturday evening, and at the other room every Tuesday evening, where the Gospel is always presented to the heathen either by herself, by Her Majesty's chaplains, or ministers or catechists of other Christian denominations. The meetings afford opportunities for the members of all denominations to work for the Master unitedly. Another feature of her work is that Miss Mullins encourages poor Christians to frugality and economy by allowing 25 per cent. to all savings made by them at these institutions.

(c) Miss Mullins, in addition, has opened a free medical dispensary at the Pettah for the public. The average number of cases attended to during every day probably amounts to about seventy.

Secondly, there is an indirect work. Miss Mullins gives liberal help to all missions which apply to her, for educational, or medical, or evangelical work. She spends probably many scores of thousands of rupees every year, and since her arrival in Bangalore has spent several lacs of rupees. I have merely sketched these brief outlines, so that others may be encouraged to follow her healthy and ennobling example. She has declined every solicitation to leave India, and chooses rather to remain in Bangalore to spend and be spent for her Master's cause.—Yours in the Lord,

BENJAMIN PETERS,
Missionary, Methodist Episcopal Church.

AMERICAN NOTES.

SAN FRANCISCO numbers 30,000 Orientals among her population. These are chiefly Chinese. Right in the heart of "Chinatown" stands the neat brick chapel of the First Chinese Baptist Church. Here also is a beautiful mission in charge of Dr. Hartwell and Miss Booth. In the chapel is a Sunday-school with an attendance of 200. In their night school are 130 pupils. They have also a Young Men's Christian Association, and a weekly prayer-meeting. It is but a grain of salt in heathendom. But it is salt full of savour.

. . . .

The recent meeting of the American Oriental Society in Philadelphia is fraught with promise to the student of sacred literature. If Assyrian and other Semitic languages are speedily to be systematically taught in our theological seminaries, who can tell what floods of light may not be cast upon our Old Testament Scriptures.

. . . .

One of the most revered and cheerfully optimistic of New York clergymen is thus impelled to wail out his impressions; "The Church of Christ is cursed with 'shoddy' when it ought to put on the beautiful apparel of humility and holiness. Self-indulgence sends many a church member to the opera, the play-house, the party, on the evening that he or she ought to be in the prayer-meeting. Self-indulgence demands the superb carriage and dresses and other fineries at the expense of an empty contribution-box, and a starved-out piety. Who pretends that the percentage of donations to religious and benevolent objects in our churches is one-half, or even one-quarter as large as it ought to be? The canker at the core of the Church is extravagant living. And when so many of God's people aspire to live, and cut a figure, in Vanity Fair, what can be expected of the rest of mankind?"

. . . .

Anthony Comstock's indefatigable labours in New York, and Josiah Leeds's equally earnest efforts in Philadelphia, against impure literature, are at last waking up a systematic response among Christian parents. The Young Folks' Reading Circles are now become organised efforts on an extensive scale. Their aim is to guide young people in the proper selection of wholesome reading matter, and grip and regulate the promiscuous education which is entirely outside the school or college course.

. . . .

The masses of immigrants arriving on these shores from Scandinavian countries and Iceland and Finland are Lutheran, almost to a man. And nobly are American Lutherans meeting this contingency. Before they leave their native shores, lists of Lutheran pastors and churches are put into their hands. Arriving in New York, three church immigrant houses welcome the strangers to shelter and good advice. Last year 12,000 such were harboured, and started on their Western destination. And this is followed up. In the Western town or city, the missionary, the parochial school, and the church await them. This is marvellous work, since the Lutheran Church of America is poor, and its institutions have but little prestige.

. . . .

American Christians extend their prayerful fellowship to the faithful workers in the East of London, that this time of terror and suspense around Whitechapel may be the missionary's supreme hour, in God's hand, when the healing and peace of the Gospel shall find many a poor sinful heart open for its entrance.

"We are orphans and fatherless, and our mothers are as widows."—Lam. v. 3.

ORPHANS AT BAGSHOT.

An Earnest Appeal is made on behalf of the 220 DESTITUTE ORPHAN CHILDREN who are now being Clothed, Fed, and Educated at the ROYAL ALBERT ORPHAN ASYLUM at BAGSHOT. The Institution is conducted on strictly non-canvassing principles, so that only the most needy and deserving are admitted. In addition to a simple religious and secular education, the children are trained as Carpenters, Tailors, Shoemakers, Bakers, Gardeners, Farm Servants, Domestic Servants, Laundry Maids, Needlewomen, &c.; so that boys and girls are alike fitted, on leaving the Institution, immediately to earn their own living.

The Committee of Management make a MOST EARNEST APPEAL to the readers of "THE CHRISTIAN" to help them in this very practical work of charity. They feel assured that it is one of the few working examples showing how the poorer classes of orphan children at the present day can be brought up, both morally and physically, so as to fight the battle of life, and become good members of society. An article appeared in "The Christian" of Nov. 30 describing in detail the working of the Institution.

Donations, but especially Annual Subscriptions, are much wanted, and any amounts forwarded to the Secretary, Mr. Richard Witherby, 62, King William-street, London, E.C., or to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, will be thankfully received.

FRIENDLESS AND FALLEN.

To the READERS of THE CHRISTIAN,

Since my last appeal I have received MANY TOKENS OF SYMPATHY, which I GRATEFULLY ACKNOWLEDGE, and now in view of the near approach of the CLOSE of 1888, I am sure that I shall be excused if I state that

ONE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED and FORTY FRIENDLESS and OUTCAST YOUNG WOMEN and GIRLS have been brought to the OFFICE, 200, EUSTON ROAD—some from SPECIAL MISSIONS to the FALLEN, others direct from the GAOL DOORS, the STREETS, and DENS of INFAMY—some have been brought BY DAY, others BY NIGHT—and, I may add, in all conditions—COUNTRY GIRLS, ORPHANS, &c.

PROMPT SUCCOUR has been given to all suitable cases. And now with respect to IMMEDIATE TEMPORAL WANTS, TWELVE HUNDRED AVERAGE Donations of £1 each, and the expenses of the Work for 1888 will be met; may I ask for this FURTHER SYMPATHY.

Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster Buildings, will, as usual, take charge of Donations, or they may be sent to

TRAMPS IN FOLKESTONE.

GIPSY WILLIAM SMITH, of Folkestone, has issued a statement of his year's work among tramps, &c. He has fed 500 with soup and bread, given lodgings to 100, rescued two fallen girls and one unfallen, taken forty pledges, and dealt with nearly fifty who have professed conversion. An Italian was removed from a common lodging-house with his wife and two children, and sent to Boulogne on their way to Italy. A wild youth, given to drink, was sent home. Several men rescued from lodging-houses are now living respectable lives. A poor woman found dying of starvation was fed and cared for till the end came. A black man found in a boxing booth at the fair was brought to the Lord and sent to his own country. The list of converts also includes the man who has the camera on the beach. Medical assistance has been procured for about twenty tramps.

Seldom have I been more interested in a report. It reveals a quiet but real work for God. Gipsy Smith wants a place where he can give his soup suppers, and one is available at half a crown a night. I shall be happy to be the medium of sending our hard-working brother some help. GAWIN KIRKHAM.

THEATRE MISSION, CAMBRIDGE.

THE tenth anniversary tea-meeting of the Theatre Royal, Barnwell, Mission, Cambridge, was recently held. Upwards of three hundred sat down to tea. The meeting, presided over by Rev. W. R. Mowll, was thoroughly hearty and enjoyable. Excellent addresses were delivered by the representatives of the various evangelical churches in the town. Among the letters of regret for absence was one from Mr. G. E. Morgan, of London, giving a very interesting account of the conversion of a terrible drunkard he met with in the Newmarket-road when resident at Cambridge four years ago. The Gospel had wrought such a change in this man that after working for some time as an evangelist in Nova Scotia, he has recently left for the mission field of Demerara.

Rev. A. H. Delme-Radcliffe, vicar of the parish, bore testimony to the great usefulness of the Mission, and urged all present to active work for the Master. Rev. W. S. Houghton (Congregational) spoke upon the desirability of cultivating cheerfulness and fellowship with those around. Rev. J. S. Lidgett (Wesleyan) expressed his belief that God was reviving faith everywhere, and that there was more unity amongst Christians, and more desire to cooperate in service than in any previous age.

Rev. J. Barton, vicar of Trinity Church, appealed to parents to train their children early in the fear of God. Mr. J. T. Simmonds, the theatre missionary, who is about to join the Evangelisation Society, bade the people farewell in a few terse sentences. Mr. William Taylor, from the Evangelisation Society, gave a most instructive address on the words, "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly, and there is a Friend that sticketh closer than a brother." The chairman concluded the speaking, and urged that, in order faithfully to carry out all that the speakers had said, it was necessary to have a true heart, as pointed out in Ps. cxii. 7, 8—true and fixed, trusting in the Lord. EDITH S. SARJANT.

MR. CHARLES C. GIRLING, 33, Queen Margaret's-grove, Mildmay-park, N., hon. secretary of the Hackney-road Mission, will be glad to acknowledge contributions towards the annual endeavour of the Mission to deal out bread to the hungry and give clothing to the perishing poor. Young and old are alike cared for by this voluntary agency.

ENGLAND AND JAPAN.

THE influences in this country working upon all classes of society are exceedingly varied and powerful. Japan has been conservative in the past, and contains a vast quantity of conservatism yet; but she is now in a formative state. She needs the wisest heads and the firmest hands to guide and control her in her present rapidly increasing race after "foreign civilisation."

This advancement has come thus far from two very small classes of men; first, those Japanese gentlemen who years ago "went abroad;" and second, from foreigners who have done much in Japan. But these two little handfuls of men are few compared with the many thousands who are now rushing forward to take their places. These young and vigorous aspirants are legion, and come trooping from every part of the empire. There are two classes of Japanese ready to push all others to the wall. (1) The hundreds now in Europe and America, and the hundreds on the way shortly. (2) The thousands who are being trained in all the advanced schools of the country. The few foreigners who have been quietly and powerfully working for years among the people will soon be lost and overwhelmed by the hosts of foreigners who will soon visit and travel all through this land as freely as through Canada or England.

In the coming ten or twenty years, when the two, or say three, classes get fully into the nation's councils and movements an immense amount of good or bad can be done by England. If good, then England will rise and tower above all others in the Orient; if bad, she will meet it again to her shame. Many young men go to England from Japan for an education, and for general knowledge. They are mostly of the highest families, and, therefore, on their return will surely carry back to their native land and practise largely what they have learned when in England. If young Japanese go from Japan as young Christians and return drunkards, or unbelievers, agnostics, atheists, or heartless towards, and disrespectful concerning, the venerated family and social home customs, then England is to blame.

These young men go to England because it is considered the most civilised, most prosperous, most humane, and most perfect nation on the earth. Cannot leading patriotic, Christian gentlemen in England see to it that the young men who are sent there from Japan are carefully guarded and protected from the cultured rowdies, Sabbath-breakers, drunkards, and fast young men ever ready to hold out the hand of friendship (false friendship) to wealthy young gentlemen from foreign lands?

In the name of all the noble traits and virtues on which England's greatness has ever rested; in the name of the purest and highest patriotism, I call upon England's Christian nobles, high and low, to make, by every possible means, the young men in your land from Japan better gentlemen, better Christians, better scholars, better statesmen, better business men, in a word, better men. Do so, and Japan will repay you. Do so, and God in heaven will bless you.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND BOOK SOCIETY.—The recently-issued Report of the Church of England Book Society, 11, Adam-street, London, is a record of continued and increasing usefulness; and it exemplifies, in an unmistakable manner, the real need that there is for the gratuitous supply of Christian literature—the sole great object of the Society's existence. As one reads the statement of the work that has been accomplished during twelve months, one becomes conscious of the reality of the want that has, in some degree, been met. It is impossible, in the face of the evidential facts contained in the book, to doubt the existence of widespread intellectual destitution. Grants are made to clergymen, missionaries, and in poor districts throughout the country.

OUR COUNTRYMEN IN INDIA.

DEAR SIR,—Letters from India tell of blessing on the work of the agents of the Anglo-Indian Evangelisation Society. Men who lately were indifferent to religion, or bitterly opposed, are now living witnesses for Christ. The Lord is setting his seal on the work of six ordained ministers and three lay evangelists, and especially on that of Rev. Isaac F. Row, who is now our secretary. His evangelistic work in Assam and in Southern India has been remarkably successful among Europeans, and also in some places among natives.

The large cities and the great cantonments are provided for; but the need of more labourers in outlying stations is increasingly urgent, owing to the extension of railways, and the development of the tea enterprise, &c. More than half the railways of India—now 14,000 miles or more—have been traversed by our agents during the last twelve months. The Gospel has been preached at many stations—at some once or twice, at others often. Means and men are required for new lines, and to resume work in districts that have been left for a time without Christian ordinances. In India, both in the cities and in the destitute districts, some of which have never been visited before, the residents contribute more readily to the work from year to year. If more labourers could be sent the local aid would increase. We specially appeal to Anglo-Indians who know the need, and to those Christians who have relatives in India.

The interests of Christian Missions are deeply involved in the character of our countrymen in India. Hence, at our Anglo-Indian breakfast in Exeter Hall the day before the late General Missionary Conference, Lord Northbrook said it was appropriate to have a meeting of our Society at the very opening of that Conference. A few days ago I received a letter from a gentleman in London, enclosing a cheque after reading the last Report, of which he says, "The Report makes out an unanswerable case for such a Society."

PRISON GATE MISSION, GLASGOW.

THE work of the Whitevale Mission Shelter goes on vigorously. We have had during the past year a larger number of inmates than in any previous one, and have had to add to our beds and bedding. There have been many openings for the young women going out to situations, and many of them are so far doing well. As far as possible we keep up a correspondence with each we send out to service. The younger girls, before the love of drink becomes a diseased craving, are the most hopeful class; but we cannot turn the older ones from our doors whilst we have room. Some of these are rescued by the power of Christ, and have been going on their way steadily for some years. The sum earned for work done last year was above £958, while donations amounted to £149. Against this is a heavy outlay for women's wages, provisions, laundry, and sewing materials, keep of horse and van, as well as all the other running expenses. We are unable to make the work self-supporting, and need still the kind aid of those who are interested in this work of seeking to save the lost.

ANTI-OPIUM MEETINGS were held in Norwich on Thursday, November 29. Resolutions were passed strongly condemning the complicity of our Government therein, and it was resolved to form a local auxiliary to co-operate with the Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade between India and China. Mr. E. A. Williams, the newly appointed secretary of this Society attended as a deputation. The City Sheriff and the Deputy-Mayor took a leading part in the proceedings. ROBERT ADCOCK.

ANSWER to "O LORD, HOW LONG?"*

O weary mourner, waiting for the light,
The promised light that soon, so soon will come,
Who findest not thy daily journey bright
With rays of sunshine from the Father's home;
Art thou prepared to enter into rest?
Is thy work finished as thy Master's was?
Are there not some, the dearest and the best,
Thou fain wouldst rescue from eternal loss?

Thy heart is sore maybe with sense of sin,
The sin of those who will not hear thy voice,
Who do not wish in joy to enter in,
Who this gay world have made their only choice.
But, burdened though thou be, do not despair,
That heart is peaceful where He has his home;
Work on, work on, there is no struggle there,
And in an hour ye think not He will come.

Dr. A. Bonar's Jubilee.

On Thursday, last week, the ministerial jubilee of Dr. Andrew A. Bonar was celebrated in the Queen's Rooms, Glasgow. The gathering was one of the most noted and interesting that has been held in the West of Scotland for many years. Mr. J. Campbell White presided, and the large platform was crowded with ministers of all denominations. The body and gallery of the hall were packed with members of the Doctor's congregation and friends from different places. Letters regretting absence were read from Lord Kinnaird, Sir William Muir, Sir Arthur Blackwood, Principal Rainy, and others.

The chairman heartily welcomed the guest of the evening as one of the "Disruption ministers," and spoke in eulogistic terms of Dr. Bonar's connection with the church and evangelistic work. He expressed the loving good wishes of Dr. Bonar's many friends, and the desire that God would still greatly bless and use him in Christian service. He then presented Dr. Bonar with a silver salver and £4000. Addresses were read from Collace, in Perthshire, from the congregation of Finnieston, from the Glasgow Presbytery, and from ministers formerly connected with the congregation, as well as a Mildmay Conference [illegible] greeting, and a greeting from America.

Dr. Bonar, in his reply, said his two brothers and himself had each obtained from the Lord the wondrous privilege of a fifty years' ministry; their great grandfather not only finished his jubilee, but laboured four years afterwards. After giving some interesting details of his ministry at Collace, in Perthshire. He referred to the work at Finnieston. He would be quite safe in saying that during his thirty years ministry, their mission church had brought out of the lapsed masses not less than 2000 persons. He had never aspired to be an intellectual or eloquent preacher. All that he wanted was to be a Bible expositor, to stand at the well, roll off the stone, water the flock, and send them away. He never, however, entered the pulpit unprepared. He concluded by thanking the friends for their munificent gift.

Dr. J. H. Wilson expressed the deep obligation under which they lay to Dr. Bonar for his teaching, his influence, and his personal friendship. Dr. Joseph Brown, Dr. Andrew Melville, and a number of others spoke, and the occasion was one not soon to be forgotten.

MISSIONARIES FOR NORTH AFRICA.—Mr. Cuthbert Nairn and Miss Jessie Nairn sail from London to-morrow (Saturday) for Mogador, as representatives of the Ayrshire Christian Union on the mission field of Morocco. Valedictory meetings have been held in a number of places, and they go forth supported by the fervent prayers of many friends who are interested in the progress of the Gospel in that benighted and long-neglected land.—The Reaper.

THE LATE DOWAGER LADY KINNAIRD.

It is with great regret we have to announce the death of the Dowager Lady Kinnaird, which took place at her residence, Plaistow Lodge, Bromley, Kent, on Saturday last, after a somewhat protracted and severe illness.

Lady Kinnaird was well known as a most devoted Christian worker, giving largely of her time, talents, and means to promote the extension of missionary effort abroad, and of religious and educational work at home. Some idea may be formed of how thoroughly and energetically she gave herself to all these agencies, when we mention that she established, in 1842, the St. John's Training School, Westbourne Park, for girls intended for domestic service, and through this upwards of 1000 have already passed, the greater number of whom are filling situations with credit alike to themselves and the institution where they were trained. Lady Kinnaird was also the founder of the London Young Women's Christian Association, and in all that concerned the social, moral, and religious welfare of young women she manifested the warmest interest.

She took a leading part in the formation of the Indian Female Normal School and Instruction Society or Zenana, Bible and Medical Mission, subscribing liberally to its funds, taking a personal interest in its management, and presiding at the committees up to the time of her illness. She gave special attention to the subject of emigration, whilst latterly the development of Africa and the suppression of the liquor traffic amongst native races aroused her active and practical sympathy. Such are some of the works which follow her devoted life of service. Her home at Pall Mall East was a centre of philanthropic effort, and, as was aptly and truly said by an American clergyman, "her library was an evangelistic workshop."

Lady Kinnaird will be missed and mourned by a large circle of friends and fellow-workers, who, knowing the force and worth of her Christian character, and the value of her counsel and help, gathered around her with a confidence and affection which a closer intimacy or a lengthened friendship only served to strengthen and confirm.

To her children her loss will be a bereavement such as can only be repaired when they meet again in the fulfilled prayer of their Lord and Saviour: "Father, I will that they also whom Thou hast given Me be with Me where I am, that they may behold my glory;" whilst here and now the recollection of all that she was to them in herself, and of her bright and consistent example, will be indeed a "precious memory," and they will rise up to call her blessed.

Lady Kinnaird has, we understand, been buried in the churchyard, at the family estate, Rossie Priory, amidst the quiet and under the shadow of the Perthshire hills, where she will rest safely in his keeping who gives "unto his beloved sleep."

MR. W. C. LESTER, secretary of the Indigent Blind Visiting Society, 27, Red Lion-square, W.C., asks for donations for the purpose of providing the blind poor with a Christmas dinner, and coals during the winter months. Every shilling contributed will, in the same way as for many years past, be devoted to the specific purposes named.

CHILDREN IN EAST LONDON.—We recently gave an account of work among children in East London by Mr. C. L. Boyer, an American gentleman. Much has been done to brighten the lives of the little ones, who have also been collected in meetings, and addressed on subjects of temporal and eternal importance. Workers well known to the public are associated with Mr. Boyer as an advisory committee, and funds are now awaited with which to develop this promising effort to influence the thousands of children who are being brought up in unhappy ignorance in densely populated regions. Communications may be addressed to Mr. J. Kirk, Ragged School Union, Exeter Hall.

FREEDOM IN SERVIA.

Dear Sir,—For more than a month fifteen men and women—Nazarenes—have been in prison here; they were apprehended in a private house, where they habitually met for worship. They have been committed for trial, and bail offered for them has not been accepted. The Public Prosecutor has not yet prepared the charge, hence it is not known upon what counts they will be tried.

I believe the only legal offence is their constant refusal to bear arms; but, as some are women, others foreign subjects, and none now called upon to serve, it is difficult to see how this can be substantiated. I write to stir up the Lord's remembrancers to prayer, not only for them, but that God's kingdom may come in this country generally, and that liberty of conscience may be respected both by the law and by the nation.—Faithfully yours,

Francis H. Mackenzie.

MRS. GINEVER'S HOMES.

Under the title "Day by Day," Mrs. Ginever has just published a report of her deeply-interesting work during the past sixteen months. There have been trials as well as encouragements during that period, but Mrs. Ginever has allowed nothing to hinder her from diligently pursuing the course of duty in dependence upon the Father of Mercies.

Boys and girls, afflicted orphans, and tiny infants, all have the advantage of Mrs. Ginever's care, and it is gratifying to notice that when the children leave the Homes they do not forget their "mother," whose personal needs are certainly small, although not less real for all that. Many friends have come forward on various emergencies to sustain Mrs. Ginever's hands in her good, useful work, and the example of some ladies who have exerted themselves to raise funds for the Homes deserves earnest imitation. Copies of the report may be had by addressing Mrs. Ginever, at Kingsdown Orphanage, Pemberton-road, Upper Holloway, N.

FRIENDS' HOME MISSIONS.

The annual meeting of the Bedford Institute First Day School and Home Mission Association was held at Devonshire House on Friday evening last. The report showed that at the six chief centres of effort, in and about London, a steady evangelistic work is being done. The active mission agencies connected with various halls and meeting-houses are being ably worked by a large staff of helpers. A regret was expressed that the expenses exceeded the receipts by nearly £100; besides which the Association have a building debt of £1200.

The chair was taken by Mr. Charles C. Morland. Mr. Charles F. Coffin, of Chicago, gave an interesting review of the advances which Friends have made during the past twenty years. Mr. John T. Dorland, Jun., gave a spirited address, in which he represented that the Society would add to its strength if it had a stronger missionary spirit. In advocating an aggressive movement, he urged that "a church which is not evangelistic soon ceases to be evangelical." Mr. Dorland gave some interesting facts in reference to a visit to the Provinces. He has been passing from Meeting to Meeting throughout the country during the past five months. As a result, he has come to the conclusion that a stagnant Meeting has no right to exist. On being shown over one Meeting-house and burial-ground by a "Friend," he remarked that they would soon need a fresh piece of land for purposes of interment. The other replied, "Well, no! I have made a careful calculation, and find that we have just room enough for the rest of the Meeting!" The address, which was an admirable and eloquent appeal for an awakening, made a deep impression upon the audience. Mr. G. W. Clarke, China missionary, also spoke.

ROMISH INTOLERANCE.

DEAR SIR,—Nearly three years ago I wrote asking the prayers of your readers for Manoel Milim and myself, who had been arrested in the little village of Santa Cruz for preaching the Gòspel in a private house. After fruitless appeals to Lisbon, the case has finally been sent back to Santa Crúz, and we are to be tried there early in December for the "crime" of speaking disrespectfully of the dogmas of Rome, and trying to make proselytes or conversions to the Protestant religion! So reads the indictment, and, if found guilty, we may be expelled from all Portuguese territory for some years.

I need hardly say that if we have "tried" to make conversions, it has not been to the Protestant religion, but to the living and only true God, and He has, indeed, converted some poor sinners to Himself. May I once more ask your readers to pray that all may be overruled for the spread of the Gospel in this island?

LASSERRE'S GOSPELS.

YOUR readers who are interested in Lasserre's Version in French of the Four Gospels will be pleased to read the following letter:—

DEAR DR. WRIGHT,—I thank you very much for Lasserre's Evangiles. I have read the book, and enjoyed the reading very much. Although the translation may not be called literal, yet I consider it one of the best I have seen in French.—Yours truly,

L. L. BONAPARTE.

This is the most valuable opinion yet given with respect to Lasserre's Version. No man living, or that ever lived, has produced so many versions of the Scriptures, in whole or in parts, as Prince Lucien Bonaparte. He handed over to the British and Foreign Bible Society over 150 versions, made at his own expense, and by his assistance. He has devoted his life, his profound scholarship, his fortune, to the work. No one knows better than the Prince the difficulties of translation, and there is no man living so competent to recognise excellence in a French translation.

The opinion came opportunely on the eve of Lasserre's departure for Rome, where he hopes to induce the men of the Vatican to permit the people of France to read the Version. Lasserre will approach the Pope with a very strong case; indeed, with an overwhelming case. Will he succeed in having the decree removed? The Pope has already given his official benediction and malediction in relation to the Version. Will he now have the courage to withdraw the malediction, and let the book go forth once more with the stamp of his benediction?

The decree will not be removed without a fierce struggle, for the strong-willed, resolute men who surround the Pope know the Gospel to be a dangerous book to the Papal fabric. Few will fail to sympathise with the delicate old Pope in the struggle, whether they wish Lasserre success or not: but all will await the momentous issue with intense suspense.

Meanwhile the damnata opera have not been destroyed. I have had the pleasure of putting a considerable number of copies into safe hands, and copies can now be had at Bagster's, Paternoster-row, at 3s. 6d. per copy. W. WRIGHT.

THE GOSPEL IN BELGIUM.—Speaking on Monday last at the noon-day prayer-meeting at the Y.M.C.A., 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C., Rev. C. Merle D'Aubigné gave some account of mission work in Belgium. A special interest attached to several instances he related of people having become enlightened with regard to sin and salvation simply as a result of reading the Bible. One man discerned such a difference between the Gospel extracts and the set prayers in a Romish manual that he sought out the Bible in order that he might know more of God's purpose and ways.

THE SPREAD OF ROMANISM.

WITH reference to the progress of Romanism Deputy Surgeon-General W. P. Partridge points out that although the Church of England is the "Protestant Reformed Church established by law," two of the things against which it protests being the sacrifice of the Mass and Mariolatry, these very doctrines and practices of Rome are actively propogated in our midst. He sends us the following notices copied from a board at St. Clement's, Cambridge, on November 12:—

Your prayers are desired for the repose of the soul of Arthur Bilton, a server at the altar, and member of the choir.

R.I.P.

The body will be received at the church on Wednesday evening, at 9.0 p.m., and the office of the dead sung.

On Thursday there will be two mortuary Masses:—

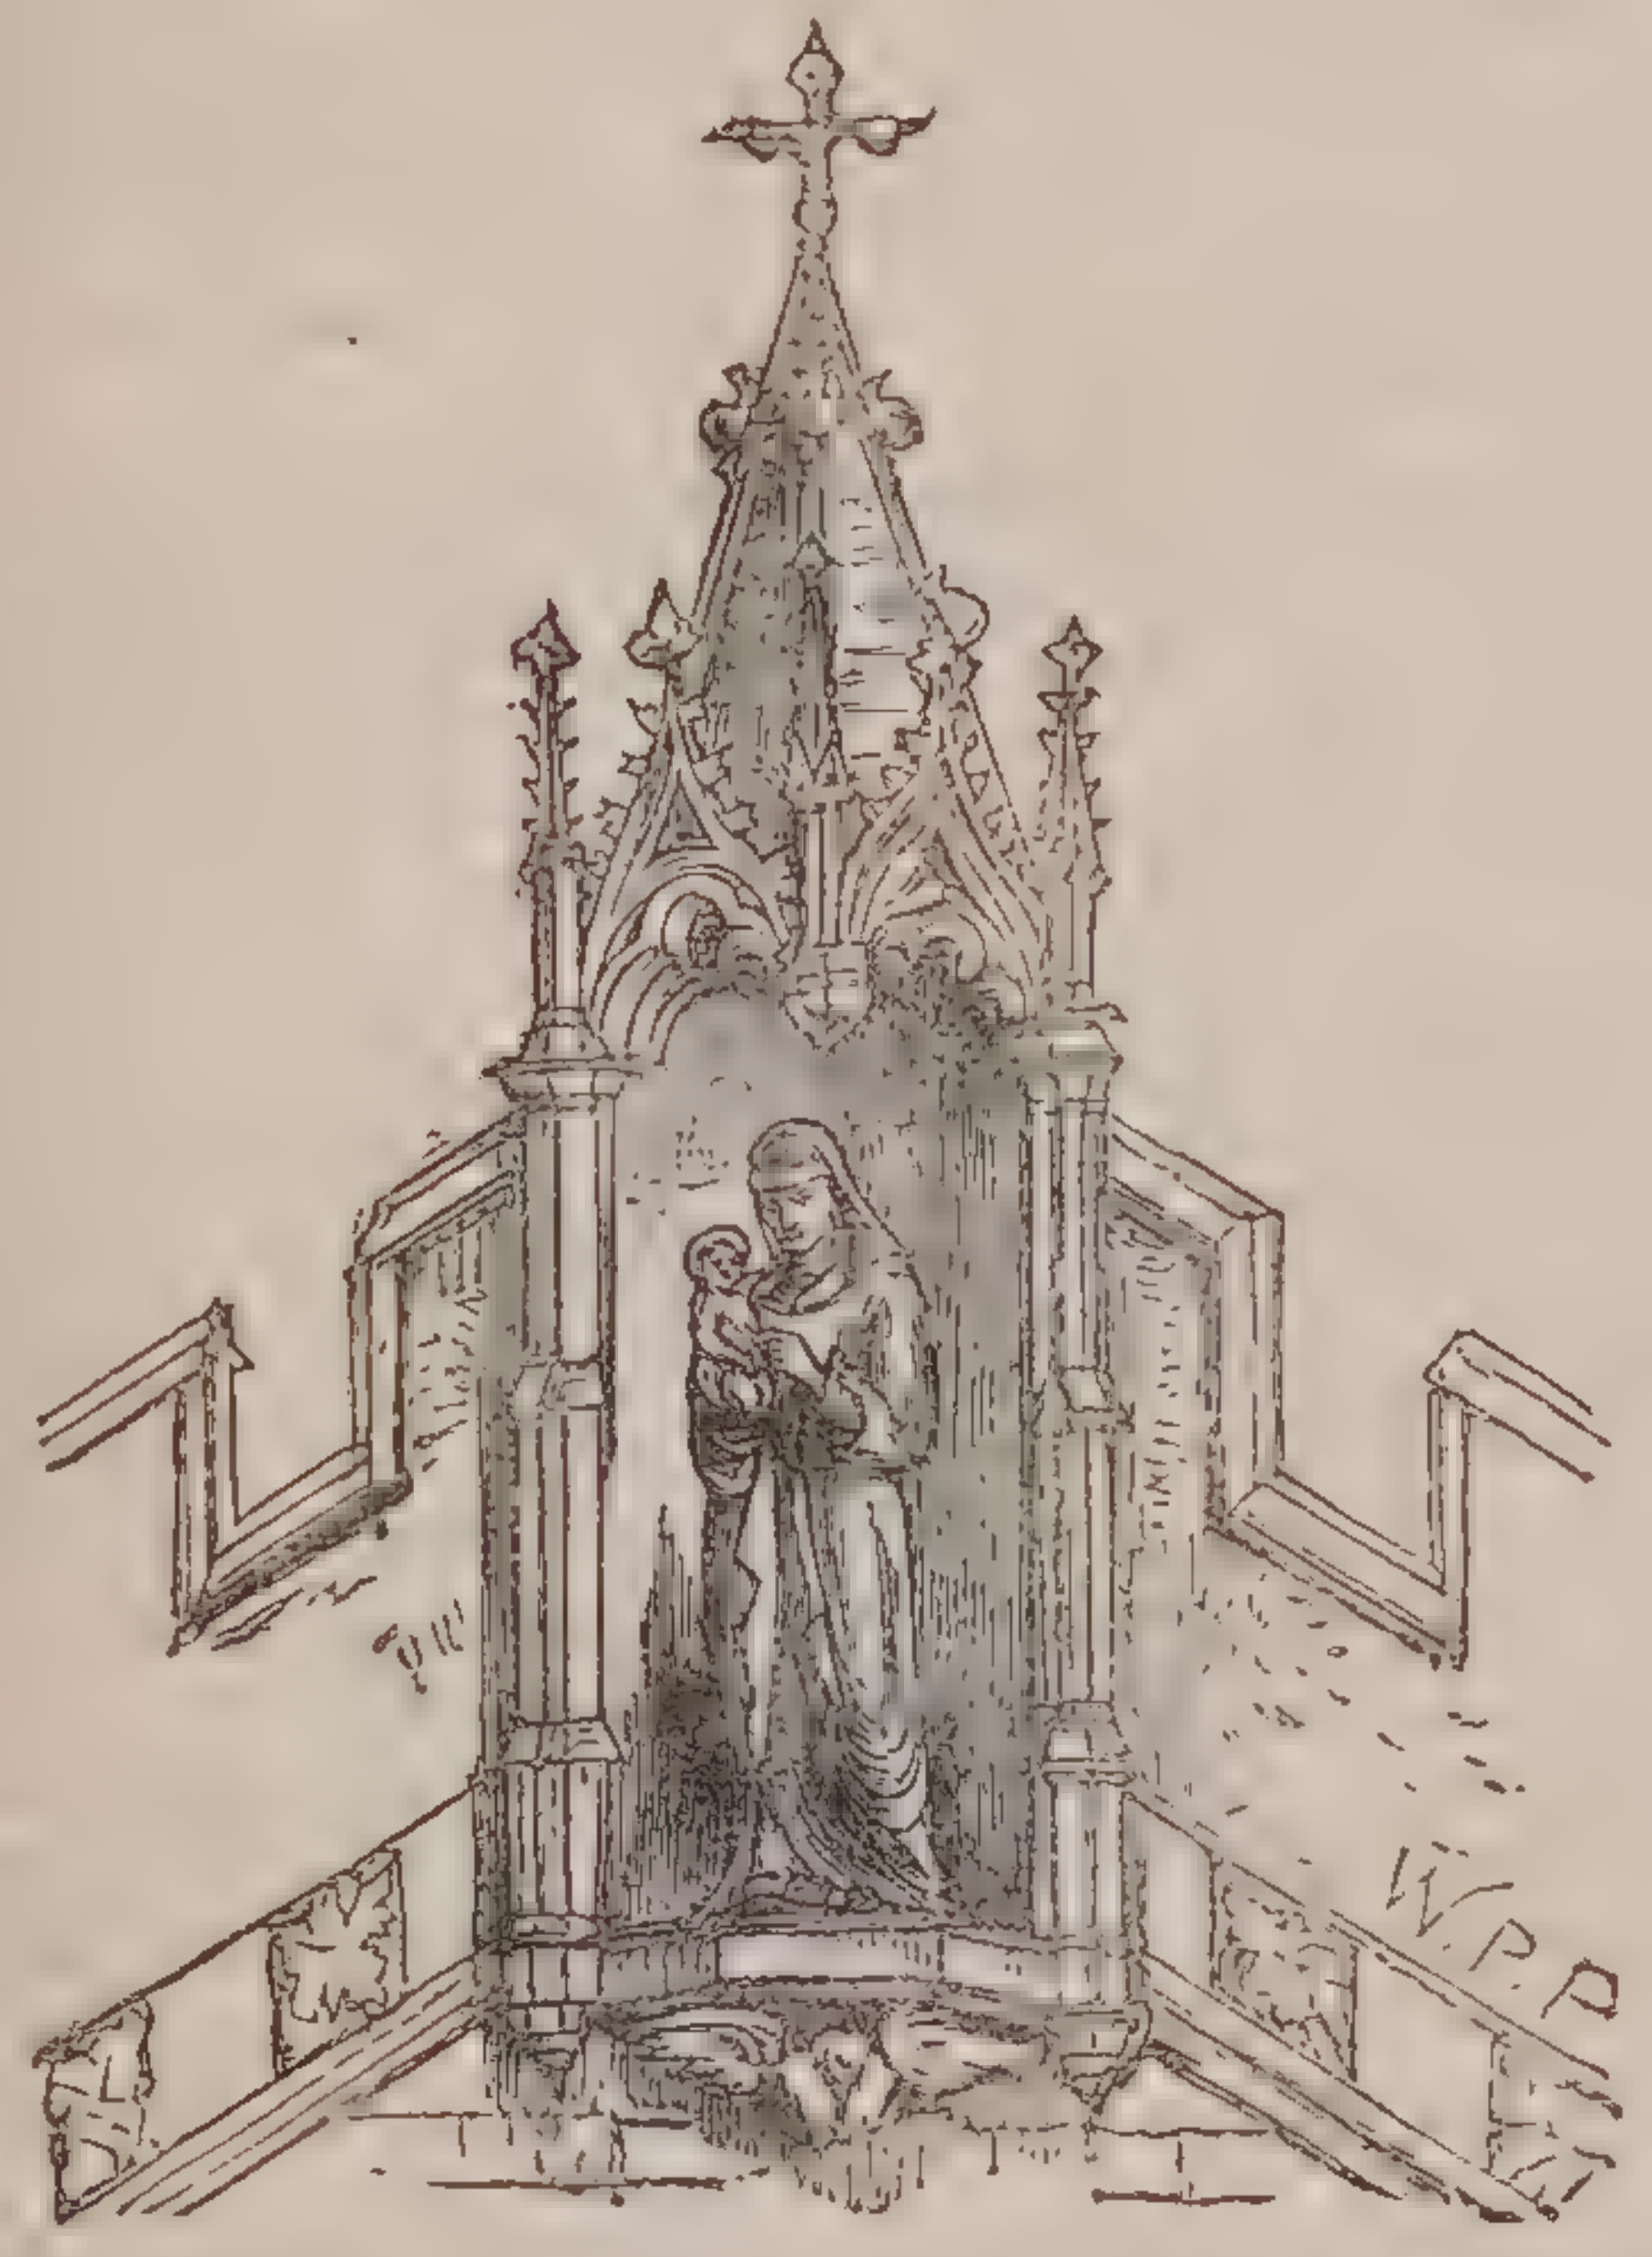
(1) Low at 7.0.
(2) Choral at 8.0.

The first part of the Burial Service will be sung at 2.0 p.m. in the church, after which the funeral will proceed to the Cemetery (St. Clement's ground).

On Thursday in this week, November 15, the First Mass will be at 7.0 a.m. instead of 7.15.

Our correspondent further sends us two sketches he has made of statues of the Virgin and Child, recently erected. The following is the front of a new porch at the University Church, Great St. Mary's, Cambridge:—



The second sketch was taken in Roslyn Chapel Scotland, where the Episcopal service is conducted:—

These are not restorations, but entirely new statues. Our correspondent asks whether these facts do not clearly show that there are traitors in the Church of England. He adds: "I trust that the time is not far off when the people will demand that these practices be put a stop to, and that the Protestant reformed religion, as established by law, be upheld."

EVANGELISATION IN BELGIUM.

EVANGELISTIC progress of a deeply interesting character continues to be reported from Belgium. The fiftieth annual report of the Evangelical Society of Belgium, or the Belgian Christian Missionary Church, is a truly remarkable record of earnest labour in many fields. What with its statements respecting preaching in the open air as well as places of worship, missionary effort of various kinds to different classes of people, Sunday-schools, and temperance organisations, the report reads in some places very much like an account of thorough work in some highly-favoured district of England. Young people are banded together, and the aged are visited by Scripture-readers. And that an impression is being made upon the Roman Catholic community is one of the most cheering tokens of blessing.

The report gives several instances of the power of the Gospel to open the eyes of the blind, and give strength to the weak and feeble knees. The churches, formed in a large number of towns and villages, are composed almost entirely of working people, and outside help is therefore requisite; moreover such help is heartily given by friends in Great Britain and several other countries. The general secretary is Pastor M. Kennedy Anet, Chaussée d'Ixelles, 123, Brussels.

HOLIDAY AND INVALID HOME.

DEAR SIR,—I have just returned from a flying visit to Eastbourne, spending the night at Miss Kennedy's Holiday and Invalid Home for Boy Clerks and youths employed in our London houses of business. Glad and sad sum up my reflections on returning. Glad to think such a Home exists in such a situation and under such management, and sad that it is so little known, and consequently enjoys so limited a share of sympathy and help.

Homes for young men, though not too numerous, are yet not few. These, however, are beyond the reach of lads, at least of those who are orphaned, or whose parents, as is often the case, are too straitened to furnish them with the means to obtain their much-needed annual holiday.

Of Miss Kennedy's long devotion to the well-being of young business people, I need say nothing. Happy the boy who comes under her influence. The house is a most suitable one, with a Southern aspect and facing the sea, with twenty separate beds (the bed-room arrangements are admirable). 15s. a week is charged for the board and lodging of each lad. Of course, at a growing age, and with sick ones needing extras,* such terms scarcely allow of the Home being self-supporting, even if it were kept full all the year round. But in the case of fatherless and orphan lads even this sum in not within reach, hence the necessity of annual subscriptions. No less, I am told, than eighty pounds were received last season from inmates alone.

I found Miss Kennedy "faint yet pursuing." She is wholly cast on the Lord. Hers is truly a "faith" work. I write as one who has long known her worth, and has been for very many years intimately acquainted with the necessities and temptations of the class for whose benefit she is labouring.

Miss Kennedy's address is Lichfield House, Royal Parade, Eastbourne.

Faithfully yours, FRANK H. WHITE.

* I would especially call attention to the invalid branch of the work. A boy sent to Miss Kennedy in October helpless from rheumatism, who had to be carried to his bed, left in a month perfectly restored.

FOOD AND SHELTER FOR THE POOR.—Dr. J. W. Williams, hon. treasurer of the Good Shepherd Mission and Institute, Wagner-street, Canterbury-road, Hatcham, S.E., will gratefully acknowledge any sums forwarded to him for providing 150 little "sparrows" with a good hot dinner three times a week for the winter months.

Missionaries for China.

ANOTHER of those cheery and hallowed gatherings convened so frequently by the China Inland Mission, because they are so frequently sending out missionaries, was held in the Lower Exeter Hall, on Monday evening, under the genial presidency of Mr. T. A. Denny. Three brethren and their wives with ten other ladies will sail next Thursday, making fifty-five sent out during the present year. Among them are Rev. E. O. Williams, who has given up a living in Leeds to spend the remainder of his life with his wife and children among the Chinese.

As is usual on these occasions, most of the party, in few words, told how they had been led to give up themselves to work for God among the heathen. All were deeply interesting; some, notably of those less educated, manifestly possessed that touch of nature which makes the whole world kin. One cannot but admire the wisdom of God in leading his servants to make their standard a spiritual rather than an educational one, and so to secure spiritual fitness with great diversity as to knowledge and culture.

Mr. Broomhall, in his opening remarks, saddened the meeting by saying that since the painful intelligence received on November 12 that two beloved brethren had died—Herbert L. Norris, at Chefoo, and Adam C. Dorward, at Sha-shi—they had suffered the loss of yet another faithful brother, Eldred S. Sayers.

Mr. Denny entirely put aside the idea that friends of outgoing missionaries should be sad on their account; they were not so much to be condoled with as congratulated that they have the glorious opportunity of thus serving their Redeemer.

Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, after giving some account of his visit to America with Mr. Hudson Taylor, and an earnest entreaty to avoid all sectarian bitterness, repeated with emphasis the declaration of Mr. Eugene Stock that none of the churches either in England or America have yet taken up the matter of the evangelisation of the world, except as a by-question. Dr. Duff said, years ago, that the Church had been playing with this matter, and if he rose from the dead to-day he would say the same. In an earnest and characteristic speech, based on the discovery of the lost book of the law in the days of Josiah (2 Chron. xxxiv.), he urged that the neglected command of Christ to preach the Gospel to every creature should now be implicitly obeyed. He protested against the spiritual luxuriousness which spends thousands of pounds on building a church or chapel at home, while the heathen millions are hungering and thirsting for the bread and water of life. Let us share and share alike. If you spend £100,000 at home, spend the same sum to send the Gospel to the heathen.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on a week's mission to be held at Drayton-park, by members of the King's-cross Y.M.C.A. Evangelists' Association, Dec. 3 to 9.——For blessing on missions by Mr. William Forbes, at Colchester and Framlingham.——For blessing on a mission at Miss Papillon's Soldiers' Institute, Sandgate, by Mr. Henry Bray. Dec. 9 to 23.——For blessing on a mission by Rev. R. Balgarnie, at Bedford, Dec. 8 to 14.——For blessing on an eight days' mission at the Gerston Hall, Paignton, S. Devon, by Mr. J. Crofton Rainey, from Dec. 9 to 17.——For blessing on a mission to the French, by John Barnabas, to be held in April or May, in Montreal.——For blessing upon the Hereford Youths' Gospel Mission; a number of lads have been lately brought to Jesus in the meetings.——For Mr. Morphey, secretary of Y.M.C.A., Ryde, who has gone to Mentone for the benefit of his health; that the Lord would spare his valuable life to resume work among young men.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes has recently been conducting a successful eight days' mission in the Y.M.C.A. Mission-hall, Wallingford.

Rev. James Kirkwood, Methodist Conference evangelist, has held hopeful Gospel meetings in Waterford; he is at present conducting meetings at Roscrea.

Co. Cork.—Evangelistic meetings have been held in Clonakilty, Ballineen, and other places in co. Cork, and have been attended with much spiritual good.

A Parochial Mission is being held at Holy Trinity, Ipswich (Rev. W. H. Williamson, vicar). The services for children have been a special feature of the mission.

Mr. Duncan Wright, of Dunedin, has been on a four months' evangelistic tour in the North Island and Christchurch, New Zealand. His labours were crowned with many tokens of blessing.

Mr. Gipsy Smith, of Hanley, has concluded a series of evangelistic meetings at Manchester. The meetings were attended by large crowds, who listened with profound interest to the addresses. The results of the mission have been most encouraging.

Evangelistic services were held in each of the Methodist Churches in Belfast every night last week. A noon prayer-meeting was also held each day in Donegall-square Church. The meetings were well attended, and were productive, it is believed, of much good.

Bradford, Yorks.—Mr. Thomas Payne has conducted an eight days' mission at Clayton-lane Mission with blessed results. A number professed to find peace, some of them among the worst in the place. At a praise-meeting nearly seventy testified to blessing received.

Methodist Missions have been held at Banbury by Rev. Thomas Cook, at Bishop Auckland by Rev. W. L. Tasker, at Hungerford, at Liverpool by Rev. William Middleton, and at Plymouth by Rev. E. Davidson. In each case there have been gratifying results, many persons having passed through the inquiry-rooms.

Lisburn, Ireland.—During the past five weeks most successful Gospel meetings have been held each night in the Methodist Church here. In a room in one of the factories where a large number of girls are employed all the young women except two have professed conversion, and altogether over 100 persons have evinced a change of life.

The United Baptist Church, at Albemarle and Ebenezer, Scarborough, is rejoicing in a season of revival and ingathering. A week of earnest waiting upon God was followed by a twelve days' mission, conducted by Rev. Frank Russell, of Hull. The results have been most cheering, more than thirty persons having been led to decision for Christ.

Stratford.—We desire publicly to thank God for the great blessing received during Mr. Sanford's two weeks' mission here. The word of God has indeed been "quick and powerful." Souls have been brought into the kingdom of Christ, and many others have been let into greater fulness of blessing. Many people are under the impression that Mr. Sanford believes in sinless perfection; we are glad to be in a position to deny this entirely.

E. F. B.

Mr. J. Crofton Rainey has been holding an eleven days' mission at the Gospel Hall, Wood-green, N., with encouraging attendant blessing. Several cases of decided conversion have taken place, the converts being bright and rejoicing. Mr. Rainey's bold, manly style, and earnest address, win the attention of young men who are often difficult to reach. Mr. Rainey is returning to his home at Paignton, where he is to conduct a special mission from December 9 to 17.

Gresham Chapel, Brixton.—Prayer has been answered in connection with the Gospel services held here by Miss Smith and Miss Bax. The people have come up in numbers to hear the truths spoken and sung. Over a hundred and fifty have passed through the inquiry-room, each one being personally dealt with. It was refreshing to see husbands and wives coming together. One wife who had prayed for her husband ten years had the joy of seeing him converted; they at once commenced family prayer at home. A street for which two saints of God (recently taken to glory) had prayed ten years, without seeing the answer, received blessing in seventeen houses. The children's meetings were much blessed.

Coventry.—Mr. Henry Thorne has conducted a ten days' mission here in connection with the Y.M.C.A. The word was with power, and at each meeting there were inquirers after the way of life. The noon prayer-meetings and afternoon Bible-readings were seasons of deep spiritual profit. The praise-meeting at the close of the mission was also a soul-saving time. Mr. Thorne attracted a large company to hear the story of his life, "From the Stage to the Cross."

Braunston, Northamptonshire.—Evangelistic services have been held in the Baptist Chapel in this village (Rev. T. Brimley, pastor), conducted by Rev. J. Compston. The addresses were characterised with such earnestness, clearness, and simplicity as left a marked impression on the hearers. The members of the church have had their spititual life quickened; deep impressions have been made on others, and the heart of the pastor has been greatly cheered.

Mr. I. D. Sankey.—An esteemed Plymouth correspondent writes to say that Mr. Sankey's testimony made a lasting impression upon many who attended the large meetings held recently in the Exeter-street Mission-hall, a building capable of seating 2000 people. On the Sunday evening Mr. Sankey attended two meetings, and, after an address on the fall of Babylon, many persons went into the inquiry-room. On Monday last week, Mr. Sankey took part in two immense meetings at Brighton in connection with the Railway Mission.

Mr. Gawin Kirkham preached at Lowestoft for three Sundays in November. He was invited by the clergy, the chief object being to reach the numerous fishermen which frequent that port during the herring fishing. He also addressed the Exeter Hall noon prayer-meeting during the Thursdays in November on "The Christian," as follows:—The Christian Defined, the Christian in the Church, the Christian in the World, the Christian in the Family, and the Christian at Work.

Hamburg.—Evangelistic meetings have been held in well-known concert halls in Hamburg, which may be regarded as forming an important epoch in the religious history of this city. The meetings were conducted by Rev. E. Schrenk, and were throughout characterised by Gospel simplicity and earnestness. The numbers in attendance grew gradually from about four hundred on the first evening to about 2400 on the last. It was something new and wonderful here to see a concert hall filled with men and women, many of whom had to stand during the whole service, listening with earnest attention to the simple Gospel. Mr. Schrenk also held meetings in the Auschar Chapel for the edification of Christians, which were well attended and accompanied by much blessing. J. C. ASTON.

Hamburg, Königstr.

Rev. W. A. Blake, of Southport, intends to relinquish his pastorate early in the new year, and devote himself to special mission work in Congregational churches. Address 132, Duke-street, Southport.

The King's Cross Y.M.C.A. Evangelists' Association will send evangelists (young men) to conduct missions in connection with churches or chapels of any denomination or mission halls in any part of London.—Hon. Sec., 91, Euston-road, N.W.

"JERUEL" HOME FOR SERVANTS, Quarry-road, Hastings, is an excellent institution, receiving servants out of place or requiring rest, and invalids in need of change and quiet. The accommodation has been in steady request from the first, and by the kindness of friends a few free cases have been received. The hon. superintendents, Misses Marchant and Harding, would be glad if friends or societies purposing to take a bed for the coming year, or any part of it, would without delay intimate their desires, so that the needful arrangements may be made. Cheap return tickets are now available. Further particulars may be obtained from the superintendents.

HOWARD-STREET MISSION.—A social gathering of workers and friends connected with this Mission in Wandsworth took place last week. Colonel H. G. Macgregor presided. The Hon. Secretary made a statement concerning the open-air work carried on by the Mission during the past seven months. Upwards of 150 meetings had been held in the neighbourhood, and nearly 2000 addresses had been given, besides much healthy literature disseminated. Many cases are on record where notorious characters have been reclaimed and enlisted in the work. The superintendent, Mr. J. Soames, gave a general account of the working of the Mission. Mr. John Hayward and others also spoke on its behalf. N. A. S.

Our Chinese Girls' School.

AN ADDRESS BY MRS. STOTT,

Of the China Inland Mission.

It is over twenty-two years since Mr. Stott went to China. I joined him in 1870. When we were married, we went to reside in the city of Wan-chau, and there we lived and laboured for eighteen years. At first it was very hard uphill work. As the result of the first ten years we had gathered a small church of about twenty members. In the church there was a young man who had been converted, and a question arose about his marriage. We could have told him that he was not to be unequally yoked with unbelievers; that God's Word said it was wrong. But there was a practical difficulty in the way; if he was to marry only "in the Lord," that meant that he was not to marry at all. So he married, and very soon after he began to decline in the Christian life. It was the old story over again. One or other must give way, and I am sorry to say very often it is the Christian one. They must either endure the unhappy relation or give up Christ altogether.

About two years afterwards this man gave up all profession of Christianity, and he is now lost to us as a Christian. This set us thinking as to how we could meet the difficulty, and we determined to begin a girls' school, so as to train the young girls that they might be suitable wives for the Christian converts. I want to tell something in connection with that school. There may be those hearing me who, for many years, have been praying for the conversion of some in whom they are specially interested. They have begun to think that God has forgotten to be gracious. For their encouragement I would like to tell you the story of our girls' school.

We had a great deal of difficulty in commencing it, because we decided that we would have nothing to do with feet-binding. Some missionaries thought that as this was a very serious difficulty, and would probably prevent the girls coming into the school, it was better to give way on this point, and let the girls have a chance of their souls' salvation. However, we felt differently about the matter; we thought the feet-binding was wrong, and nothing could ever make it right. We determined to begin on true sound principles, thinking it was better to have perhaps six girls on that foundation than to have twenty on a false one. For a long time we had only four little girls. By and by others were added, and time passed on.

During the early time of the school I did not feel so great intensity of desire about the children's salvation, because they were young, and the mind opens up very slowly in China. But as the years rolled by and they had grown up to be sixteen or seventeen I became desperately in earnest. Often when I had come from the Bible-class to my husband I was constrained to cry out, "Will these girls never be saved? Will they never open their hearts to the message of salvation?" We had a time of heavy disappointment, too, as we heard of blessing in other schools. The girls read their Bibles and prayed, and were all, outwardly, that we could desire. But we had seen so much in the old country of a profession of Christianity without power, and we did not want to see it reproduced in China. We wanted living souls that should be as gems to adorn the Master's crown, and we knew that nothing short of regeneration could accomplish that.

After waiting eight long years, the day came that we had prayed for. We were sitting in the workroom with the elder girls, and there had been no outward indication at all of the working of the Spirit of God. We had not had any special services or Bible-readings, and everything was going on seemingly as before. The eldest girl quietly looked up to me and said, "Teacher, do you think I could be saved now? You have urged me so often, and I have never been willing till now; do you think He will take me still?" Dear friends, have you ever had the joy of hearing such a question after years of prayer and waiting? Then you will understand my feelings. It seemed as if I could scarcely get words to utter what I felt, and I said, "Yes, indeed, He will save you just as you are at this moment." Then I began to tell them of my own conversion at sixteen years of age. The poor girl could not stand it; she burst into tears and rushed from the room.

I went at once to tell my husband the good news. I felt like a Hallelujah lass. We talk about "doing things decently and in order." I could not do it. I found him alone, and I burst out: "Praise the Lord; the blessing has come." My husband said, "What—what is it?" I replied, "A-Me is seeking the Lord; praise his name." We knelt down together, and gave thanks to God. By and by I said I must go back to her. I found her in her bedroom, kneeling and weeping bitter tears. I pointed her to the Lord Jesus Christ, and urged her to decide, as He was waiting to receive her. She knew the Gospel theoretically, and so I thought it would perhaps be good to leave her to herself for a little. I went downstairs, and found that two of the others were weeping. "What is the matter?" I asked. "Oh, I am a sinner!" I led them upstairs, into my room, and told them how God would have mercy upon them. One said, "Oh, I am such a sinner, you do not know how bad I have been. I am a thief." I felt shocked; I had thought she was a very good girl. She told me she had stolen some pieces of trimming; would God still save her? I did not want her to think lightly of sin, and I said, "Yes, you are a thief; but God had mercy on a thief once, and will He not do the same with you?"

The other girl said, "I am worse still; you do not know how wicked I have been." And then she took me away back three years to a sin she had committed, and that no one but herself knew of. I cannot go into details, but she brought to my memory circumstances, showing that she had managed so as to put the guilt on another child who had been punished, though she was innocent. I felt so indignant for a moment, that I could hardly speak, but at length I said, "What, did you stand up and see me punish her?" "Yes." She wept and said, "Is there mercy for me?"

I went downstairs and gathered the school; I was determined to put the matter right as far as I was concerned. An awe seemed to have come over them. I called the one whom I had punished and asked if she remembered it; she said she did not. I do not think I should have forgotten if I had been punished. I put myself before her as a criminal, told her how sorry I was and that I had sinned against her. The little ones all seemed rather to enjoy it; they had been accustomed to be brought before me, and this was the first time I had been brought before them.

To make a long story short, there were within three weeks seven girls in that school decidedly converted to God. The seventh was a most remarkable case. The eldest girl of all had been married from the school two years, but she had gone out unconverted. She attended the services regularly, and prayed with her husband, but the grace of God never seemed to have reached her heart. The Sunday after the first three were converted, one of them spoke to this one and urged her to yield to Christ. "No," she said, "there is no help for me; my heart is so cold and hard. I do not seem as if I want to believe; I do not think God means to save me." On Monday the children told me they had agreed to pray every night that God would bless this one. A week passed, and then the girls asked permission to go and visit her. In an hour or so they came back running, almost pell-mell, as if each were trying to get in first to tell the good news. They said, "Our elder sister is saved." I was almost struck dumb. Somehow I did not expect an answer. But God was better than our fears that day. The day before we began to pray that girl was saved. That very Sunday she went to her home. She thought over what everyone had said, and the words I had spoken in the class had gone home to her heart. She had knelt down, confessed her sin, and there and then found peace in believing. So while we were praying for her she was a rejoicing believer. "Before ye call I will answer; yea while ye are speaking I will hear." How faithful God is to his own promises. He tells us, "In due season ye shall reap if ye faint not." Here is where we often fail: we faint before the time of blessing comes.

These girls continued true to their profession. I think I may say without hesitation they are the finest Christian characters I have ever known anywhere. Their development in grace has been something wonderful. Truths that seemed before to be lying dormant in their hearts immediately sprang up and brought forth fruit. They had the little ones in their care; day by day they took them aside—each "mother" taking the one under her special charge—and prayed for them, pleading with God for their salvation. They went on praying thus for more than a year. Then the Lord heard our prayers, and we had another revival in the school. Five were converted. So we have been going on, one here and another there, until more than half of those in the school are now decided and intelligent believers.

I will tell you how they were the means of the conversion of a woman. She came in on a Saturday asking to be baptized. She had been before, and had been refused because we could not see about her any evidence of regeneration. She was again put off, and in the evening she went into the school and told her story to these girls. One of them said, "Are you born again?" "I do not know. I believe in Jesus; is not that enough?" "You must be born again." "Well, I do not know." "Ah, if you do not know, I am afraid you are not born again. It makes such a wonderful difference when you are." I have been born again, and I know it. It has changed my whole life. This girl here has been born again, and she knows it too. If you were born again I am sure you would know it." "Ah, then, perhaps I am not."

The woman went away to her room, and kneeling down she prayed in agony: "O God, if I am not saved, let me be saved to-night. If I have not been born again, let me be to-night. If the blood of Jesus Christ has not cleansed me from sin, let it be to-night." We had a special prayer-meeting that evening, at which there were some eight or ten candidates for baptism to be examined. My husband said to this woman: "Are you born again? Do you know that Christ is your Saviour?" I shall never forget her appearance; with beaming face she said, "Yes, teacher; but only to-night." Then she told the story, and said, "I am so glad I ever went into that school to know that I was not born again." She was accepted and baptized next day, and is now an earnest Christian worker.

NATIONAL REFUGE HARBOURS SOCIETY.—Several gentlemen of high social position have written to the newspapers to say that they are not patrons of this Society, and that they do not consider it or its founder, Mr. F. Johnson, worthy of public support.

HAMBURG HOME FOR JEWISH INQUIRERS.—We recently referred to this institution, which has proved a blessing to many a Hebrew who, through confessing Christ, has been persecuted and cast friendless upon the world. Helped to earn a living and otherwise assisted, the inmates turn out very useful men, and former protégés may to-day be found in many countries preaching Christ to Jews and Gentiles alike. The hands of the director, Rev. S. T. Bachert, are often tied for want of funds, although the Home has some warm friends in Great Britain as well as in Germany.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY.

THE winter's distress among the unemployed poor has begun to make itself felt with exceptional severity. From various parts of the Metropolis those interested in the condition of the poorer classes may hear of mission workers sorely perplexed by the prevalence of destitution around them. Many of these local workers look to the London Samaritan Society as a centre of relief, whence they derive assistance in dealing with the necessities of their respective districts. I have therefore been interested (says a correspondent) in making some inquiries as to the present prospects in view of the winter's needs.

Already I find the work in full swing. Applications are coming from mission workers throughout London, urging the necessity for large and liberal aid. Thousands of relief tickets have been sent out for wise distribution by experienced visitors. Here are samples of the many cases for which help is desired:—

One man has been out of work since June 13; he has a wife and five children—one in arms.

Another has been out of work since the beginning of August; he has been sold out for rent, and with his wife and three children are now living in a little back room, bare of furniture of any kind. The children have to go to school many a morning without a bite of food and with little prospect of faring better at dinner-time.

I found (says a worker) a most respectable family who last week had only two dinners—each consisting of two pennyworth of sheep brains—for the lot. The children are famished. Our children's free dinners are just commencing: what can you do for us?

I was so thankful last night that I had a few still remaining of your lodging-house tickets. I found a family—once in fairly comfortable circumstances—tramping about with no hope of a shelter for the night. The father seems to have done all he could to obtain work, but so far in vain.

The London Samaritan Society can reach and relieve such cases by supplying clergymen, ministers, mission superintendents, city missionaries, Scripture-readers, Bible-women, and other workers with tickets, that can at once be exchanged for food and shelter. The tickets are varied. One represents a shilling's-worth of groceries; another a loaf of bread, a cwt. of coal, a cup of cocoa and bread, or a night's lodging. Comprehensive arrangements have been entered into in all parts of the Metropolis, so that the poor people find the tickets negotiable in whatever district they may reside. The simplicity and convenience of such a system are apparent; at the same time it affords no temptation or opportunity to waste money in drink.

In Homerton and Hackney the Society is also doing an extensive work. Children's free dinners are commencing for the winter. These are an untold blessing to hundreds of starving and destitute children, who come from far and near for a warm and nourishing meal. The tickets are placed in the hands of teachers, who take care to distribute them only to those in real want.

For the adults the Sunday morning free breakfasts and free suppers are commencing. To hundreds these are the only "real meal" enjoyed in the week. After "feeding the hungry" the workers see to it that the poor thus assembled have the Gospel preached to them.

The distribution of clothing, too, must not be overlooked. Men and lads frequently cannot obtain work by reason of their dilapidated attire; more frequently still, children cannot attend school for lack of boots and decent clothing of any kind. When such cases are brought before the Society, inquiry is made, and if the results be satisfactory the necessary clothing is provided. Many friends might co-operate in this branch by giving out the contents of their lumber-rooms and sending cast-off clothes to the Society.

The Convalescent Homes continue their admirable work. At Sandgate there are three Homes, and at Bournemouth one, providing altogether 185 beds. These have been well patronised the whole year round, and have proved an unspeakable boon to convalescent poor, just emerging from sickness, and sorely in need of seaside breezes to recruit them for the battle of life. The Home at Bournemouth is much too small for the demands upon it, and steps are being taken for building a larger Home (at the cost of £5000) on a site close by the sea. Many hospital superintendents and others have expressed their high sense of the importance of these Convalescent Homes for the poor.

All information as to the work of the London Samaritan Society may be had of the director, Mr. John James Jones, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E.

A DAY ON THE THAMES.

RECENTLY I had the privilege (writes a correspondent) of going afloat with one of the agents of the Thames Church Mission, to obtain a glimpse of the work of that excellent Society. We embarked on board the missionary's skiff at London Bridge Pier, and ten minutes' rowing brought us alongside some half a dozen Dutch luggers. These trade regularly to the Thames with cargoes of eels, and lie in a row opposite the Custom House. Catching sight of the missionary on the outside craft, the men belonging to the other vessels at once deserted their duties and made their way towards him. Then came requests for "little books with the good news." These Dutchmen have a remarkable reverence and love for the Word of God, and many of them are most exemplary Christians. Regularly at every meal a portion of Scripture is read.

A delightful incident occurred here. While the missionary was having a homely chat with those who had gathered around him, the skipper of one of the luggers, a man with a weather-beaten face, and grey, grizzly beard, who appeared to be between sixty and seventy, pressed through the little crowd, and with a cordial, "Good morning, my old friend," thus addressed the missionary in broken English: "I want you to bring me a new Bible; one with large print. The one I bought from you eighteen years ago, which has been a great comfort to me, is worn out and dirty, and so I want you to fetch me another. But, oh, I've derived many and many a blessing from the old one." The missionary having spoken a few words on the love of Christ, the old Dutchman followed them up: "We're always glad to see you, because you preach the grand old truths of the Gospel. In our country they are trying to preach away the Atonement, but we don't believe in that. We love our Saviour Jesus Christ."

On boarding a large cargo and passenger steamer, which half an hour later started on her voyage to the Continent, the captain, a fine, happy-looking man in middle life, descended from the bridge and heartily greeted the missionary. "You are always welcome here. Go forward and speak to the lads; they are just having dinner. We will be under way in a few minutes, and I don't know when you may have another opportunity of a yarn with them. I know they are always benefited by what you say." To the fo'c's'le, therefore, we proceeded, and found about seventeen or eighteen sailors and firemen, busy with forks and knives. We were heartily welcomed, and, as if afraid that they might miss what they called their "usual yarn," the missionary was reminded that he must not "lean on his oars," but put on "full speed ahead." Then for a few moments my companion, who is himself an old salt, simply and clearly told the men of Jesus and his love, of sin, and salvation. All seemed deeply impressed. The Saviour was not without followers in that fo'c's'le. There were there, I learned, at least half a dozen Christian men, several of whom had once been down in the lowest deeps of sin, but who have now become, as most sailors do when converted, zealous and successful workers. We were informed that, with one exception, every man on board, captain and officers included, is a total abstainer. Such a crew is seldom to be met with on the Thames.

This reminds me that temperance work has its place in the Thames Church Mission; every member of the staff is a blue ribbonist. The missionaries carry the Bible in one hand, and the pledge-book in the other; and they frequently have the gratification of taking five or six pledges on one vessel.

And so from vessel to vessel we went, the man of God meeting with the same hearty reception on all hands. Tracts and Gospels were distributed on every ship, and when time and circumstances permitted every man was spoken to. We came across several men who gladly acknowledged that one of the missionary's fo'c's'le yarns was the first link in the chain of their conversion. Your readers would scarcely believe the number of Christian and teetotal sailors now to be met with. And yet they form but a unit as compared with the vast multitude still under the influence of the evil one. That these may not perish in their sin, "but have everlasting life," is the object of the Thames Church Mission. Truly it deserves the prayer, the sympathy, and the support of all who love the Lord Jesus Christ?

A new steam launch, the Edward Auriol, was dedicated to the work of the Mission, by the Bishop of London, last week, at the Temple pier, in the presence of a large and influential assemblage of clergy and laity. The Bishop, who is much interested in the work of the Mission, delivered an eloquent and touching address. The cost of the new steam launch is £975. An offertory realised the sum of £84.

Miss Daniell's Soldiers' Homes.

LAST year's work in connection with the several important efforts which have grown out of the late Mrs. Daniell's Mission to Soldiers at Aldershot is reviewed in an interesting report just issued by Miss Daniell from the London Soldiers' Home, 170, Buckingham Palace-road. During last year a little Home at Windsor was added to the list, bringing the number up to seven. The definite object of the Mission—the winning of souls to Christ—has been constantly kept in view, and, as heretofore, those who have lent a helping hand have been greatly encouraged by seeing the fruit of their labours.

There have been many difficulties and delays in obtaining a suitable site for the London Homes, but at last an admirable one has been secured, and it is hoped that building will soon be begun. Gifts and promises have been received for £3400; but altogether upwards of £8000 will be required to cover the cost. The branch Homes at Chatham, Colchester, Manchester, and Plymouth have been blessed to many, and the several village missions continue their good work. Realising the great importance of her undertaking, Miss Daniell says that she feels more and more the need for the strength which comes from God. "If ever, during these twenty-six years, the prayers of the Lord's people have been needed, it is now. So we say, with all our hearts, and from the very depths of self-despair as we look upon this extended field of work, 'Brethren, pray for us.'"

MALTA SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' INSTITUTE.—Since the return of the Fleet and the coming to Malta of the Border Regiment, the work of the Lord in this Home has been greatly revived. Mr. W. Boyle, the Scripture-reader, writes that in his district there are three regiments and two batteries of Artillery, besides a large Hospital and the Home. He would be very glad of a further supply of tracts, and also newspapers, for the reading-room of the Institute, in 104, Strada S. Lorenzo.

For the Young.

A BOOK OF REMEMBRANCE.

I want you to come with me to a grand palace close to the banks of a beautiful river. It is the home of one of the greatest kings that ever lived. He is ruler over a hundred and twenty-seven provinces, reaching all the way from India to Egypt. The palace courtyard is paved with marble, red and blue, white and black. Inside all is on the grandest scale, even the bedsteads are of gold and silver. But, with all his power and wealth, the king's life is hardly safe. He has enemies among his own servants; and, if we listen, we shall hear two of them plotting together to stab and kill him.

The two conspirators try to get one of their fellow-servants to join them; he is a foreigner who was captured in war, and is now in a position of trust at the entrance of the palace. He might join in the plot, and thus get back his liberty, and return to his native land. But, no, he will not be a traitor to his king; but, like a faithful servant, he sends him warning of his danger.

An inquiry is made, the two men are found guilty of high treason and condemned to death, and the king has an account of it written in his book of remembrance, with the name of Mordecai, the servant, who has saved his life. That is the only reward Mordecai receives at present for taking the king's side, but the day is coming when his life will be saved through his name being written in the book of remembrance.

Have you who read this had your name written in the book of life? Perhaps you say, "I don't know." Well, ask yourself the question, "Have I decided for Christ? Am I on the King's side?"

Satan's servants are often plotting against the King of kings, and they come and ask us to join them. What do you do when selfishness and envy whisper in your ear, or when deceit and untruth invite you to join them? Do you say, "No, I am on the King's side—I belong to Jesus"?

If you have really chosen for Christ, then you can be quite sure that your name is written in his book of remembrance.

Some time after that plot, the king took into his favour a bad, proud man, named Haman, and set him above all the other nobles and princes. As Haman passed by the palace gate, the king's servants always fell on their faces before him—all, except Mordecai, whose rule was, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve."

Haman was full of wrath at this insult, as he thought it, and determined to take vengeance on Mordecai and all his countrymen, the Jews. So he went to the king and persuaded him that it would be a good thing to slay all the Jews, because they obeyed not his laws. By this falsehood he got the king's consent to arrange to slay all the Jews in all parts of the world on a certain fixed day eleven months later.

Letters were sent in different languages to the governors in all the different countries for this cruel and spiteful object. But even this did not satisfy Haman; he had not patience enough to wait eleven months for vengeance on Mordecai; so, by his wife's advice, he had a gallows made seventy-five feet high, and decided to go to the king next morning and ask his consent to hang Mordecai at once on the gallows.

But on that very night the king could not get to sleep, and, feeling somehow uneasy, he ordered someone to come and read to him to pass the time. It was not by chance, but by the good providence of God that the servant happened to read from the king's book of remembrance the account of his danger from the plot of which Mordecai had warned him.

The king asked, "What honour or reward has been given to Mordecai for this?"

"None, your majesty," answered his servant. Just at that moment, in the early morning, Haman came in, so the king asked him, "What shall be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour?"

Haman naturally thought that the king meant himself. Here was a grand chance of feeding his pride and vanity. He replied, "Let the king's royal robe of purple be put on him, and the king's crown on his head, and let him ride on the king's own horse through the city, while one of the princes goes before him proclaiming, 'Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delighteth to honour.'"

Then the king said to Haman, "Make haste. Take my royal robe and crown, and put them on Mordecai, the Jew, and do just as you have said."

Haman's heart sank within him, but he had to do it. He dare not utter a word now about the gallows, but he had to walk through the streets and proclaim before Mordecai, "Thus shall it be done to the man whom the King delighteth to honour." That same day the king found out that his own wife, Queen Esther, was herself a Jewess, and that Haman's plan to kill all the Jews was all out of spite. His servants pointed out to him the lofty gallows too which Haman had prepared, and the king at once gave the command, "Hang him thereon."

Fresh letters were hastily sent to all the provinces bidding the Jews everywhere defend themselves from the attack of the enemies whom Haman had stirred up against them, and thus they were all preserved.

In this story we see a picture of our own safety and sure reward if we are true to Christ.

Those whose names are in God's book of remembrance may pass through trials and dangers, but God does not forget them; but one day they shall put on the King's robe of righteousness, and receive a crown of life. But while the honours bestowed on Mordecai lasted only for a time, those that we may gain last for ever; and while his name was proclaimed by the king of a grand earthly city amongst his fellow mortals, the Lord Jesus has promised to the one who is true to Him, "I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels" (Rev. iii. 5).

"Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before Him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels" (Malachi iii. 16, 17). H.

CHILDREN'S SPECIAL SERVICES.

Mr. Pewtress, of the Children's Special Service Mission, has concluded a week of special services among the scholars of the Upper Holloway Baptist Sunday-school. Every evening the schoolroom was crowded to excess. The services were bright and happy, with plenty of singing. The addresses were simple, interesting, to the point, and set the way of salvation clearly and forcibly before the children. The after-meetings gave an opportunity to the teachers for personal conversation with the scholars. It was a work much prayed over beforehand, and will be long remembered by all the workers. Many children professed to give their hearts to the Saviour during the week.

DO THE RIGHT, BOYS.

Have courage, boys, to do the right!
  Life's battle must be fought,
And those who strive will win the fight,
  Success cannot be bought;
For cowards ne'er can win the day,
  Nor men who idly pace,
'Tis only those who work away
  Who gain the foremost place.

Have courage, boys, to do the right
  In every little thing!
No sin is small in Heaven's sight,
  And trouble sure 'twill bring.
The wise and good can safely stand
  Where others surely fall,
For goodness strengthens every hand,
  And makes strong men of all.

Have courage, boys, to do the right!
  Be bold, be brave, be strong!
By doing right we get the might
  To overcome the wrong.
'Tis only those who evil do
  That feel a coward fear,
So let your lives be good and true,
  And keep your conscience clear.

Have courage, boys, to do the right,
  Like heroes of renown;
For only those who bear the fight
  Can hope to wear the crown.
Let manliness your standard be,
  Nor heed the scoff and jeer;
Seek after truth and purity,
  And holy, filial fear.

Have courage, boys, go on and win;
  Walk in the good old way;
Strive day by day to conquer sin,
  And ever watch and pray:
Success will come; still persevere,
  And keep the prize in sight;
Held from on high your heart will cheer
  While fighting for the right.

HOMES FOR THE AGED POOR.

The Hon. Secretaries of these Homes send some interesting information as to the work and needs of those for whose well-being they are solicitous These Homes have 111 inmates. To provide a quiet resting-place in the evening of their days for such aged ones the object of the Homes; the streams of applicants for admission, with their pitiful and well-authenticated tales, reveal the need of this and similar charities. In the eight Homes at present open, a peaceful old age is enjoyed. A room is provided rent free, where the inmate can come and go at pleasure, where the spending of the small income, and the keeping clean of the room, afford as much occupation as the strength permits. Aged couples, widows, widowers, and spinsters are all among the number. As a rule they most fully appreciate their surroundings.

There is great need during the winter season for coal to be provided, and help to be given in sickness both in nursing and extra comforts. Fifty tons of coal are needed to supply the old folk with fires. The Homes may be visited by any friends interested in the aged between the hours of three and five. They are situated at 25 and 27, St. George's-road, Notting-hill; 7, 9, 11, 15, 17, Minford-gardens, West Kensington-park; and at 65, Walterton-road, St. Peter's-park, Paddington.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR:—FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Situation surveyed, Defects disclosed, and the Church recalled to her Lord's Instructions.

II.—The Available Resources.

LET us marshal the forces the Church has, or seems to have, for the colossal task we have considered. WHAT ARE HER RESOURCES AND POINTS OF ADVANTAGE, as usually enumerated by mission writers and speakers? In scanning them let us separate the seeming from the real, and reckon not upon that which, wearing the outward guise of an ally, is after all a foe.

First and foremost there is preparing, if not ready, for the emergency, A GREATLY AROUSED CHURCH. A profound conviction prevails that "the crisis of missions" is upon us. The rustle and stir and preparation are everywhere heard. They are the uppermost topics in religious gatherings. This interest has produced, and has in turn been forwarded by, missionary conferences, and a vast amount of periodical and other literature. It has given birth to a world-embracing monthly Review, enlisting that rare combination in periodical literature, the highest talent united with the deepest consecration of life and heart-loyalty to Christ. Eminent representatives of foreign mission advocacy and effort on this side the Atlantic have lately been preaching the quickened missionary crusade in America, while equally honoured workers from that side have been fanning the flame in the churches of Great Britain. Thus the Church seems to have shaken off the sleep of ages.

She marvels that the quickening of life in the Reformation did not bring a quickening also of intelligence as to her real errand to the world. She thinks with sorrow upon these three lost centuries. She is ashamed that it has taken a century to don her armour and find her implements of war; and even yet she has misgivings lest she be not panoplied as her Lord and Leader requires. Is this, she asks, after all, like David trying on Saul's ill-fitting armour? If so, it is better left, though it look so well to human sight. The sling and stone of God's appointment alone can bring the victory.

Now that the Church's true work is so coming to the front, and enlisting sympathy where a little time ago lethargy only was seen, the danger is great, lest, as the movement widens its area, it should decrease its depth. Hitherto a degree of courage and personal conviction has been required in those who have sustained the cause at home, or pressed to the front abroad, which will become diluted and weakened as missionary work becomes the fashion among the many; and for the reason that "the many" are not above the low level of worldliness and spiritual weakness that too evidently prevails in all churches.

Over this aroused interest a shadow rests, which touches the heart of our ultimate and main subject. It concerns another force available for the conflict. It is the existing missionary agencies, methods, and operations, with their home and foreign appliances—the channels which the river of missionary activity and needs has cut for itself. For a time, hardly-entertained doubts were hesitatingly and covertly alluded to, but now they find expression in such strong sentences as that uttered at the late World's Conference by one of the best known and most worthily esteemed of its leaders—viz., "There is something radically wrong in the prosecution of foreign missions."

There are many indications of a wholesome shaking of present methods, that those things which cannot be shaken may remain. In America, a series of kind but strongly written pamphlets, by an esteemed veteran from the field, have for some years stirred the more thoughtful to consideration. A wholesome agitation against evident mistakes of administration, and upon questions of economy, was long maintained by an ably-conducted Quarterly, whose editor recently passed from the scenes of earth. On every hand it is being asked, "What is wrong? Why, with such a plethora of money in the Church, is there such a stagnation in the stream of supplies? Why are results so meagre abroad? Why is not the Pentecostal power of the Spirit with us as of old? The triune God is the same; his heart of love is unchanged; the Gospel is still mighty; the nations need it, ah, unutterably! the dumb white lips of their need parting in mute appeal.

Very various suggestions are made. Our religious papers teem with them. Many look to the increase of machinery. Others propose expedients to get willing workers into the field, and have them supported. All of these plans are more or less divergent from existing methods. An international, inter-denominational committee on missionary comity, and for a general advisory oversight and stimulus, is hinted at. Some of these ideas are good; many of them might be utilised; but none touch the real difficulties, save in a superficial way. Behind all, and deeper than all, is the need of power. Of course everyone will admit this. But do all see that the hindrances to power are somewhere and somehow in the existing state of things? Perhaps excision of unhealthy growths rather than stimulating tonics is needed. May there not be some "right hands" or "right eyes" to be parted with?

In this connection a significant indication of the times is a STRONG TENDENCY TO ESTABLISH AGENCIES IN ADDITION TO THE OLD DENOMINATIONAL SOCIETIES. Thus, at the last two Keswick Conventions, pledges were made to send out and to sustain workers. Colleges, Associations of different kinds, individuals, groups of friends, Conferences on both sides of the Atlantic, follow in the same line. Is this a disintegrating process? Or is it the new life outgrowing the garments of childhood? Does it indicate a popular questioning of old methods, or a providential bringing-in of a new and better way?

Another force of great importance is THE NEW ARMY OF MISSIONARIES being enlisted. The numbers willing to go are rapidly approaching in volume the numbers already in the field. But here our riches embarrass us. How can these workers be sent, and sustained? Even if they were all in the field to-day, how inadequate they would be. We are confronted by the solemn fact that were fifty thousand missionaries set down among the heathen nations to-morrow, supplied with every material need, and in possession of the difficult languages that have to be acquired, the results would be utterly disappointing, unless these labourers should rise in spiritual vigour far above the level of the fountain-head from which they come—the churches at home.

"This is a most stimulating book. It sparkles with heavenly light, and glows with heavenly fire from beginning to end. We honestly and heartily recommend it."

In the first part he exhibits 'Christ Lifted Up' on the cross; and deals in an inexpressibly sweet and tender manner with the words and spirit of Jesus while nailed to the tree. In the second part, Christ risen from the dead, and exalted to the right hand of the throne of God is evidently set forth before our eyes. In both sections there is much sound exposition, and the book from beginning to end sparkles with fresh, and beautiful, and inspiring thoughts."

MORGAN & SCOTT'S UNABRIDGED EDITIONS OF

Cruden's Concordance

TO THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

ALL the Editions described below contain 757 pages, 2270 closely-printed columns, and about 250,000 references. A special feature is The List of Proper Names, newly translated by Rev. ALFRED JONES, M.A. This portion of the work is strictly copyright, and can only appear in Morgan & Scott's Editions.

Respecting the New
List of Proper Names,

The Baptist Magazine says:—

"A valuable Appendix: in which we have, first, a list of all the Proper Names of the Bible in Alphabetical Order, with their meanings in the original; and, second, mention of the various places in which they are found. This Appendix has been supplied by Rev. ALFRED JONES, M.A., and is scholarly and trustworthy. It will greatly increase the usefulness of this valuable work."

Respecting Morgan & Scott's
Cheap Portable Edition,

Rev. C. H. SPURGEON says:—

"Messrs. Morgan and Scott are resolved not to be beaten, and so they have produced a portable edition of 'Cruden's Concordance' for 3s. 6d. It is the same as usual, with the Apocrypha left out. This omission we look upon as a gain rather than a loss. Nobody should now be without a Concordance: which is to the Bible-reader what a foot-rule is to a carpenter, or a chain to a land-surveyor. For the sake of all the poor parsons in the three kingdoms, we feel grateful to Messrs. Morgan and Scott. How they can issue such a book at such a price we cannot tell."

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.
PORTABLE EDITION. 3/6
STRONGLY BOUND IN CLOTH BOARDS.

"This Edition is, to our mind, the most marvellous production of cheapness and good value that has ever emanated from any publishing office. It is a most valuable work, well bound, and most perfect and complete in every particular."
The Protestant Standard.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.
PORTABLE EDITION. 7/6
HALF CALF, MARBLED EDGES.

"This PORTABLE EDITION of 'CRUDEN' is a marvel of cheapness, compactness, and clearness. A good Concordance is needed by every reader of Holy Scripture; and 'CRUDEN' will never be excelled or superseded."
Methodist New Connexion Magazine.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.
POPULAR EDITION. 5/-
PRINTED ON SUPERIOR PAPER.
STRONGLY BOUND IN CLOTH BOARDS.

"What a boon to poor preachers of the Gospel! We need not say a word to commend 'CRUDEN'S' priceless work. Young men can now for a crown purchase a copy of the best Concordance, whereas not long ago we thought ourselves fortunate if we could pick up a second-hand copy at that rate."
The Sword and Trowel.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.
PRESENTATION EDITION. 7/6
HANDSOMELY BOUND IN
CLOTH BEVELLED BOARDS, GILT TOP.

D. L. MOODY, after recommending the purchase of a good Bible, says: "Next I would advise you to get a 'CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE' and a Scripture Text-Book. These books will help you to study the Word of God with profit. If you have not got them, get them to-morrow; for every Christian ought to have them."

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.
LIBRARY EDITION. 10/6
STRONGLY HALF-BOUND IN LEATHER.

"We should suppose that no minister is without a copy of 'CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE'; but it is just as useful to the local preacher, Sabbath-school teacher, and intelligent Christian. Every Christian home ought to have a copy."—Oldham Chronicle.

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.
ILLUSTRATED EDITION. 10/6
With 12 Exquisite Steel-plate Engravings, and 6 Beautiful Coloured Maps.
CLOTH BEVELLED BOARDS, GILT TOP.

Rev. Dr. J. L. PORTER, Professor of Biblical Criticism, Belfast, speaking of the Engravings says:

"I have examined with care the views for Biblical illustration. The engravings are very beautiful. In clearness, accuracy, and general effect they surpass, I think, any I have seen."

SEARCHING THE SCRIPTURES

Preachers and teachers will find it a treasury of thought, beautiful expositions, and fruitful suggestions. The volume is nicely got up, and is suitable for a prize or a present."—Oldham Chronicle.

Travelling Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association.

BY REV. JAMES CULROSS, D.D., M.A.

President of Bristol Baptist College.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

A SKETCH OF THE CHARACTER, WRITINGS, THEOLOGY AND INFLUENCE OF THE BELOVED DISCIPLE.

With two Chromo-lithographic Views.

Presentation Edition:
Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

Rev. C. H. SPURGEON says: "Preachers abound; but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter; but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. James Culross; and in his work entitled 'JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED,' we have found a book. One of the excellences of Dr. Culross is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way."

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."
The Sword and Trowel.

Cheap Editions: Tinted covers, 2s.;
Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT EPHESUS.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Presentation Edition:
Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"The glow, as from a golden sunset, which the imagination sheds over the author's style, gives it a great charm.
The British Messenger.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly; these latter adjectives we find it impossible to use concerning many of the devotional books produced in our day. Because we may honestly use them in this case, we heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."
The Sunday School Chronicle.

Cheap Edition: Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.

"BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR, AND KNOCK."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT LAODICEA.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Presentation Edition: Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

"Two evils are obvious enough among us—Ritualism and Rationalism. But there is a third, more terrible and more insidious than either of these—the Laodicean spirit, with its blended lukewarmness and pride. It is this spirit that Dr. Culross examines, describes, and rebukes. All who admire the author's insight, his delicacy of perception, his felicity of language, his broad and tender sympathies, his grasp of great truths, will welcome this volume."—The Freeman.

"Another 'gem of purest ray serene' from the deep waters of our brother's teeming mind. He possesses a ripeness of thought and a beauty of expression which, in our judgment, are scarcely equalled, and in one instance surpassed, by those of any other living teacher known to us."
The Sword and Trowel.

In this country very few books, except the "Pilgrim's Progress," have been so largely circulated or so widely read as BOGATZKY'S "GOLDEN TREASURY." In addition to the issue of BOGATZKY in the ordinary form, the Publishers have also produced an Edition, ARRANGED AS A BIRTHDAY BOOK, a form in which it is believed the volume will be welcomed by many. In this "BIRTHDAY" Edition four additional pages are introduced at the close of each month's portions. These extra pages are arranged with thirty or thirty-one blank square spaces —one for every day of the month. Each of these squares is adapted for receiving four entries; consequently, the total number of names which can be inscribed in the special pages of the "Birthday" Edition amounts to OVER FIFTEEN HUNDRED.

It is not homiletical; although the seed-corn for dozens of addresses are contained in its brief compass. As the movement grows in popularity, and as the candidates for service multiply, their quality is liable to be of an inferior kind. Experience has shown that thus far the best of the home workers do not go abroad; though there are notable exceptions. The Church has pitched her tents in the low-lands of worldly conformity. Can the foreign contingents fail to exhibit the weaknesses of those who breathe a faith-enervating atmosphere? The entire company of the faithful must climb up the mountain slopes where God's Abrahams stand with Him; they must leave to the nominal and the false the plain and its cities, which are near destruction. Spiritual youth passed in these pure elevations would issue in a rugged manhood, fitted for the task of evangelising the world. Such workers, with cleared vision, would discern, and enter upon, the manner of life that alone fulfils the apostolic conditions on which the Spirit can be mightily bestowed. An eminent advocate of missions writes in a late number of The Missionary Review:—

> I am painfully conscious that the occupation of the world-field, vast as it is, is not a matter of numbers. There is an enthusiasm of mere numbers that is often misleading and mistaken. God can work by a few humble, faithful, consecrated souls better than by a vast host of nominal disciples.

There are other items on the list of the Church's estimated resources, which will next occupy us.

A Missionary.

A WIFE'S CURE.

We were the only occupants of the hotel parlour in a small town of Southern Michigan, each awaiting trains which were to bear us in different directions, and we talked together as strangers will, idly, inconsequently, with no thought of aught more than to pass the time as little monotonously as possible—certainly with nothing of real interest in one another beyond the companionship of the passing moment. But some things which were said to me by this plain, unpretending little woman, who bore me company for a few hours that now far-away morning, still remain among the most vivid of memories, and it is with the hope that they may convey to other young wives a suggestion of value that I herewith pass them on.

We had been speaking of the universality of the tobacco habit, and of the tendency of men soon after marriage to fall into the practice of spending their evenings away from home, the objective moral being, of course, the idle, dissipated habits almost sure to result.

There was an odd little twinkle in her eyes as my companion remarked—

"If, when first married, women would do as I did, such practices might more often be prevented than they are."

Seeing my look of inquiry, she continued—

"On our wedding day I took my husband apart, and made to him what I called a declaration of principles. I said to him that it was my purpose to make his conduct my guide in all respects: that in our family there should be no separate standards, and whatever he would think right for himself should be right for me also. Somehow, he seemed not to have expected so much complaisance on my part, and to his masculine vanity my proposition was most enchanting. That I might be aiming at anything in particular seemed not to occur to him—men are so deliciously stupid at times," and the little woman leaned back in her chair, and laughed heartily as she thus recalled how completely her husband of a few hours had mistaken her meaning.

"But," she resumed, "all went serenely, until, one evening when we had been married about three weeks, and were nicely settled in our new home. That day I had made a little errand of my own down street, the purpose of which I had not taken pains to mention. Supper was over, the shades drawn down, the lamps lighted, and we had seated ourselves for an evening of reading and sewing, when my husband took up his pipe preparatory to his usual evening smoke. Seeing this, I calmly drew from my own pocket a pipe which I began to fill with tobacco exactly as he was doing. He stopped, and looked at me fairly aghast.

"'Why!' he exclaimed, as soon as he could catch his breath; 'what are you going to do?'

"'Nothing much,' I answered sweetly, 'only going to learn to smoke with my husband. You know that I promised to make your conduct my guide, and you have appeared to get so much solid comfort out of your evening pipe, that I have quite longed for the time when I could join you,' and with that I coolly struck a match, and placing the pipe in my mouth, proceeded to take a whiff.

"Evidently this was an interpretation of masculine guidance not expected, and my poor husband was too astounded to say a word. After fingering his pipe a trifle irresolutely a moment or two, he rose, and, taking mine from my lips, laid them both on the tray, remarking: "'Well, I guess we'll not smoke together to-night,' and resumed his seat and his book.

"The evening passed pleasantly enough, but with never a word on the subject which was uppermost in both our minds. But the next evening, and for many thereafter he laboured hard to cure me of my strange conception of wifely duty. Ridicule, persuasion, argument, were exhausted in a vain endeavour to make me see that any habit of his could be wrong in me. I was very stupid. I did not want to be any better than he was. Other wives might set up a separate standard for themselves; but I could trust my husband to do right, and I would pattern after him.

"I have often wondered," said this little woman, with an amused smile, after a moment of retrospective silence, "what my husband really did think of me in those days. I was so insensible to all arguments, so absolutely calm in my conviction that what he did was altogether right, that he was fairly driven to his wits' ends with me. He could not get angry, because anger must have something of its own kind to feed upon, and through it all I remained as serene as a May morning.

"One day he made a final appeal. 'Smoking,' said he, 'will give you an offensive breath, which will be disagreeable to me.'"

"'Not more so than yours will be to me,' I replied; 'and surely you would not object to that in me of which I would not presume to speak on your part!' This was unanswerable, and so he gave over the contest.

"But, as I well knew, the real tug of war was yet to come. We had been married nearly two months, when one evening my husband appeared more than usually restless, and after taking up his book and laying it down a number of times, he said he 'believed he'd go down and spend an hour with the boys at the grocery, if I didn't mind.'

"'Not in the least,' I answered cheerfully. 'I will go too!'

"'Why,' he exclaimed, 'it is not a proper place for you. There will be no ladies there!'

"'All the more reason why I should go,' I said. 'Any place that is fit for my husband is fit for me. I will go with you, and together we may succeed in making the grocery as popular a place for the wives of the village as it seems to be for the husbands,' and so saying, I tied on my hat, turned down the light, and led the way to the door.

"My husband hesitated for a moment, then seeming to determine to put my resolution to the test, he followed me out. All the way down the street I chatted away as though the thing upon which I was bent was but an ordinary transaction, and neither paused until we were at the very door of the grocery—in reality, a grocery and a saloon combined—and my husband's hand was upon the knob. Then, turning to me, he said—

"'You still persist in going in with me?'

"'Why not?' I innocently answered. 'It looks pleasant in there, and I'm sure we'll have a nice time.'

"His hand dropped to his sides, and with a muttered ejaculation, which was not exactly pious, he turned homeward."

"But would you really have gone into that saloon with him?" I asked, wondering what amount of resolution there could be within one woman's soul.

"Most assuredly," she replied. "I felt that my husband's future manhood was at stake. I could not draw back. However," she continued, "to make a long story short, I kept right along on that line, never dictating or remonstrating with my husband as to any course of conduct he might choose for himself—all that I asked was the privilege of following his example. The result has been just what I intended. We have been married over three years, and through fear of leading his wife astray my husband was long since cured of all inclination to drink, smoke, or spend his time with idle companions.

"But to this day," she said in conclusion, with a ringing laugh, "to this day, I do not know whether my husband thinks me incapable of appreciating the proper distinctions of conduct for men and women, or if he suspects that once upon a time I indulged in a bit of dissembling for his good."

Just then our trains arrived, and we two women parted as we had met, strangers, ignorant even of one another's names; but as my train steamed away from the village, I thought, "Oh, that other women were more often as shrewdly wise as she."—Union Signal.

A PRAYER

For all Christian Ministers of every section of Christ's Church on Earth.

[Inserted by Request.]

O Lord, our heavenly Father, we lift up our hearts to Thee, in humble but earnest prayer, on behalf of all the ministers and stewards of thy Word, of every section of thy Church on earth, as well as for all missionaries at home and abroad, all Christian agencies, and every individual effort put forth in thy name for the good of mankind everywhere; that Thou wilt be pleased to pour out thy Divine blessing upon them, that they may go forth in the power of the Holy Ghost to proclaim the glad message of repentance and salvation to every creature. That they may the more effectually do this, we pray that they may be united in Christian love and duty; that, soloving each other for Christ's sake, they shall put forth the right hand of fellowship to each other without envy or jealousy of any kind, but rejoicing in the work of each other's hand, they shall help each other. Then shall the outside world, seeing this, believe, and be converted, and live; then shall peace and joy, truth and happiness, religion and piety be established among us. Seeing we ask it all for Christ's sake. Amen.

The Turning of the Tide, 1688.

A TRUE TALE OF THE COVENANTERS.

Being Extracts, hitherto unpublished, from personal narratives of James and Elizabeth Nimmo.

VIII.

HAVING married him with her eyes open to the persecutions she might have to share with him, Nimmo's brave wife has no thought of shrinking from her duty to join him as soon as he sends for her. In the end of April we find her in Edinburgh; nor has she long to wait for a personal experience of suffering for conscience' sake. Most unexpectedly a rigorous search is made by the authorities for intercommuned persons, and those found to have harboured them are severely punished. The landlord of the house next to that in which they lodge is taken to prison with a man found in it, and their landlady implores the Nimmos to leave at once. After finding shelter with a friend, Nimmo has to flee again alone. He starts for Berwick, "not knowing a foot of the way, or having a single friend there," hoping to get to Newcastle, and thence escape to Holland. He dares not attempt to do so from Leith, so closely are vessels searched lest any of the intercommuned should escape from the country by that port.

Immediately on reaching Berwick (where he is warmly received by Godly sympathisers), we find him going out of town to attend a field meeting; but when about to start for Newcastle, news arrives of the arrest there, on board of a vessel about to leave for Holland, of several Scotch gentlemen, Covenanters, who are sent as prisoners to Edinburgh, and Nimmo finds it expedient to hide in the neighbourhood of Berwick "with honest Mr. Reston." When he desires, after a week, to pay for bed and board, this good man refuses to accept any money, and consents to do so, at last "with tears in his eyes," only at Nimmo's urgent request, the latter knowing that the old man can ill afford to keep him as a guest.

After a time he sends for his wife, on hearing that she "lived in such terror in Edinburgh, that the sight of soldiers, or the noise of a drum filled her with fears." Before her arrival he is again in great danger, search parties being sent out almost daily to apprehend men in his position. "Some flee one way, some another, and some are taken." He and his landlord hide in the fields one night, and in the morning he is told of his wife's arrival at Castlehills, near Berwick, where he meets her. Her own account of her experiences in Edinburgh is brief, but very significant. She writes:—

"Coming to Edinburgh April 27, I met with sore trials, and much terror was on my mind with all the trouble that was upon me. But the want of faith was the thing the Lord did contend with me for; this, indeed, was my sin. Oh, how terrible was the fear of man, and what would I have given to have had peace and quiet in my mind, but I had none, night or day."

Frequently changing their quarters, Nimmo and his wife remain at Berwick, or in the neighbourhood, escaping discovery we are not told how, though hearing every now and then of one friend or another captured, but often in straits for want of means, as his father can spare but little for their support.

In April, 1684, they are greatly cheered by the unexpected arrival of their friend Mr. Hog, banished from Scotland by order of the Council. Not long afterwards, when he and Nimmo are lodging in the same house in Berwick, the gates of the town are closed, and the soldiers proceed to search every house very thoroughly. Nimmo writes: "They began at the house next to that in which Mr. Hog and I were, and went round so as our house was last—a mercy also. Mr. Hog went to a closet, behind a hanging, and I went up to a little place made for doves, above a fore-stair, where I could sit or lie, but not stand; and so we were in prison till they went the round of the place. Against they came to the house it was growing dark, and they were much fatigued. Mr. Harry Sheil, our landlord and true friend, met them at the entry, and said he judged they were weary; would they take a bottle of his ale? To which they willingly agreed, and he did carry pleasantly with them, and diverted them for some time, and told them an old woman, his mother, lived in the lodging beside him; if they pleased, they might go in and see if there were any others there, which they refused, saying they would not trouble the old gentlewoman; and so they were gone. Immediately the landlord came to Mr. Hog and me and took us in his arms with as much joy as if he had got a prize, and said that all was over; and so we mercifully escaped."

But soon affliction reaches Nimmo from a quarter wholly unexpected by him. He writes:—

"Nov. 5.—I got word that my father was taken, and in prison for me;" and, in addition to this trial, he learns that some friends in Edinburgh are obliged to go into hiding on his account. Very touching are the notices given in his diary of his extreme distress under this new flood of trouble, and of his humiliation under the chastening hand of God. He tells us that some of his letters to his father, having been found in the latter's house when unexpectedly visited and searched one night, his father was taken as a prisoner to Edinburgh, and brought before the Council. He adds, "After reading the letters, one of the Lords smiled, and said to my father, 'If ye had obeyed your son, you would not have been here' (for I had said in the end of each letter 'read and burn'); but although there be nothing in them against the King or us, yet ye are guilty of converse with your son, and must go to prison.'"

In the following sentences Nimmo gives an insight into the sensation created in Berwick by the news of the death of the King:—"About the beginning of February, 1685, King Charles dying upon the 7th (without any knowledge of his sickness to us), about the 10th, at night, the gates of Berwick were shut, and proclamation made by tuck of drum that none, after such an hour, should be out of their houses, under pain of death, which begat a great and surprising consternation in most of the town, and many apprehended a massacre, for the Governor and several officers were Popish. Ammunition was taken to the streets and the whole garrison was in arms all night. When, at supper, some came in, we desired them to take some meat, they insinuated that they would never eat more. However, my wife and I took supper, and watched at the window all night by turns. Then next day King James was proclaimed, and we were told Charles was dead."

About the end of this month he hears that his father has been set at liberty, for which Nimmo is made with his whole heart to bless the Lord. But this year brings such fresh trouble upon the land that he has once more to take flight, and, leaving his wife and infant son in Berwick, he lives in concealment in country places for many months, seeing them very rarely, much broken in his own health, and exceedingly tried by the continued ill-health of his wife, and the alarming illness of their child. At length, in November, he manages to bring them to Edinburgh, and with great difficulty gets them on board a vessel bound for Rotterdam, where they arrive in safety on December 4.

It is worthy of mention here, in evidence of the attachment of many members of the Brodie family to the cause of the Covenant, that Brodie of Milntown was fined £10,000, Brodie of Windyhills £3333, Brodie of Lethen £40,000, one of his brothers £18,722, and another brother £333, all in this year 1685, for refusing what was called the Test Act.

The year 1685 had found in Holland a large number of fugitives from persecution in Scotland. These were located chiefly in Leyden and Rotterdam, where they formed Scotch communities, mainly composed of people of the educated classes, as there were men and women of rank amongst them, lairds of many acres, advocates from Edinburgh, merchants from Glasgow, and many ministers of the Gospel. During that year their number was largely increased, under the tyranny of James II., and yet fell very far short of the mass of Huguenots who sought shelter in Holland when driven from France by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. So great, therefore, is the demand for accommodation, owing to the immense influx of strangers into Rotterdam, that, on the arrival of the Nimmos towards the close of the year, they meet with much difficulty in securing even a single room in which to dwell, but they are most warmly welcomed by friends who had escaped before them, and they now most thankfully enjoy a rest "from the terror by night and the arrow that flieth by day," such as they have not known for years.

But their lot continues one of great trial, as they are entirely dependent for support on the elder Nimmo, and so great is the difficulty of procuring remittances from Scotland that they are frequently reduced to straits of poverty, which prove their faith to the utmost, their narratives recording repeated instances of remarkable answers to prayer in help reaching them when most urgently wanted, but least expected. The difficulties arising from their poverty continuing of the gravest kind, Nimmo ventures back to Scotland alone early in 1688, to see what prospect there may be of his living there in less danger than when he fled from it in 1685, and eventually writes to his wife that she may join him as soon as she can find an opportunity to come in a vessel for Leith. In this she succeeds, though not without much difficulty, and in the summer of 1688 Nimmo, with his wife and their two children, are living, hiddenly, in a house in the Grassmarket, Edinburgh.

But the darkest hour that precedes the dawn had passed, the tide of persecution had reached its highest, and was stayed at his bidding who saith to the sea: "Hitherto shalt thou come, and no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed;" and the tyrant whose cruelties had driven into exile so many of his innocent subjects, was himself to be driven into exile at the command of the King of kings.

Nimmo thus describes his situation when the day of deliverance arrived, and some of the events in Edinburgh which marked the time.

"July, 1688.—Albeit I needed to be cautious as to my safety, yet there was not that violence of persecution. King James resolving on smooth methods for some time. Yet I caused speak to some to see if my full liberty could be procured, but they durst not engage therein, and even some of my near relations refused to converse with me for fear of after trouble.

"But it pleased the Lord to open that wonderful door of deliverance Himself, by that glorious providence of the Prince of Orange, landing in England about November 4, which freely loosed all our bonds as to that tyranny and oppression we had long groaned under. Let that day never be forgotten by fearers of God, and good Protestants, for it was a day of the rejoicing of their hearts.

"Now, having heard of the Prince, his making ready to come over, about the middle of October I ventured to go to see my father at his own house at Boghall, and passed that winter sometimes with my wife, sometimes with him. And albeit all in England submitted to the Prince, yet Duke Gordon, our Popish Governor of Edinburgh Castle, thought fit to hold out, which obliged the Prince to bombard and cannonade the same. And we living in the Grassmarket, where we could hardly go out or in but in view of the Castle, and they having killed some persons in the street, our friends were pressing for our removal from thence. As also Captain Wallace kept the Abbey, with the foot guards, as long as he could, which worked the minds of several against him, and particularly the college youths, and apprentices, with some others. These went down in a body to require his leaving the Abbey, which he refusing, and they pressing forward, he caused fire on them some small cannon, loaded with small shot, and killed and wounded many.

"This so exasperated the whole town, as well as the relations of the boys killed and wounded, that the boys and others left called for assistance by beat of drums through the whole town, who next night went down, assisted by the magistrates and town guards, who obliged Captain Wallace to leave his post and flee. The boys and youths entering went immediately to the Abbey church, where King James had made much preparation for his idolatrous worship, and brought out all that was there, and burned and broke down the same; and went to several Popish houses, and took what Popish idols and trinkets they found, and burned the same, for there was now a wonderful forwardness in most, and none durst oppose, for there had been fear of massacres formerly."

(To be concluded.)

MISSIONS TO INDIA.

DEAR SIR,—My former letter has led to many inquiries about evangelistic work amongst the Gonds in India. To prevent disappointment, will you allow me to inform my correspondents, and others who may be thinking about the subject, that we do not propose to form a new society, but hope that churches, Young Men's Christian Associations, or a body of Christians in a town, will send out evangelists as soon as suitable men present themselves—men who have been thrust out by the Lord of the harvest as his labourers.

The following from a correspondent is very cheering. It is also very important, as it indicates an earnest desire on behalf of the Lucknow Missionary Conference to co-operate and welcome a distinct evangelistic mission, which must become a very valuable auxiliary to the present station and educational work in India. —Yours truly, J. GELEON GREGSON.

EXTRACT.

The October meeting of the Lucknow United Mission Conference was held in the Lal Bagh Home. A resolution was passed expressing sympathy with the proposal to send out single missionaries two by two to live in the villages on a reduced salary. With many others, we stayed an additional day at Lucknow to attend this Conference, and, by arrangement with the secretary, I got an opportunity to speak of the missionary enthusiasm in England and America, and of your special proposal to send out evangelists at £5 per month. Mr. Cooper having been in Cawnpore with Sydney Smith, several had heard of him, and Mr. Maxwell, who was at Cawnpore, moved the resolution of sympathy, and Mr. Tracey, of Etawah, had previously given me a cordial invitation to Mr. Cooper or any other young man, or more, to share his large bungalow during the absence of his family in America.

REV. HUBERT BROOKE.—The trustees of St. Mary's Episcopal Chapel, Reading, have appointed Rev. Hubert Brooke, late of Liverpool, successor to Rev. G. J. Tubbs, resigned.

IT IS A CURIOUS FACT, says Dr. Cuyler, that several of our finest hymns have been composed with no thought of their ever becoming world-wide favourites. Ray Palmer, when a young man, carried "My Faith looks up to Thee" in his pocket book for a year before he ventured even to print it; Bishop Heber threw off "Greenland's Icy Mountains" for a missionary service, and Dr. George Duffield wrote "Stand up for Jesus" to be sung at a Sabbath-school anniversary. One of these is the finest missionary hymn, another is the finest soldier's hymn. Dr. Hopper's sailor hymn, "Jesus, Saviour, pilot me," is, in its way, a match for them all. It will be sung in many a forecastle and in thousands of sanctuaries around the globe.

MR. HASLAM AT PLUMSTEAD.

REV. WILLIAM HASLAM has been twice before at St. James's, Plumstead. His efforts have on each occasion been greatly owned in conversions, and in helping to assurance those who had already believed. These, his old friends, all flocked around him recently, together with many new ones from far and near. The Soldiers' Home at Woolwich, and Miss Russell's Mission Hall in Plumstead village, both sent their detachments, while others came from Blackheath. The chapels and churches were equally represented.

The Sunday congregations were very crowded, and indeed those in the week were little behind them. Mr. Haslam addressed women in our large hall, where also large audiences testified great interest. Believers were much refreshed, and teachers were glad to learn from one who is a veteran in experience and courage.

PARIS CITY MISSION.

THIS Mission desires to maintain an English missionary who would visit not only the neglected class of coachmen, stablemen, and grooms in Paris, but jockeys and stable-lads at Chantilly and La Morlaye, where English services are held by Rev. Wm. Gibson and voluntary helpers, £50 per annum is necessary. At La Croix St. Ouen, near Compiègne, there are about one hundred Englishmen with their wives and children. There are many stables and establishments where horses are trained and young boys are taught to ride as jockeys. These men and boys do not speak French, and are left to themselves, receiving no religious instruction whatever.

Efforts are being made to hire a room for Gospel services, also to teach the children. An Englishman is ready to give his whole time to visit the three stations of Chantilly, if the means are forthcoming. The secretary is Mr. W. J. Lockie, 71, Rue des Batignolles, Paris.

AT WORK IN PARIS.

DEAR SIR,—God has given us great spiritual blessing in our work lately. Some of the ignorant and superstitious among the Romanists have come into the clear experience of salvation by faith, while many lukewarm or backsliding Protestant Christians have been brought back into liberty and power, and are now helping to save others. We rarely hold a meeting without experiencing that God's power is present to heal.

We are about to open a missionary temperance restaurant in the Rue Clairant, Batignolles, Paris. Good food will be supplied at cost price, but there will be neither wine nor beer on the premises; nor will any business be done on Sunday. We hope thus to accomplish a double end. (1) To enter our protest against the prevailing Sabbath-breaking, which is one of the greatest hindrances to evangelistic work here; and (2) to prove to the people that food may be enjoyed and strength sustained without alcoholic stimulants. In connection with the restaurant there will be a large hall, open every evening for evangelistic services. Christian friends will also be in attendance each day to give away Gospels and copies of our Bonne Nouvelle at all the tables. The first expenses will be very heavy, and the difficulties great. French people have yet to learn that it is possible to dine without wine; and teaching is slow work when the appetite is in conflict. The Sunday closing also will be a great hindrance. The sole responsibility rests upon us personally. We undertake it in full reliance upon God for the supply of our need.—Yours truly,

HELEN W. GIBSON.

CRIMINALS AT SUPPER.

THE annual supper given by the St. Giles's Christian Mission to men and lads of the criminal class came off on Friday last in the Mission Hall, Little Wild-street, Drury-lane. Over two hundred sat down to a substantial meal, which all seemed to enjoy right heartily. The company included some men whose looks plainly showed that they sadly stand in need of pity and help such as the Mission seeks to extend to their class. Many of those present had only been punished once for some trifling offence, while the lads had as a rule been rescued from being branded as criminals by magisterial orders under the First Offenders Act. On the whole, the behaviour of the company was highly creditable, and an intelligent interest was taken in the proceedings at the public meeting afterwards held.

Mr. GEORGE HATTON, superintendent, made an encouraging statement as to the Mission operations. During the year about 18,000 prisioners were discharged from the four Metropolitan prisons; of these no fewer than 15,200 accepted the invitation of the officers of the Mission to a free breakfast, and 5400 signed the pledge. Besides these 7548 were assisted in other ways. The LORD MAYOR delivered an address, which was highly appreciated. He showed that of late years there has been a great diminution in crime, and this he attributed mainly to the advance of education. Tracing crime to its source, he indicated poverty and drink as the principal causes of law-breaking, and his statements on this point were emphatically echoed by the guests of the evening. Along with the advance of education, however, there has been the coming into existence of such societies as the St. Giles's Christian Mission, of which the Lord Mayor spoke in terms of warm approval and cordial sympathy. He went on to advocate reform in the method of punishing criminals, maintaining that their work in prison should be such as will enable them to earn an honest living on their discharge.

Mr. HOWARD VINCENT, M.P., who has for several years been present at the supper, followed with a few remarks, giving the men some sound advice—to profit by education, keep away from the drink, and keep out of debt, which means out of danger. Mr. J. A. PICTON, M.P., spoke a few words on the folly of a rebellious life, and the nobility of straightness of character. Mr. W. FOWLER, formerly M.P. for Cambridge, was loudly cheered, on declaring himself a teetotaller of many years' standing. He gave up intoxicants on realising the true force of the Apostolic words: "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth." Mr. O. V. MORGAN, M.P., another total abstainer, having addressed the meeting, Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE made a loving appeal to the men to take Christ's hand, and follow his leading. He spoke very highly of the Mission, which he called a most Christlike institution.

In a brief address, Mr. W. WHEATLEY, who has charge of the prison department of the Mission, rejoiced to state that many more employers of labour have recently intimated their willingness to give a chance to discharged prisoners. Bringing the meeting to a close, the Lord MAYOR intimated that, if blessed with health during his year of office, the poor and other needy classes shall have his constant attention and service. Several substantial sums in aid of the funds of the Mission were acknowledged.

"A SPHERE IN SOUTH INDIA."—With reference to a communication bearing this title, which appeared in our issue of November 16, we are informed that the statement that the late Rev. H. Baker, of the Church Missionary Society, combined coffee-plating with his ministerial work at Pir Merde, Travancore, is incorrect. Mr. Baker used to visit Pir Merde regularly, but he was never a coffee-planter, although one of his sons was.

Mission Work in South Africa.

During my recent pioneer visit to South Africa, of all the towns I visited Kimberley was the most remarkable, but awfully degraded by the cursed drink and its accompanying vice—immorality. Since the discovery of the diamond fields, some nineteen years ago, the natives have come in large numbers from all parts of South as well as from Central Africa, to work in the mines. As a rule, they remain from six to twelve months, and then return to their respective tribes, in many cases taking with them the evil habit of drink, and disease, common to immorality, both learnt from the white man!

In the great bustle and eagerness of making money as quickly as possible, these poor natives have been, comparatively speaking, left altogether to themselves with respect to religious instruction, except the colonial natives, who belonged to some Christian church or other before they came to the diamond fields, and who in course of time formed themselves into small churches here and there, and were afterwards taken over by their respective denominations. No wonder the poor native, after having stayed here for some time, and acquired the vices of a so-called civilisation, returns to his native country ten times more a heathen than when he came to the land of the white man. In many cases he is ruined for life by this liquor traffic, which, in the way it is carried on in the diamond fields, is a disgrace to any civilised, not to say Christian, community. It is not an unusual thing to hear that eight or ten dead bodies of natives, who died from drink and exposure, are picked up about the mines in a week's time. Saturday being pay-day, the cursed canteens all over the place are swarmed with these poor natives.

The greatest enemy that Christian Missions in South Africa has to cope with is this liquor traffic. A bottle of wine (brandy) can be bought in Cape Town district for 1d. to 3d., and in the Kimberley district for 6d. to 1s. While travelling with Mrs. Osborn and Mr. Howe, after we had left Towse River, we counted for miles and miles by the railway track a broken bottle every twenty-five yards!

The mining companies, seeing their industry suffered heavily on account of this trade (for the native will not work as long as he has money to spend on drink), and also to stop illicit diamond buying, have lately erected large enclosures in which their native labourers are now compounded. They contract to work for three, six, nine, or twelve months, and to be compounded during that period, and are thus kept out of temptation's way. These compounds are fitted up with sheds built against the high walls, with verandahs in front. They have a fine store, a well-furnished hospital, swimming baths, a mission and school house, &c.

The Wesleyan missionary took me over, and spoke in glowing terms of their eagerness to listen. Among more than two thousand compounded, the majority are heathen. He told me how they were constantly coming and leaving, and so could carry the glad tidings to the seven or more tribes represented. "We have room," he said, "for two hundred native missionaries here and in the other compounds, if the money only came in." I met one or two native Christians doing a quiet work, and when they read the Bible they soon have a circle of natives sitting round and listening. White men can go in and out by pass only, but natives must be compounded. Native missionaries could work occasionally, and give a good deal of their time to the Lord's work.

My friend, Rev. A. P. Kriel, Dutch Reformed minister, has employed two for the last three months with great success, at a cost of £5 10s. each, i.e., £22 per annum. He has promised, providing I send him the money, to engage more, to see they are men of the right sort, and look after them until I have returned. He is a most godly man, an earnest evangelist, and known to Rev. Andrew Murray. I am most anxious to send him out £100 to set four to work at once, and should I receive more, would set others to work in other compounds.

In time I hope to see an English missionary stationed there, who would work on undenominational lines, superintend the native missionaries, visit the locations (native), hospital (native wards), and jail, but the cost of living is high. Meanwhile, Mr. Kriel will act for me and with me.

I hope to return in August for a life work in that colony, taking up Mrs. Osborn's work, as she cannot stand the heat, and adding many new branches to it as God enables me. My heart ached as I looked at these fine fellows reeling about by the score, and I blushed to think Christian England had introduced this curse, and is forcing it on her coloured subjects. I say "forcing it," for the liquor laws are more than lax, and no duty is paid by the manufacturer. A wonderful work is to be done all over the colony, and the rush for gold in the Transvaal is only increasing the field of labour. As the door may open I would be so glad to speak on the needs of South Africa at conferences and other meetings. Meanwhile, I cry to God to send the money to enable me at once to employ native missionaries. Oh, for a breath of Heaven's power through that vast colony, and for men who are willing to go out in faith, with hearts burning with divine love! W. Spencer Walton.

Messages from the Grave.

We append the greater portion of the two letters written by the late Dr. William R. Summers, whose lamented death we recorded last week. The first was addressed to Mr. S. J. Mead, Angola, and the other to Mr. H. Chatelain, one of his fellow-missionaries, who is at present in Switzerland.

Luluaburg, March 3, 1888.—Just a line, as a messenger has just turned up, and is off to Malange now, waiting only for me to finish writing. You see I write badly; you must excuse me, I am very sick. In fact, I have little hope of many days. Phthisis or consumption, the disease from which my mother died, has caught hold upon me, my temperature every day reaching about 103 or 105 degrees Fahrenheit, and this now for months. I can do nothing but see and think, can't walk, nor work, nor write; so am in a pretty bad state. My school at Chinyama's is building, but I can't take much count of it. Without regard to treatment, everything is bad—temperature, moisture, food; everything bad, so my condition is not enviable.

Well, I just wish to say that utterly neglected by my friends, I have a Friend who sticketh closer than a brother, and He says continuously to me: "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." Now, this is better than other friendship, and this Friend is better than other friends, the most beautiful among ten thousand, the altogether lovely. "Lo, I AM with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Yes, Lord, I am sensible of thy blessed presence, and it's better than a thousand of earthly friends. So we walk together, Jesus and I, and I am not lonely, blessed be God. I can't write more, so excuse me.

Your brother in Christ, and for Africa,
W. R. Summers.

Luluaburg, March 30, 1888.—My dear Brother, your letter of November, 1887, to hand two weeks ago. I cannot join you in England simply because I cannot leave here, I have not a cent in the world; then, how foolishly we talk of such a thing. I can't get to Leopoldville under 50 dollars, and then what am I to do? Walk to the coast? I can't walk a mile, I'm broken down in body. My daily maximum temperature is 103·3 to 105 degrees Fahrenheit, and min. 101 degrees, and this I have had for four months! I ought to be away, but I can only stop and push on till God restores me or calls me. I am going ahead with my work. I have a nice three-roomed cottage, with verandah all round and large portico for prayers, finished; and my large school-house and store and private house are progressing. Maize, millet, and beans planted, too late for other things. If I leave here, and do not put a teacher in charge, my ground reverts to the State. So you see my position is not enviable. If I die my ground goes to the State; so I need a lively faith to keep on expending what little I have in building; but God has a plan and I don't know it, but I am sure He will work out the thing all right in the end. His word to me is: "Be still and know that I am God." I'm learning to be still, and I'm knowing more and more of God, and can trust Him more and more every day.

I do wish you had been coming to give me relief, but you will be too late. I wish for your trip a brilliant success. Open your mouth, God will give you words, and you will get enough help to come back decently. I have things of value here—my cattle—but can't sell for cash (and there is no rubber worth speaking of at present), and besides, I always reserved them to sell to the Bishop when he comes, as he will not be able to buy others at any price. I have a little ivory, 40 dollars—50 dollars near the coast, but here they won't buy for money. I have a magnificent collection, perhaps worth 500 dollars or 600 dollars, when I get to Europe!! and so on. But I have no cash. I wish you could send me £3, as a loan, in French money, to pay for my ground and survey. I will have to pay when the return European mail comes. My papers go by this mail to Brussels, where they will be definitely signed, and I have to pay on their return here. So you see what a big difficulty is in front of me; but, like all others, God will clear it. If you can do this, you will oblige me much. I may be able to return the cash before end of year. God bless you, and give you good health to push ahead in the name of Jesus and win souls to Him. My love to your mother and brothers, and remember me to your sisters.

Yours for ever in Christ and for Africa,
W. R. Summers.

Mr. Chatelain writes to us:—"In a letter from the Governor-General of the Congo Free State, I have received some details concerning Dr. Summers's last days. After removing to his own station at Chinyama's, far from improving, Dr. Summers got worse, and when the steamer arrived at Luebo, the chef advised him to embrace the last opportunity of getting right away. The doctor started on May 20; on the 24th he was very ill; and on the following day he could not speak. On May 26 his lifeless body was conveyed back to the station, and within twenty-four hours interred at Chinyama's." Mr. Chatelain adds: "In one of his last letters, Dr. Summers asked me to collect and publish his MSS., if he should not live to do it himself. I am now trying to get at his papers and carry out his desire." Mr. Chatelain's address is La Ferrière, Basel, Switzerland.

PERSECUTION IN RUSSIA.—Religious persecution (says The Queen) is going on in the dominions of the Czar. The fate of the Jews in Russia is known to all the world. Recently the Lutherans of German descent in the Baltic Provinces were made to realise the value of religious liberty as it exists in other countries; and now it is the turn of the Roman Catholics to illustrate once more the blessings of paternal régime. A number of Catholic families have been ruthlessly, and without cause assigned, expelled from their homes and possessions in Poland, and conveyed to the interior of Russia. The object, it is said, was solely religious, to compel them to embrace the orthodox faith.

OBITUARY.

MR. JAMES PASCOE, OF MEXICO.

This well-known missionary expired on November 28, at Southport, after much suffering. We recently notified our readers of the sad circumstances under which Mr. Pascoe returned to England, as it has proved, speedily to die. In an early issue we hope to give his portrait and a sketch of his important life-work.

REV. W. E. RICHARDS, SOUTH PACIFIC.

Information has been received of the death, at Raiatea, Society Islands, Polynesia, of Rev. W. E. Richards, of the London Missionary Society. He was ordained in June, 1882, and was first sent to Madras, as head of the Society's high school there; but, after successful work, his health broke down, and he went to Sydney for a change. Here he was married, in March, 1885, and directly afterwards he and his wife sailed for Raiatea. Their work there has been abundantly blessed, though much hampered by the circumstances of the French occupation. Mr. Richards, who was but 33 years of age, leaves a widow and one child.

MR HENRY THORNE has resigned his post as Travelling Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in order that he may be quite free for evangelistic work.

ENGLISH SUNDAY CLOSING BILL.—Dear Sir,—As Mr. W. H. Smith has repeated his promise that he will this Session provide a day for discussing the second reading of Mr. Stevenson's Bill for stopping the sale of drink throughout England during Sunday, may I earnestly ask your readers to pray that God may incline our legislators to pass this measure. All electors should write to their representatives and urge them to be present and support the Bill.—Yours truly,

Kendal. E. Whitwell.

TRACTS FOR SOLDIERS.—Mr. R. J. Masters, 327, Vauxhall Bridge-road, S.W., writes:—We should be extremely thankful for a liberal supply of Gospel papers and tracts just now for the missionaries who visit the barracks daily. If your readers would send us one hundred copies of The Herald of Mercy monthly it would be a real boon. Small Gospel books, such as "Gripping and Slipping," and illustrated narrative tracts, are always valued. Money sent to me would be laid out to the best advantage.

BARBICAN MISSION TO THE JEWS.—Sir,—I ask the attention of your readers to the very sound, important, though unobtrusive work carried on by means of this Mission by its earnest and painstaking secretary, Rev. P. Warschawski, ably assisted by his wife. This Society is doing a good work. Upon the last Tuesday of each month a Bible-reading is held at the house of Mr. Warschawski, 11, Toniano-avenue, Camden-road, who will welcome cordially all friends of Israel, and to whom any contributions may be sent. Having seen something of the worth of the Mission and its conductor, I could not help adding my testimony.

Holloway. G. C. W.

MR. WILLIAM NOBLE has recently held successful and useful meetings at the Notting Hill Tabernacle, Herne Bay, &c. On Friday last he spoke to the students from four colleges at the New Hackney College, Finchley-road. The meeting was presided over by Rev. Mr. Sharp, of Hampstead, and was very largely attended. This is a hopefel sign for future temperance work in the churches. On Monday Mr. Noble was at Balham, on Tuesday at Hastings, Wednesday at Reading, Thursday at Cheshunt, and to-day (Friday) at Finsbury Chapel. Next week he speaks at Wandsworth, Exeter, Plymouth, and Torquay. On the 17th he gives his "Night with John B. Gough" at Finsbury Chapel.

Rev. W. J. Mayers will preach and give addresses as follow, on behalf of Dr. Barnardo's Homes, during the present month:—December 5, 6, 7, 8, Liverpool; 9, 10, 11, 12, Stockton-on-Tees; 13, Sunderland; 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, Newcastle-on-Tyne; 19, Markham-square Congregational Church, Chelsea, 7.30 p.m.; 23, Kingston-on-Thames; 25, 26, Edinburgh Castle, Limehouse, E.; 30, Agricultural Hall, Islington, 3.30.

Romanists in China.—The Romish Church, says a contemporary, is manifesting unwonted activity in central and western Chek-Kiang in seeking to proselytise native Christians of the Protestant faith. They diligently visit the houses of the converts and argue, offering many substantial rewards in return for adherence to the Popish faith. The priests do not hesitate to add falsehood to argument.

The Book World.

* Prices of books sent for review will be given if stated.*

"Frocks;" or, The Rector's Charge, by A.E.G., is a book that may with advantage be placed in the hands of any lad starting out in life; if he heeds the lessons which it contains, he will, like the hero of this story, find favour with God and man. (1s. Jarrold & Sons.)

The Minister's Diary and Visiting Book. 2s. Hodder & Stoughton. This book is well fitted to serve the purpose for which it is intended, but we are not sure that all purchasers will appreciate the necessity of carrying fourteen advertisement leaves always about with them.

Many besides young people might derive great benefit from reading the story of Harry Adair and his Blind Mother, by Georgiana, Countess of Seafield. 1s. 6d. Passmore & Alabaster. The narrative, apparently a true one, is touchingly pathetic, and the tone and sentiments are devout and elevating.

The Spell of Ashtaroth. By Duffield Osborne. 5s. Sampson Low & Co. This is a tale of folly, with the scene laid in the land of Canaan in the days of Joshua. The drift is not to point a moral lesson, and, as the author's acquaintance with Oriental antiquities is very faulty, the book can hardly prove useful, although it has a certain entertaining charm.

The Little Woman in Grey. By Charles R. Parsons. 2s. 6d. Drummond's Tract Depôt. Scenes and incidents in home mission work are here presented in the form of a very pleasant story. The book has its lessons for earnest workers as well as its interest for those who get no further than reading of what others are doing.

That Bother of a Boy, by Grace Stebbing (3s. 6d. Jarrold & Sons), is the expressive title of a record of the doings and misdoings of Ted Carmett, whose inextinguishable humour of a powerfully practical sort sorely tried the patience of the household of which he was an important member. The story is very cleverly worked out.

The Nurse's Companion in the Sick-room, and Invalid Cookery. By Mary Davies. 1s. each. Virtue & Co. Amongst the many dietary and nursing manuals extant, we have seen few, if any, that equal the series of which these two form a part. They are practical, useful, and economical; but so simple that every housekeeper or nurse should make a point of possessing them.

The Least of all Lands. By William Miller, C.I.E., LL.D. Blackie & Son. These seven chapters on the topography of Palestine in relation to its history are so well written that a deep interest is kept up in the writer's narrative from the first line to the last. Principal Miller's advice to those who visit the Holy Land, and who wish to see it as it is, is worth the consideration of travellers.

Having expressed at the time of its first publication our very high estimate of the genuine worth of Mr. E. J. Mather's Nor'ard of the Dogger (5s. Nisbet & Co.), we are uncommonly pleased to record the issue of a new and revised edition, making the thirteenth thousand. That is an encouraging fact, but we shall not think the book has met with its deserts till it has reached its thirtieth thousand at least.

The Popes and the Hohenstaufen. By Ugo Balzani. 2s. 6d. Longmans. Another volume of the excellent "Epochs of Church History" series, edited by Professor Mandell Creighton. The period traversed by the book is undoubtedly one of the most striking in the history of the Papacy of the Empire; for, as the author well says, their struggles far exceeded the thoughts and aims of the combatants, and hastened a marvellous development of change and progress in Europe. The facts are brought together with much care, and the story is told with great clearness.

The House and its Builder. By Samuel Cox, D.D. 2s. 6d. T. Fisher Unwin. Most of the sermons in this volume are an attempt to reconcile the existence of evil, physical and moral, with the goodness and supremacy of God. They are thoughtful, of course; and are written in Dr. Cox's clear, easy, interesting style. The author's exposition of Rom. viii. 18—27 contains much that is good and suggestive; but the "reasonable faith" to which he aims to conduct the doubtful does not satisfy our judgment. It is easy to deride "dogmas," but they are an essential part of New Testament religion, and are not to be lightly rejected.

The C.M.S. Pocket Almanack and Calendar is specially suited to the requirements of the clergy, containing a variety of useful matter, without being in the slightest degree cumbersome.

John Ploughman's Almanack (1d. Passmore & Alabaster), as usual, shows Mr. Spurgeon at his best. His store of wise and witty sayings seems inexhaustible. In sheet almanacks there is none to compare with this.

As New Year booklets, Rev. J. T. Wrenford, of Newport, Mon., has written The One Body and The Christ Life. The former is "A plea for Christian unity," a much-needed and timely word of counsel. They may be had respectively for 6d. and 3d. per dozen. (Partridge & Co.)

"What can I do?" By Rev. Dr. Pentecost. 2d. Morgan & Scott. A little book specially prepared for circulation amongst professing Christians at the commencement of a series of evangelistic meetings. It points out, in Dr. Pentecost's forcible manner, what each can do towards securing good results.

Songs of Love and Joy. 6s. H. J. Drane, Paternoster-row. This is really an exquisitely designed volume of Dr. Horatius Bonar's poems, each page being beautifully embellished with flowers. In the crowd of fancy books this stands prominently forth—in fact, it surpasses any we have seen of the kind.

Disabled City Missionaries. Once more Mr. Weylland has taken up his sympathetic pen, and in a little book called "Weary" has pleaded the cause of his special protégés, the veteran workers of the City Mission, who have worn themselves out in its Christian service. Copies of the pamphlet may be obtained at the Mission House, 3, Bridewell-place, E.C. (1s. per dozen, post free.)

The Personal and Pre-Millennial Coming of our Lord. 1s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. This volume contains the papers read and addresses delivered at the Convention held at Edinburgh in October last. Taken as a whole, the utterances were fully worthy of collection in this permanent form. That which has been Apostolically designated the "blessed hope" may well be given special prominence at the present time, when many disciples of Christ join with the scoffers in asking "Where is the promise of his coming?" We trust these pages will be as profitable to the reading public as the Convention itself proved to many who attended its sessions.

The People of the Pilgrimage. Second Series. By Rev. J. A. Kerr Bain, M.A. 6s. Hodder & Stoughton. As an expository study of the Pilgrim's Progress, the plan of this book is novel. Under the three divisions of Helpers, False Pilgrims, and Enemies, are grouped all the people whom Bunyan introduced into his allegory; and each character is subjected to a most careful study. The author displays sound judgment, clear insight, and originality, as well as depth of thought; and his book is the result of painstaking, patient toil. It is a most excellent work, full of interest and suggestion; and will repay diligent study. The allegory itself is made more valuable by such an exposition.

From the Cross. By Lady Beaujolois Dent, with Preface by Rev. Fred. Whitfield. Messrs. Nisbet & Co. A series of valuable Bible-readings on Leviticus, in which, as the title implies, the "Gospel according to Moses" is clearly set forth. The writer has a thorough grasp of the subject, and by a judicious use of capitals and italics conveys plainly to the reader the main points of each chapter. No small addition to this precious little book is a striking preface on Atonement truths by Rev. F. Whitfield. It has seemed to us that Christians who, by prayer and study, master Leviticus and Hebrews, are least liable to modern heresies, and are the safest guides of others. "From the Cross" corroborates this opinion.

The Five Talents of Woman. By the Author of "How to be Happy, though Married." 6s. T. Fisher Unwin. Mr. Hardy says that the proper study of man is woman, and he practises what he preaches. The five talents he here assigns to the gentler sex are "pleasing, feeding, clothing, keeping orderly, and teaching people." In proving his points, he appears to scan the whole horizon of feminine life, and it is not easy to take rational objection to much that he says. Certainly no woman, young or old, who carefully and prayerfully peruses this most attractive volume, can fail to be the better fitted for life's duty and destiny, whatever these may be. If, as the author thinks, man ought to study woman, it follows, of course, that this handbook should form a part of his curriculum.

Bible Studies: (1) Studies in Mark; (2) Studies in Jewish History. The International S.S. Lessons for 1889. By Dr. Pentecost. 4s. Hodder & Stoughton. A decidedly able and useful book, written with clearness and painstaking carefulness. We do not recommend it to the average Sunday-school teacher, except for private and personal study. It is very deficient in illustrations. While the whole treatment of the various subjects dealt with makes it suitable for grown men and women rather than for children, teachers of elder boys and girls, and of Bible-classes, should get great help from it. We specially commend it too for the purposes of private study. Lay preachers should look out for this book; it will give them abundant matter for thought and use.

A Manual of Introduction to the New Testament. By Dr. Bernhard Weiss. Translated from the German by A. J. K. Davidson. Vol. ii. 7s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. Messrs. T. & T. Clark must look to their laurels as publishers of translations of foreign theological works if they are not to be a little supplanted by the new series of which the present volume forms a part. The first volume of Dr. Weiss's manual did not impress us as favourably as we had expected from the author's reputation, but the second is exceedingly able. It comprises "Introductions," to the Epistle to the Hebrews (Dr. Weiss inclining to the early tradition of its author being Barnabas), the Apocalypse, the Catholic Epistles, the Synoptic Gospels (which present problems of which Dr. Weiss has made a special study), the Acts, and, last of all, the Fourth Gospel. We are thankful that, though Dr. Weiss may still be fettered in minor details by rationalistic theories, he is on all the greater questions essentially orthodox, accepting, for instance, the Johannine authorship of the Fourth Gospel, and, as at least the most probable view, the Petrine authorship of the Second Epistle of St. Peter. He adds an appendix on the history of the New Testament text; but, though rightly advocating the excellence of Westcott & Hort's edition, it is unfortunately too concise a summary to be of much practical use.

RELIGIOUS TRACT SOCIETY.

Aunt Diana, by Rosa Nouchette Carey (2s. 6d.), is a bright, healthy story, portraying life at its noblest and best. Girls who are seeking "a mission," and girls who think they have found their mission, cannot fail of being helped a step higher by the wise and loving counsels of "Aunt Diana," and their fulfilment in the life of her beautiful niece, Alison.—All for Number One, by Henry Johnson (3s. 6d.), is a handsome book. While there are some good points in the story, we cannot help feeling, however, that the unpleasant, and afterwards ridiculous, character of "Old Smythe" had been better left undetailed; while "Skylark's" grammar will frighten careful parents.—More than Conqueror, by Harriette E. Burch, (2s.) makes a splendid book for elder boys. Good principle and bad, honesty and its reverse, God's love and the world's poor pleasure, are cleverly contrasted; and we hope many lads will read the story.—Dolly, by M. F. W. (1s. 6d.), is very good of its kind—and its kind is the watery, aimless novelette, without any positive ill, with some amount of truth, but with a lack of the true, spiritually good element.—Higher Up, by Nellie H. Ellis (2s.), is a sweet, simple story of two child lives, illustrating the truth, "A little child shall lead them."—Every Day, by Evelyn L. Farrar (1s. 6d.), introduces us to real children and good parents. The lessons taught are of the best kind.—Geoffrey Heywood, by Mrs. Cooper (2s. 6d.), is thoroughly interesting from beginning to end. Geoffrey is a splendid character; though many boys will prefer the daring Archie.

DECEMBER MAGAZINES.

The Friend of Missions has a well-considered paper by Mr. John Hilton on "Definiteness of Aim in Sunday-school Teaching."

In Scribner's Magazine Mr. Stevenson concludes his series of monthly papers with "A Christmas Sermon"—a familiar talk about happiness and duty.

"John Hampden's Country" is the subject of a very interesting paper in The Boy's Own Paper. "A Cruise in a Five Tonner" admirably describes the beauties of Poole Harbour.

Messrs. Ward Lock & Co. have commenced the monthly issue of Beeton's Boy's Own Magazine (6d.), "an illustrated journal of fact, fiction, history, and adventure." It is edited by Mr. G. A. Henty, the well-known writer of stories for boys.

The Young Man contains an article by Rev. W. J. Dawson, entitled "Wake up, Y.M.C.A." Some of the suggestions are worth considering, but certainly not all of them. The criticisms are candid, and expressed in friendly terms.

The Reporters' Magazine (4d. 5, New Bridge-street, E.C.) has a very interesting interview sketch, telling of Dr. Joseph Parker's pulpit methods, and various incidents of his preaching. Mr. Nankivell's shorthand caligraphy seems to get more and more beautiful.

Our Boys' Magazine, edited by University men, has many very attractive features; while instructive and entertaining, it at all times keeps the ideal Christian life well in view. It is published monthly at the offiice of the Children's Special Service Mission, Warwick-lane, E.C.

The Girl's Own Paper has a very important article, "Before and Behind the Counter," that deserves the careful study alike of ladies who buy and young women who sell. Household Harmony, the Christmas number of this serial, contains a full supply of seasonable literature.

The Century Magazine we have noticed elsewhere. Besides the article on the Holy Land, there is a finely illustrated paper on London. The instalments of the Siberian exile narrative, and of President Lincoln's life, are of unusual interest, and the number as a whole is one of great beauty and value. (1s. 4d. Fisher. Unwin.)

St. Nicholas provides a wonderful store of entertaining reading for the young, with exquisitely engraved pictures. But we must strenuously demur to the suggestion in one place that the dramatic representation of a sixteenth century Christmas is "specially adapted to a Church Choral Society, or to the elder pupils of a Sunday-school."

One of the most interesting among many excellent articles in The Quiver is Annie Beale's sketch of the different branches of work in connection with the Society for the Employment of Women in London. These include type-writing, wood-carving, engraving, type-setting, and literary work of various kinds. Another very readable paper is that which describes the adult Sunday-schools in Birmingham.

NEW YEAR'S ADDRESSES.

Among the customary issues for the New Year, we always look with interest for the suggestive and instructive brochures, published by Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co., of Rev. C. A. Fox, Miss Nugent, and Rev. E. W. Moore. These have now reached us, and are well worthy of circulation for the important truths they teach, and for the luminous manner of their telling.

Mr. Fox asks his readers whether they will choose "Withered Hands or Warriors' Arms." 2d. He shows that (as in his text, Mark iii. 4) there are many withered hands in our Synagogues now, and contrasts them with the warrior arms of faith, which take the five stones, worn by the action of the living water of the Holy Ghost, God is, God has, God can, God will, Goes does, and overthrow the giant.

Mr. Moore, on the same martial lines, writes Courage Wanted (1d.), which he discusses, with "Be strong and of a good courage" for his text, and enforces with Joshua for his illustration. This will be to many a key to the hidden treasures of the land of promise.

Miss Nugent's Folded Wings (6d.) leads us in an almost untrodden path. The open secret of the living creatures which Ezekiel saw remains to most an unopened secret. It is a wise word which their sister says to her fellow-workers: "Fold your wings and listen," for "there was a voice from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings," and to hear the voice of the Man on the throne is our supreme need.

ANNUAL VOLUMES.

Mr. T. B. Bishop's Annual, Our Own Mag. (2s. 13, Warwick-lane, E.C.), is a very pretty volume, and is a valuable repertory of evangelical truth, suited to the capacities of the young. With an excellent staff of contributors, the editor maintains a high tone and a living interest in the salvation and sanctification of our boys and girls.

The Welcome. Partridge & Co. Ever "Welcome," this old friend again introduces itself to our notice. Having followed its monthly career during the year, we are glad to see that such excellent contents are encased in such an appropriately beautiful cover. The reading matter is full of interest and profit, while the engravings can hardly be surpassed. It is a splendid gift-book.

The Mother's Companion (3s. Partridge & Co.) now completes its second year, and its contents fully justify its existence. It only needs to be widely known to become quite a favourite, for its illustrations and general contents are well up to the mark.

Home Words and The Day of Days (2s. each. 7, Paternoster-square) are each replete with good, interesting, and edifying reading. Rev. Charles Bullock has rendered good service to the home circle for many years in this direction, and we hope he may be spared to continue his useful work for many years to come.

Faithful Words keeps to the good old well-trodden paths, and gives prominence to narratives of conversion, Scripture exposition, and the records of missionary triumphs. It has many messages alike for old and young, and the annual volume will make a good gift book for a thoughtful young boy or girl. (2s. Alfred Holness.)

MUSIC.

Temperance Choruses. Part i. 1s. Curwen & Sons. This part contains thirty-two melodies set to temperance hymns, many of which are very "taking," and will prove a valuable adjunct to the work of Gospel temperance. Sacred Quartets, forty-eight in number (in one volume, 4s.; or separately for 1½d. each), will also find a welcome in the church and in the home. The fact that the music of both these collections is given in both notations will add greatly to their general usefulness.

Amongst other Christmas pieces just issued by The London Music Publishing Company (54, Great Marlborough-street, W.) we must especially mention the following anthems: "This Day is Born" (G. A. Macfarren); "Glory to God in the Highest" (S. C. Cooke); "Hark! Hear you not a Cheerful Noise?" (F. W. Davenport); "Balaam's Prophecy" (W. Spark), 3d. each, and "It came to pass as the Angels were gone" (A. Simms), 4d., all of which are thoroughly good and bright, and yet easily mastered. These, together with "Ring Out, Sweet Bells" (W. J. Westbrook, 1½d.), a very tuneful and pretty little carol, should occupy no mean place in the sacred music of the season. The Music-class, or Sight Singer, by Sinclair Dunn (1s., same publishers), will be found a useful manual of voice-training instruction and exercises.

Christmas Company, the Christmas issue of Mr. Jackson Wray's magazine Good Company, is a very excellent two pennyworth of story and song. Among the latter is one of Will Carleton's pathetic ballads. Woodford, Fawcett & Co.

Horner's Penny Stories. The two latest issues of this popular series are Bridget O'Mara's Secret, a tale of the Siege of Derry, and Through Weal and Woe, the story of an orphaned governess. There are no dull or frivolous pages in these excellent publications.

A Clergyman of the Church of England has written a brochure in answer to the question, Musical Service: is it right? The answer is an emphatic negative; it is strongly condemned as unscriptural, unreal, selfish, sensuous, worldly, uncongregational, unprotestant, and injurious to the ministry. 1s. Nisbet & Co.

Jesus is Coming. By W. Blackstone. 6d. Partridge. This is a new and enlarged edition of a book which has already had a wide circulation in many countries. Mr. Blackstone has exhibited a great truth with remarkable clearness, and his language ever reveals regard for Scripture, and love for those whom he wishes to instruct.

Text Cards. Some very attractive cards in chromo lithography are published by The Drummond Tract Depôt, Stirling. The shilling packets of six floral wall cards will be specially welcome in mission-rooms, homes, and other such religious institutions. The twopenny sheets of coloured reward cards, containing Scripture texts, are specially suited for Sunday-schools.

Christmas and New Year's Cards. Among the various issues that come before us at this season we would give a word of commendation to the numerous packets published by E. Kaufmann, 30, Paternoster-square, E.C. All these have pleasing and attractive designs: a special feature in the different series is the spiritual intelligence shown in the selection of texts and mottoes There are a variety of packets at 6d.; 9d.; 1s.; and 1s. 6d. A full list will be sent on application to the publisher.

Rev. Dr. W. M. Taylor, of New York, is the subject of the special illustrated sketch in The Quiver for December. The Doctor, it appears, is paid at the rate of £3000 a year, but he is supposed to entertain in a princely style the "leading merchants, lawyers, physicians, editors, and politicians," who form part of his influential congregation. Dr. Taylor says he has never regretted going to America; his influence has been greater there, he thinks, than it could ever have been in England.

Letters to the Editor.

THE C.M.S. AND ITS CRITICS.

SIR,—The Church Missionary Society has lately been subject to much adverse criticism, not merely from the open antagonists of missionary enterprise, but from some who are sincere friends of missions. Much misconception is prevalent regarding the Society's methods, and the results of its work. The unjust accusations of open enemies have been repeated over and over again, until some even of its friends have believed them, or at least been unable to suppress grave doubts regarding them. I am permitted by the kindness of the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN to make a few brief remarks, which I hope may tend to reassure the minds of some who have been perplexed.

Let me premise that we are at all times grateful for candid and friendly criticism from those who have no desire but the glory of God and the spread of his Gospel. We only ask that they first make themselves acquainted with the real facts of the case.

(1) It is said that there is an immense expenditure of money with utterly disproportionate results. I answer: The amount spent is not immense, but ridiculously small. The whole sum expended by the C.M.S. each year is about equal to the money expended in England upon drink in eight hours. When Mr. Stanley was preparing to start on his expedition for the relief of one Austrian gentleman in Central Africa, he asked for £30,000. That is twice the amount which the C.M.S. expends upon the whole of its East and Central African missions, with about thirty English missionaries at eight or ten centres widely scattered, involving charges of all kinds, including the care and maintenance of hundreds of rescued slaves. For the enterprise we have in hand, the preaching of Christ, and the establishment of Christian churches in wide districts of Africa, India, China, Japan, North America (not to speak of Palestine, Persia, Ceylon, New Zealand, &c.), the funds contributed and expended are absurdly small, when compared with the amounts thought perfectly reasonable in the case of any secular enterprise.

(2) It is said that our missions (and the missions of other societies) are a failure, because, according to certain calculations, the number of heathen is increasing faster than the number of converts, and, therefore, we are getting further from, and not nearer to, the conversion of the world. The calculations themselves are very uncertain; but admit them for argument's sake. How do they affect the question? First, we do not believe the world is to be converted at all in the present dispensation. Secondly, it is entirely beyond our power, spend what amount of money we will, to convert a single soul. Thirdly, we are simply obeying our Master's command. Duties are ours; results are his. We believe He is using the work of missionary societies to "take out of the heathen a people for his name." The future we leave to Him. At the same time we cannot think the actual results small, though we ardently long that they should be larger. Knowing what Heathenism and Mohammedanism are, and what is the power of the prince of this world, we do not despise an average of ten baptisms of adult converts, on their own profession of faith, and after careful instruction and due testing, every day throughout the whole year. But the results of missions, after all, cannot be measured by the number of baptisms. It is more to the point to plead the unanimous opinion of all statesmen, rulers, travellers, &c., who are Christian men, and have studied missions on the spot, and are, therefore, qualified to judge, that the results are enormous and beyond calculation.

(3) But it is said, Would not God bless the work more if the methods were different? That is a fair question. If any missionary body can invent improved methods, and prove that God specially honours them, we shall only rejoice, and shall be quite willing to learn. But I answer, We believe in St. Paul's principle in 1 Cor. xii., "There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all....And the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee: nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you." And, as a matter of fact, there is scarcely one method of missionary work, if one, which is not included in the diversified operations of the C.M.S. Is bazaar preaching right? We do that. Is village itineration right? We do that. Are medical missions useful? We have many of them. Are schools good evangelistic agencies? Our schools are numerous. Is it a Christ-like thing to care for famine orphans? We have several Orphanages. Is woman's work the special feature of the day? We use it on an extensive scale in India, and are rapidly increasing it in other lands. Is Bible translation and circulation the best form of missionary effort? We have a very large share in it. Should we seek to influence the educated classes of India? To this end we use efforts and agencies too numerous to mention. Should we go to the poor and the outcast, the pariah and the leper? Very many of our workers give themselves wholly to this work. Should our missionaries exhibit the beauty of family life and honest industry among savage races? It has been done among the Red Indians, the Maoris of New Zealand, the wild hill-tribes of India, and many African tribes. Should they abjure family life and English habits and live among the natives? Readers of the "Life of George Maxwell Gordon," just published, will find a conspicuous example of it. Ought we to send forth men of means and culture, who don't need to live upon the pence put into missionary boxes? We have had men who have dedicated their property and their learning, as well as themselves, to the cause. Ought we to send forth consecrated men and women from the humblest ranks of society? We have done so for nearly ninety years —blacksmiths, sugar-bakers, gardeners, domestic servants, &c. Ought we to foster the evangelistic work of native Christians? Many of our best men are specially told off to train native evangelists, teachers, and pastors.

(4) But it is said, Your missionaries get large salaries, and keep pony-carriages. Our missionaries get no salaries at all in the usual sense of the term. What they get are "allowances," varying in different countries according to ascertained needs. It is the Society's interest to keep them as small as possible; and they have been fixed after years of practical experience by men who know the respective countries personally. As to the pony carriage, some few in the large Indian cities do keep one. It is a miserable trap to look at, but it is as indispensable to a man who has to superintend numerous and widely scattered agencies in an Indian climate as the country doctor's far superior "trap," if he is to visit his scattered patients. A missionary who is a mere preacher can preach in the cool of the evening and rest all day, and boast that he (forsooth) keeps no pony carriage; but what is a man busier than an East-end clergyman to do in a district as large as the whole East-end?

(5) But it is retorted, still the "allowances" are too high. And this is said by wealthy gentlemen with carriages, and footmen, and country houses, and yachts, who take the chair at religious meetings, and put a sovereign in the plate. All honour to missionaries who pinch and live on less than they are "allowed" (as many do), and spend the rest on their mission; but shame upon the critics who, while enjoying their luxurious dining-tables, grudge them their scanty "allowances," and dole out a miserable guinea or five guineas a year to help support them. In point of fact, the "allowances" are not a third or a fourth of the amount thought necessary for the maintenance of Government servants or mercantile men in similar surroundings.

(6) But the wives and children cost so much. Well, if Romish celibacy, with all its unmentionable evils, is to be the latest development of Protestant missions, there is no more to be said. We are content to bear the reproach of having three-fifths of our missionaries married. But why spend so much on the children? Why, because we give no "salaries." If we had a scale of salaries like a bank or a Government office, the missionary would take his pay and do the best he could with it. But if we limit a missionary to just such "allowances" as appear to us reasonable for his immediate needs, then we are responsible for the children God gives him (for, after all, "children are a heritage that cometh of the Lord"!); and what sort of criticism would be directed against us (probably by the very same persons!) if we neglected them? In point of fact, complaints of the Society's niggardliness from injudicious friends of missionaries are not infrequent.

(7) Yet, after all, it is urged, your expenditure altogether per missionary is nearly £1000 a year. It is nothing of the kind; but I wish it were. For what would it mean? It would just mean successful work! It would mean that the missionary's agencies of all sorts had so ramified and extended that his personal allowances had become only a small part of his total expenditure. In the first stages of a mission, almost the whole expense is the preaching missionary. If chapels, and schools, and hospitals, and orphanages, and mission steamboats are to follow, and if bands of native evangelists are to give up their trades and devote themselves to missionary work, then, however cheaply all may be done, the expenditure per head of the English staff will increase, and we should rejoice at its increase. Of course, every possible effort should be made to throw the expense on the native Christians themselves—only you must get them first; and it is a simple matter of fact that the C.M.S. has always led the way in all plans for the development of native Church self-support.

(8) Then it is urged, Why are your missionaries guaranteed a living and a pension, and this, that, and the other? Why don't they go out simply trusting in the Lord? That is precisely what they do. We guarantee them nothing. How can we? Our missions are supported by funds contributed voluntarily year by year, chiefly in hundreds of thousands of small sums. Suppose the cavils of our enemies should be only too successful, and should stop all these contributions. The reserve funds which we hold (to avoid running into debt, and to provide things honest in the sight of all men) would probably keep us going for nearly half a year. After that there would not be a farthing for anybody. Our entire reliance is upon the gracious purpose of God to maintain the liberality of our friends. And assuredly if ever the Society were to be literally bankrupt—that is, unable to pay the drafts from the mission field—the moral obligation on the Christian public to come forward and support the starving missionaries would be tremendous. In that obligation lies the only "guarantee" we can give our staff of nearly four thousand English and native workers. And that obligation is precisely the same in the case of other societies, whose living by faith is more cordially recognised; so that the real position of their missionaries and ours is identical.

In these few remarks I have only been able to deal with some of the questions recently raised. Others not less important are not forgotten, but I dare not occupy more space.

I ask the prayers of all Christians that the various Missionary Societies may more and more help and sympathise with one another, and that their only rivalry may be as to which can do most for the glory of their common Master and Lord.

EUGENE STOCK.

"CATHOLIC BELIEF."

DEAR SIR,—"Catholic Belief" is issued by Romanists, endorsed and strongly recommended by Cardinal Manning. It is in its seventh edition of half a million, 427 pages, at 6d. It is extensively given away to Protestants for their perversion. It is a most specious, plausible, but deceitful work, replete with misrepresentations and misquotations. None of our leading religious societies have undertaken to reply to it. My reply, Part 1 (Protestant Alliance, 9, Strand, London), treats principally on "Tradition, Authority, and Infallibility." I have been urgently requested to issue a second part on "Doctrine." This I have completed under fourteen different heads, and I desire to present the whole free of expense to the Protestant Alliance. This can only be done by subscriptions to cover the first expense. Mr. Guinness, Secretary of the Protestant Alliance, will receive the subscriptions.

Will any of your readers enable us to meet the first cost? Such a work is much needed, which is my justification, if any is required, in appealing to Protestants.—Yours faithfully,

C. H. COLLETTE.

GIFT BOOKS.

DEAR SIR,—I am anxious for advice as to the most suitable book or books for presentation to men of the superior mechanic or messenger class, which, while containing an interesting narrative, and generally attractive in style, would be calculated to present the Gospel clearly and forcibly to the minds of men whose conversion is desired.

Any suggestions by your readers would be acceptable to many, especially in view of the approaching Christmas.—Yours truly,
H.

DEATH OF SAMSON.

Judges xvi. 21—31; Golden Text, Job xxxii. 9.

More than 120 years intervene between Gideon's victory and the death of Samson. The history of Ruth belongs to the earlier half of this interval.

The Philistines.—Name means Strangers, or immigrants. From it comes the word "Palestine." They held the narrow strip of rich lowland that lay between the hills of Judah and the sea. They were the most aggressive people in Palestine at this time—fierce, highly organised, rich, well armed, and advanced in the arts of civilisation. They were skilled as smiths and armourers; also as builders. They had a wide commerce, and were devoted to war both on sea and land. To them the Anakims, the ancient giants of Hebron, had fled. For forty years before Samson's birth this people had overrun Southern Palestine, ravaging the fields, carrying off men, women, and children into slavery, disarming the Israelites, and forbidding any worker in iron to ply his trade among them.

Samson, the Deliverer.—One of the strangest of all the Bible heroes. More is told of poor faulty Samson than of any other Judge. What a testimony to the truthfulness of Scripture that his character is painted so vividly, with all its blemishes! His revengeful spirit, sensuality, and folly are clearly shown; but underneath all there is real heroism, real concern for God's people and name, real faith and devotion, and real penitence. Beware of judging him by the higher standard of later revelations. Make full allowance for the dark times he lived in. See with what poor instruments God can work, and be thankful that He called and used Samson as well as Gideon, David as well as Moses. Bible saints are like modern saints, not perfect. But the clearer light given to us demands a far higher standard of righteousness.

Samson's strength was a miraculous endowment, given on condition of his living the life of a Nazarite, i.e., "one separated" (Num. vi. 2—5). A Nazarite might not touch grapes, wine, or anything intoxicating. No dead body might be touched, nor might the hair be cut. The vow was generally taken for a period only, but Samson, Samuel, and John the Baptist were Nazarites for life.

Samson's Fall.—The Spirit of the Lord was the secret of his might (xiii. 25, xiv. 6, 19, xv. 14). What could he not have done if he had only obeyed the Mighty One, who was with him and upon him! But he departed from God, and soon God departed from him. He grieved God by self-will and self-indulgence. His fall was gradual, though sudden at the last. The final crash was preceded by a long course of wilfulness and sin.

Illustration.—An oak of vast girth, with gnarled trunk, and mighty arms far-stretching, the pride of the forest, and the living symbol of sinewy strength. Lo, it suddenly falls before a blast of no unusual strength. The whole forest is amaze, until they see that the trunk is eaten hollow with decay. The crash came in a moment, but the preparation for the crash had been going on in silence and secrecy for many a year. He fell, too, because his watch against sin was partial. Watching against drunkenness, he was careless as to passion and lust.

> But what assailed this temperance, not complete,
> Against another object more enticing?
> What boots it at one gate to make defence,
> And at another to let in the foe,
> Effeminately vanquished? Milton.

Samson's Punishment.—"The Philistines took him." To proud, victorious Samson it was a horrible thing to be in the power of the Philistines—the men whom God appointed him to overcome. God calls to victory over sin, and over many of its consequences; but, if we yield to sin, bondage to sin will follow. We shall be "holden with the cords of our sins." "Put out his eyes."—Those eyes that betrayed him to lust; the first to sin, the first to suffer. So indulged sin blinds the mind. "Brought him to Gaza"—a prisoner where once he was conqueror! "Did grind in the prison house."—Degradation indeed! Treated with the ignominy of a slave. "He was hence to be regarded as a public slave—the worst of all conditions into which a man can be brought." Grinding corn was specially woman's work. To grind it for others was the task of the most oppressed and degraded of women, probably slaves. "Samson, the fool of women all his life, set, in his blindness, to do a woman slave's work, was the very superlative of humiliation."—Geikie. Most nobly does Milton make the fallen hero say in his repentance:—

> But foul effeminacy held me yoked
> Her bond slave; oh, indignity; oh, blot
> To honour and religion! Servile mind
> Rewarded well with servile punishment!
> The base degree to which I now am fallen,
> These rags, this grinding, is not so base
> As was my former servitude, ignoble,
> Unmanly, ignominious, infamous.
> True slavery, and that blindness worse than this,
> That saw not how degenerately I served.

"Then the lords of the Philistines gathered themselves together for to offer a great sacrifice unto Dagon their God, and to rejoice," &c.—Who can tell what agony of soul Samson suffered as he heard the mocking exultations of the foe. But worse than all to him would be the dishonour to God's name. His overthrow is boasted of as though it were God's; just as to-day, when Christians disgrace their profession, God's cause is blamed, and his name blasphemed. In this is often found the sharpest punishment of sin.

Samson's Repentance and Death.—"The greatness of the fallen Samson consisted in this, that like all noble natures in similar circumstances, he became greater and freer in the deepest suffering than he had ever been before." "It is better for Samson to be blind in prison than to abuse his eyes in Sorek; yea, he was more blind when he saw licentiously than now that he sees not; he was a greater slave when he served his affections than now grinding for the Philistines. The loss of his eyes shows him his sin."—Hall.

Samson's prayer was right enough for him; but it would be wrong for us, with our greater light. So he dies fighting God's enemies, with God's name upon his lips, using his last strength in God's cause, and doing all in the energy of godly trust. Thus poor, blind, fallen Samson dies a hero of faith.

LESSONS.

(1) "When he broke the Nazarite vow, he lost his strength, and was taken captive. So all our strength lies in our simple devotion to God."

(2) "His weaknesses were overruled to show the folly as well as the sin of such indulgences. The spectacle of Samson, the hero, and judge, brought to death by the sin of his life, must have created awe."

(3) He fell through keeping bad company.

(4) His greatest victory was won by the sacrifice of himself.

(5) When God's people sin, God's cause suffers.

(6) Ps. cvii. 10—22.

(7) Though wandering Samson was restored to God, he failed to do the great work to which he was called. He did not fully deliver his people as Gideon did. So if we wander and are restored, we cannot make up for wasted opportunities and neglected duties. We miss the crown of life.

Protestant Commemorations.

A Protestant commemoration meeting was lately held in the schools in rear of Christ Church, Teddington, a representative and enthusiastic audience filling the large hall. Rev. E. Theodore Hitchens occupied the chair, and said that as Protestants they were anxious to maintain their present religious privileges charitably, but firmly. The Dean of Achonry told in eloquent language the story of the Spanish Armada; Rev. C. Stirling, vicar of New Malden, explained the terms of the Protestant Accession; and Rev. George Mackey showed how Romish practices were again creeping into the English Church. Revs. S. N. Waterhouse (Congregational), S. Burrow (Wesleyan), and F. Bateman (Baptist) were also present, besides several prominent laymen among both Churchmen and Nonconformist.

At Lewes a week of Protestant commemoration meetings, lectures, and services has been held, in which local Churchmen and Nonconformists united. The special deputations from London included Rev. Lancelot Holland, vicar of All Saints, Hatcham-park, who occupied the pulpit of Southern Church, and Rev. E. Theodore Hitchens, of Christ Church, Teddington, who preached successively in the Congregational, Baptist, and Wesleyan Chapels. The services were well attended and much appreciated.

OUTLINES PREPARED BY HENRY THORNE.

THE POUNDS—PRIVILEGED BUT RESPONSIBLE.

Luke xix. 12—27.

(1) Note what is said of the King Himself.—Called a "Nobleman" (ver. 12). Trace the nobility of Jesus. "Son of David" (Matt. xxii. 42). Son of God (Rom. i. 4). Above the angels (Heb. i. 5). Worshipped by angels (Heb. i. 6).

(2) The Journey of the King.—"Far country." So Herod the Great went to Rome, and was there made "King of the Jews." Went to receive a kingdom for himself. The kingdom was to be in the place he left. So Jesus has gone to receive a kingdom which, though not of this world (John xviii. 36), is in it. ("In earth," Matt. vi. 10). See connection between the departure of Jesus out of this world and his kingdom in the world (Phil. ii. 8—11). His kingdom includes universal dominion ("All things," Eph. i. 22) for his Church, and absolute control in his Church (Matt. xxiii. 8).

(3) The Servants of the King.—They were required to engage in a specific service.—Making gain for their Master. True believers gain glory for Jesus (1 Peter iv. 14). They were supplied with what was necessary for the service.—Jesus gives grace (Ps. lxxxiv. 11); the Gospel (John xvii. 14); and various talents (1 Cor. xii. 4). They were rewarded according to their faithfulness in the service (vv. 16—19).—These verses would seem to teach that there are degrees of glory in the future life, and that the degree of glory enjoyed depends upon the degree of faithfulness manifested.

(4) The Enemies of the King.—They were: His citizens (ver. 14).—Compare "His own" (John i. 11); the conduct of the people of Nazareth (Luke iv. 29): the "no king but Cæsar" of the Jews (John xix. 15); and "another king" (Acts xvii. 7). All men are, in one sense, his citizens, for He is "the Son of Man," but the words had no doubt a primary reference to the Jews. They declared their enmity.—"Sent a message" (ver. 14). The world is full of declared hostility to Christ. They gave no reason for their enmity.—Simply "we will not." There can be no reason for the rejection of Jesus. Their enmity cost them dearly (ver. 27).

(5) The Return of the King.—He intended to return (ver. 12). See indications of an intention to return to this earth revealed in the words and acts of Jesus (John xiv. 3, xxi. 22; 1 Cor. xi. 26). See also the angelic assurance (Acts i. 11). He returns: (a) To reign (ver. 15, "received the kingdom"). See Isa. xxiv. 23; Rev. v. 10. (b) To reward his saints.—"My reward is with me" (Rev. xxii. 12). (c) To punish his enemies (ver. 27; 2 Thess. ii. 8).

Kingstown Y.M.C.A.

The Association in Kingstown, near Dublin, is carrying on active evangelistic effort right through the year, not only for its members, but for the general public. It embraces in its ranks members of all evangelical churches. The Sunday night evangelistic service for men draws large numbers from the streets, of all classes and conditions. Sailors from ships in the harbour, working men, and men of the better classes are represented, and even Roman Catholics attend. An earnest young student of Trinity College stands outside in the street with a lighted lantern-board, to beckon the wanderers in; while other workers distribute handbills along the street.

An evangelistic meeting for men and women is being started on Wednesday evenings. A weekly Cottage Meeting in an outlying village named Newtown Park, near Blackrock, is a most interesting feature.

BY THE WAYSIDE.—For some months past, on the way to his place of worship, the writer has distributed Jubilee Testaments, published at one penny by the British and Foreign Bible Society. In their scarlet and blue covers, and non-biblical form, they present a most attractive appearance, and are gratefully received. This is a humble effort within the reach of all, but, accompanied by prayer, we doubt not that God will bless it to the conversion of many. If this simple effort were carried out on a large scale, what a revenue of glory might redound to the Redeemer! F. J.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

CASE of Rev. C——, CONGREGATIONAL MINISTER, ILLINOIS, U.S.A.

Formerly a missionary in Africa, this patient returned with broken-down health to England. There was an affection of the left lung, complicated with pleurisy. Writing me from Illinois on behalf of patients there, he reminds me of his own case. "My chest symptoms gave me great trouble, and the physicians afforded me no relief. I applied to you, and took (as you will remember) nine bottles of medicine, which cured me. My lungs were wonderfully strengthened."

CASE of Rev. D. J——, a WELSH MINISTER.

This patient was under my treatment, on and off, for nearly two years. Writing me recently, he says: "I am glad to inform you that I have perfectly recovered. One lung was on the point of ulceration, but by your efficient treatment the disease was removed, and my life was saved. I feel my lungs all right. If you publish my case, do not print my name."

A WESLEYAN MISSIONARY AT BRADFORD Writes me: "I have seen your medicine work wonders. I have the greatest faith in it, as I have seen it used with success when all other doctors have failed."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

RESCUE WORK IN INDIA.

II.—THE REMEDY.

The stumbling-block which has been described throws in the way of the spread of the Gospel in India is very real. There is no remedy, no true amelioration possible for this condition of evil but the bold uplifting of the Cross of Christ, and of the Bible standard of purity as the rule of life. Any minister, chaplain, or missionary who fails to speak out boldly on this subject, or who allows his tongue to be tied on account of the existence of this vice among so-called "Christians," either native or foreign, is preaching a one-sided Gospel. Deliverance from sin must be upheld as God's standard of right living. Let us have every other measure possible that Christian ingenuity can devise to peg away at this terrible evil, Rescue Homes, employment for widows, legislation on the lines of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, and preventive work of all kinds; but a faithful declaration of the whole counsel of God is indispensable;—the equality of man and woman in the sight of God; that God has the same laws for the body as for the soul; that the sin which violates the moral law also injures the human body which is the work of his hands; that the might of the risen Christ is needful to break the power of the adversary.

Special workers are needed for this. The present mission staff cannot reach out to what is required to be done, though by speaking out boldly they can do more than they have hitherto. A special band of workers is needed to reach these special classes of fallen women that I have enumerated. One missionary lady in a northern city, moved with compassion for these poor ignorant women living in sin, commenced to visit them with the Gospel message, but was soon compelled to give it up, as it clashed with her original work. Zenanas where she already had a footing were being closed to her as soon as it was known that she was visiting this class.

In Calcutta there is a large institution called the "Protestant Women's Home," under the direction of its founder, Miss Mary Fendall. It is a splendid building, accommodating about thirty European and Eurasian women, with a separate department for natives. One feature of this work has been to provide the women with occupation that should make the institution as far as possible self-supporting. Those who are suitable are trained to very fine needlework; we saw some beautiful specimens of baby-linen and underclothing of various kinds. A department has also been added for scientific dressmaking. The large and airy basement is devoted to the manufacture of curry powders and jellies. Miss Fendall has given the best years of her life to this work, but has latterly had warning that the earthly house of her tabernacle may soon be dissolved, and she is wishful to meet with a lady of kindred spirit to continue the work. She feels that it should be someone of independent means, of ability and experience, and with an intense love for souls, who should take her place. The property is vested in trustees; there is no committee; it has been an independent individual work carried on under the direct leadings of the Lord. Miss Fendall has always made it a matter of earnest prayer that the Lord would give her the soul of every girl that comes under her care. The whole history of the institution is a monument to the gracious fulfilment of the motto text emblazoned around the arched door of the dining-room, which faces one on entering: "Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him, and He shall bring it to pass."

Calcutta has also a band of workers in connection with its Missionary Conference—a strong committee in good working order, where moral questions are well to the front. Miss Mary E. Leslie is one of the mainsprings of the movement which this Committee has in hand towards enforcing and improving the law for the better protection of girls. These workers have a good Rescue Home, more on the family principle; also a female workshop in a crowded thoroughfare for the employment of destitute women.

Calcutta is 1400 miles from Bombay, where we are located, and between these two great centres, the gates of India, there are almost on the direct line of rail a dozen cities and large towns where no work of this kind has ever been attempted.

An added necessity for rescue work exists in Bombay, and, to a lesser degree, in Calcutta, on account of the importation of European girls, which is constantly going on from Bulgaria, Russia, and other parts of Eastern Europe. This white slave trade claims immediate attention from purity workers in India.

The "Home of Hope" was opened in 1877. It came into the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Gladwin in 1885. Since this letter was commenced, Mrs. Gladwin has been called away to her eternal home. During the three years this work was under her care, many fallen and friendless girls passed through the Home, besides many destitute and deserted children who were cared for for a time, and then passed on to orphanages and other institutions in various parts of the country. Babies of all sizes were taken in, tenderly nursed, and judiciously placed out with those who were ready for Christ's sake to take and train a child for Him. Thus many childless homes have been blessed, and many young lives rescued from future misery and shame.

As Mr. and Mrs. Gladwin went into this work the wide ramifications of the evil were more and more vividly presented to their minds. They continually prayed for labourers to enter on these truly "white fields." On various occasions they wrote letters to The Christian and other English papers, as well as to private friends in England, urging the needs of India. In response to one of these appeals in 1886, Miss H. Richardson was led to come out, and, after studying the various needs, she opened at her own expense a Home and Reformatory Hospital for the treatment of fallen women, who received medical care to heal them, "to go and sin no more," in contrast to the Government policy of healing them to sin again. This has been in operation nearly two years, and has done great good. Miss Richardson specially aims at the industrial occupation and spiritual reformation of her patients, and has been richly rewarded by the changed lives of many who have come under her care. Her work has developed beyond the capabilities of the original house; a second has been added, and it is in contemplation to build a suitable place at Poona, and simply keep a small receiving house in Bombay. Poona is a healthy station, at no great distance from Bombay, where the cost of living is much cheaper.

Mrs. Gladwin's work must be continued. It has been arranged for the present that all rescue cases shall be handed over to Miss Richardson, leaving the babies, the deserted children, and the friendless but unfallen girls and women to be dealt with in the Home of Hope. Miss Rumsey, who came out in response to an appeal in The Christian last July, and only arrived the week Mrs. Gladwin died, will unite with Miss Richardson in special efforts to reach the European imported women, for which her knowledge of French and German makes her specially suitable, and for which she felt specially drawn to come to Bombay.

In the absence of any other suitable arrangement, I have for the present accepted the superintendence of the Home of Hope, believing that the Lord will provide all needful help, both in workers and funds, and will give me the needed guidance and strength for the continuance of the work.

Before closing, I should mention that there is an excellently conducted Home for Homeless Women in connection with the Methodist Episcopal Mission at Lucknow, a small Refuge belonging to the S.P.G. at Delhi, and possibly the same thing may exist in other places of which I have no information. But for aggressive rescue work on Gospel lines the whole of India is practically unoccupied ground.

May the Lord of the harvest use these facts to impress his servants everywhere, and may He thrust forth many labourers.

Bombay. Helen S. Dyer.

NATIONAL VIGILANCE ASSOCIATION.

A right good work has been done by the National Vigilance Association during the third year of its existence. By suppression and repression much has been effected to protect the innocent from moral defilement, and to make evil-doers know that they are not to have a clear course in all their wickedness. Doubtless, many of the rising generation will bless the exertions which are now being put forth, whereby they are guarded from polluting influences, and enabled to cleanse their way in life.

The Earl of Meath presided over the annual meeting of the Association on Tuesday last week, and, in an address showing hearty appreciation of its work, he declared impurity to be a sin demanding more than passive resistance; it is so fearfully destructive that really active measures must be taken against it. The Earl impressed upon Christian people the necessity of making their influence felt at the polling booths, so as to secure as members of Parliament and county councillors, men who, being personally pure, will vigorously exert themselves in the interest of public purity.

Mr. P. W. Bunting gave an interesting summary of the legal operations of the Association. Much has been done by way of assisting provincial organisations, which, he said, ought to be much more numerous, so that a perfect system of espionage may be brought to bear upon the wicked. Many houses of a disreputable character have been closed, and evil-doers have been brought to book in the law-courts for publishing demoralising books, selling obscene pictures, and outraging defenceless females. The great importance of the work of the Association was very evident, and full particulars will be found in the printed report, to be had from the office, 267, Strand.

In the course of an address full of sympathy with the work, Mrs. Ormiston Chant spoke of the importance of measures for preventing the sorrow and crime of immorality. Much pity is felt for those who have fallen; the concern, however, ought to be to prevent the poor and down-trodden from thus becoming objects of pity. In need and temptation, the poor should be helped and kept from falling. Mrs. Chant also urged reasons why pantomime children should be included in the provisions of the Factory Acts, and vigorously denounced such a wholesale spoiling of young life simply for the sake of amusement. She called upon ladies to be missionaries in this cause, and generally to exert themselves in promoting a higher moral standard. The lowness of the wages paid to some women was indicated as in many cases responsible for their yielding to temptation. The public conscience sadly needs educating, many good men and women being yet unable to see the true side of the great question of public morality. We deal with criminals, while we ought to prevent crime. In the course of some concluding remarks, Mrs. Chant said women must take up this question. And those mothers have most to fear who bring up their daughters in ignorance of the evil that lies nearer to them than any other.

Mrs. Henry Fawcett followed with a thoughtful address. Moving a resolution recommending efforts to extend the operations of the Association throughout the United Kingdom, she insisted upon a higher standard of morality for women, and a raising of the morality of men to the same level. Those who have fallen must know that there is a door to a better life open to them; vigorous preventive measures must be taken; and there must be severe laws for the punishment of crime by men as well as women. Mrs. Fawcett further urged education of the public on this subject. She declared herself convinced that the great mass of the working classes take not the smallest interest in such questions. All this work, however, is mere machinery, and, apart from a change of heart, and the mind being set upon higher things, nothing really permanent will be effected.

Canon Scott-Holland, in seconding the resolution, also discriminated between the inner and outer forms of purity work. The former is to be accomplished by spiritual means, the latter by vigilance measures. The elevation of the public mind may be helped by means of associations, and he eulogised all efforts to this end. It is needless to say that the resolution was carried.

Mr. Samuel Smith, M.P., in moving a resolution rejoicing at what has been done to restrain the spread of corrupting literature, referred to his own exertions in the House of Commons. He expressed the conviction that the traffic in foul books and papers, which has so greatly increased in recent years, has done more to deteriorate public morals than any other evil. Some provincial newspapers are publishing stories fearfully suggestive of crime, and a large number of London weekly papers are continually providing similar reading for the rising generation. Mr. Smith spoke with regret of the difficulties which stand in the way of moral agitation, and argued that it is all the more necessary that Christian people should awake to their duties.

The resolution was seconded by Mr. R. C. Morgan and carried. A few words were also spoken by Messrs. W. A. Bewes, W. F. Craies, T. A. Denny, and F. W. Crossley. Mention was made of the great indebtedness of the Association to its large staff of voluntary workers and advisers. Mr. J. E. Mathieson presided over the latter part of the meeting, as Lord Meath had to leave after Mr. Bunting's address.

WORK AT CHRISTIANIA.

For over three years a very good work has been carried on in Peperviken, Christiania, Norway, by Countess Wedel Jälsberg and Miss Esmark. The effort was begun by inviting a number of poor women to meetings in a little room for prayer and Bible reading. It was soon found necessary to hire a large hall, but, such has been the development of the work, the accommodation is now by no means adequate to the pressing needs. Two years ago a branch of the Y.W.C.A. was formed, and the distinctly spiritual part of the mission was handed over to its workers.

There has been blessing all along, many women and girls having become true and happy Christians. Temperance meetings led to the formation of a branch of the Norwegian Temperance Society, and the children have been banded together in the same good cause. Moreover, the poor have been helped in various ways. Many men and women, once on the verge of despair through sin and a sense of guilt, are numbered among the trophies of this noble endeavour. The present need of the Mission is a suitable home and centre, and efforts are being made to buy land and build a house. In this the Norwegian Christians are asking help from those of like precious faith in other countries. The work is highly commended by Mr. H. J. Atkinson, M.P., of Gunnersbury House, near Acton, W., who became acquainted with it during his recent visit to Norway.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Church Association has received a legacy of £50 under the will of the late Miss Harriet Williams, of Ramsgate, who during her lifetime was a warm supporter of Reformation principles.

The Bishop of Liverpool recently addressed a meeting of Christian workers connected with St. Bride's, Liverpool. In the course of his address the Bishop said that all who enter churches should endeavour to benefit in some manner their fellow men and women, and try to bring home to them the truths of the Bible. When the Methodists were commencing their work, it was enforced upon all who joined them to undertake some real work. He wished this were carried out in all churches, but at present there was a very large percentage who thought of little but the saving of their own souls, and did nothing to help others.

SALVATION ARMY.

The new hall at Utrecht recently opened by Mr. Booth has already become the spiritual birthplace of many.

At Dudley, during the six months' command of Capt. Brain and Lieut. Bree, not a week passed without some professed conversions.

The Christmas number of All the World is enlarged and improved; it contains much valuable information. well put together; a view of "Chillon's cold prison walls" heads a specially interesting article re Capt. Stirling.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Dr. Morrison and his congregation at Westbourne Grove, in the West-end, continue to take practical interest in the struggling East London congregation at Millwall. Dr. Monro Gibson's congregation at St. John's Wood have also joined hands with the friends at Bow. Hampstead and Upper Norwood have a care for the congregation in the unsavoury precincts of Drury-lane.

Rev. L. B. Woffendale, of Somers Town Presbyterian Church, gave the right hand of fellowship on Sunday week to one hundred and fourteen new members. Eleven adults, and nineteen children were baptized the same evening. This large increase to the membership of the church has resulted from the recent evangelistic services which have been held at the church, and in the King's Cross Theatre.

BAPTIST.

Rev. Walter J. Mathams, late of Falkirk, has been welcomed as pastor of Wycliffe Chapel, Birmingham.

The Baptist says that a united letter of resignation from the London Baptist Association has been signed by twenty-two pastors, and that five others agreed with, but were unable to sign it, having already individually resigned.

The Baptist Missionary Society have accepted two additional missionaries for service on the Congo—Mr. J. A. Clark, of Folkestone, and J. L. Roger, of Leslie, N.B. Both have been trained at the Pastors' College, and they depart for Africa about the end of the year.

Rev. W. Brock recently tendered his resignation of the pastorate of Heath-street Church, Hampstead, which he has held since the formation of the church, more than twenty-seven years ago, giving as his reason for the step the need he felt, after so many years of almost continuous labour, of a time of rest and of preparation for fresh work. The church unanimously passed a resolution assuring Mr. Brock of their unabated confidence and affection, and earnestly requesting him to abandon the purpose he had resolved upon, and to take twelve months' complete rest from ministerial labour; as a result of this he has withdrawn his resignation.

METHODIST.

The good work being done in the Newtown-row Wesleyan Chapel, Birmingham, by Rev J. G. Mantle and his assistants, is warmly appreciated by the people, and is being much blessed by God. The mission is taking a firm hold of the great population that surrounds the chapel, and conversions crown almost every service that is held in the Birmingham Town Hall to promote the "Forward Movement."

The Wesleyans at Hatfield have not been well treated by the Marquis of Salisbury. For years they have had to worship in a converted cow-shed, and Lord Salisbury has resolutely refused to sell them a piece of land on which to erect a chapel. A short time ago, however, they secured a site from another gentleman for the purpose. Rev. A. E. Gregory, minister of the circuit, in which the converted cow-shed is situated, recently received notice that he was to give up the premises last Saturday, at the same time being informed that the Wesleyans could not be allowed to retain possession an hour longer.

A special effort was lately made in Cardiff by the members of the Broadway Wesleyan Chapel to reach the large numbers of people who are heedless to the claims of God upon them. A week of preparatory prayer was attended with much blessing and power. The work of missioning the neighbourhood was undertaken by members of the church, and was entered into with great zeal. Some special services held in the chapel were well attended, and most successful. Night after night sinners were found "weeping their way to the cross," and many are now rejoicing in Christ their Saviour. Popular Saturday evening meetings for the people have been started with the hope of reaching godless men and women, and a Christian Workers' Association has been formed.

CONGREGATIONAL.

On Sunday week at Libanus Church, Morriston Swansea, sixty-six new converts were admitted int church fellowship. All these had entered the inquiry room in the course of the six weeks that Rev. W Dyfodwig Davies has been pastor of the church.

A "Young People's Meeting" has been established i connection with the church at Buxton. It is held onc a week, and is open to the youth of both sexes. Th members read short papers on Biblical subjects, followed by discussion. A Young Men's Christian Associa tion has also been formed in connection with the senio class in the Sunday-school.

Since he commenced his pastorate at Malton, in Apri last, Rev. R. C. Scurrah has been most energetic i endeavouring to spread the Gospel in the town. He ha lately conducted some special evangelistic services, as result of which twenty-six persons have professed con version; about forty have been added to the churc during Mr. Scurrah's pastorate.

The following resolution was adopted by the Congres of the Victorian Congregational Union at a recen meeting:—"That this conference request Dr. Hanna to urge upon the committee of the Congregationa Union in England the advisability of summoning repre sentatives of Congregationalism throughout all parts o the world to a general congress, to be held in London o a future occasion."

At Clifton Church, Peckham (Rev. H. J. Perkins pastor), efforts are being made to reach the non-wor shipping portion of the community by throwing th whole of the church open to strangers on the fourt Sunday evening in each month, the seatholders wor shipping in the lecture hall. The second of thes services was held on Sunday week, when between 60 and 700 persons responded to the invitation.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

A new mission hall has been opened in Paterson-street Anderston, Glasgow, in connection with Berkeley-street U.P. Church. It is a large, commodious, well-arranged hall, and will supply a felt want in the district.

A Conference was held in the Parish Church, Bridge-of-Weir, on Saturday last, on the "Second Coming o Christ." Dr. Elder Cumming, Rev. John Sloan, Mr Walter Sloan, and Mr. William Quarrier took part.

Joseph Townend, a minister of the United Methodist Free Churches since 1836.—Rev. John Stronach, for forty years a missionary of the London Missionary Society at Amoy, China.—Rev. W. B. Philip, some time a missionary of the London Society in South Africa, and since for nearly twenty-five years pastor of the Congregational Church at Queen's Town, Cape Colony.—At Bray, Rev. John W. Hackett, of the Episcopal Church, aged eighty-four.—At Carnone, Rev. John Porter Dickey, Presbyterian Church, Carnone, aged eighty-three.

RESCUE WORK IN PECKHAM.—Dear Sir,—For the past eighteen months our Night Shelter has been always open for any homeless or fallen girls. but as the work has so developed we have taken a larger house. Several children have been rescued from evil parents and sent to industrial schools; and prosecutions instituted and convictions obtained against keepers of disorderly houses. We appeal to the Christian public for help to enable us to go forward, also to clear off the expenses of a recent prosecution. Gifts of bedsteads, bedding, tables, forms, chairs, and other necessaries will be welcome. We hope to have a prayer and committee meeting at the Shelter, 1, Bournemouth-road, on Friday, December 14, at eight p.m., and invite any who would be willing to help.—Yours faithfully,

Charles W. Vincent, Hon. Sec.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.—The Day of Intercession for Foreign Missions was observed by the friends of the C.M.S. on Thursday last week. In the morning a special service, with Holy Communion, was held in St. Dunstan's, Fleet-street, when a stimulating sermon was preached by Rev. J. B. Whiting, of St. Luke's, Ramsgate. In the afternoon, instead of the weekly prayer-meeting at the C.M. House, Salisbury-square, a meeting for prayer was held at Sion College, when the large hall was well filled. Rev. F. E. Wigram presided. and addresses of a helpful and spiritual character were given by Canon D. D. Stewart and Rev. A. E. Barnes-Lawrence; prayer was offered by Revs. M. Washington, G. S. Whitlock, E. D. Stead. General Touch, and others. In the course of the meeting Mr. Wigram read a letter from the Bishop of Exeter to Mr. Eugene Stock, enclosing £100, and suggesting that during the ensuing Advent season the friends of the Society should subscribe £25,000 or £50,000 to the C.M.S., as an answer to Canon Isaac Taylor's attack. Much interest was excited. and two donations, one of £1,000 and the other of £100, were announced.—The Record.

IRISH SOCIETY.

Week of Special Prayer.

The Committee invites all who are interested in the work of the Irish Society to set apart one week for UNITED PRAYER TO ALMIGHTY GOD THAT DIVINE BLESSING MAY REST UPON BOTH WORK AND WORKERS; AND THAT INCREASING MEANS MAY BE VOUCHSAFED, ADEQUATE NOT ONLY TO THE URGENT REQUIREMENTS OF THE PRESENT, BUT TO THE FURTHER OPPORTUNITIES WHICH ARE ALMOST DAILY OFFERING.

The First Week in Advent commends itself as most appropriate for this purpose. The Committee suggests that, wherever possible, a Prayer Meeting should be held; but that, at all events, all whom these words may reach should, collectively or individually, devote some time daily throughout that Week to Prayer—UNITED, DEFINITE, and SPECIAL as regards the present need of means to carry on, and, if possible, extend its Work.

RECENT EVENTS, AND A CLUE TO THEIR SOLUTION.

By the Right Hon. Lord Robert Montagu.

"This is a very remarkable book, and well deserves the careful consideration of all who would possess a clue to present complications. The revelations it makes are most astounding, and could hardly be credited were it not that the writer, having been himself a pervert to the Church of Rome, is intimately acquainted with the hidden workings of that system."—The Christian.

REAPING TIMES IN ROTHESAY.

THE Lord has vouchsafed a time of much spiritual blessing in this well-known Scottish watering-place. For years sowers have gone forth bearing precious seed, but little fruit has been seen. The cry has gone up to God, "Lord, if there are none Thou canst use here, send someone Thou canst use." The prayer has been answered, and now sower and reaper rejoice together.

About six weeks ago, two young women, members of the "Faith Mission," whose headquarters are in Glasgow, arrived, full of zeal and of the Holy Spirit. They sang and preached in street and hall, wet or dry, accompanied by a number of local helpers, they marched and sang through the main thoroughfares. Young converts, many from the roughest class, began to swell their ranks. At first the work was principally amongst the young, it soon spread to those of older years, grown-up men and unmistakable sinners stepped out to the penitent form, no small test to "a canny Scot."

About the third week, Mr. Govan, originator and director of the Mission, arrived, accompanied by other two helpers, making five in all. The work deepened and widened. The largest hall in the place was taken, capable of holding 1200 people, this was filled on Lord's Day evenings, 600 to 800 attending on week nights, often amid storm and rain. The more respectable and church-going class now began to frequent in greater numbers. The Lord gave his servants much power, dealing with all manner of sin and self-righteousness, pride was shown no mercy. Many professors were humbled. The halting brought to decision; and all made to feel that the salvation of the Lord was a very real and a very glorious thing. Down-grade tendencies have no place evidently in the theology of the "Faith Mission." It is intensely up grade. What the Lord has done and could do for and in the sinner was set forth with charming fulness; correspondingly the high claims of Christ on the whole man, spirit, soul, and body, were set forth, everyone feeling that the workers themselves were embodiments of the truths they preached. The meetings have been of an entirely unsectarian character. Christians of all denominations have worked together. The well-known simile of the little pools on the seashore, all being merged into one when the tide arose has had a fulfilment. We are swimming at present in larger waters. The work goes on. C. C.

Appeals.

Hoxton Hall.—Mrs. WM. NOBLE, Ashfield, Seven Sisters-road, Finsbury-park, N., asks help for the women's and children's Christmas treat at the hall. Gifts of warm clothing, books, toys, money, and, indeed, anything, will be most gratefully received and acknowledged.

Lambeth Ragged School Society.—The workers of this Society are anxious to distribute worn and cast-off clothing among the poor. The district is densely populated, and there is ample scope for judiciously aiding cases of distress. The schools are attended by a thousand children. Communications may be addressed to Mr. E. NICHOLLS, Newport-street, Lambeth-walk, S.E.

Maryland Point Schools and Mission.—There is much distress at Stratford, E., and this Mission endeavours to assist the old and infirm by supplying them with food and fuel. This is an effort which we can heartily commend, and we hope the earnest workers will have their hands sustained. The treasurer and hon. sec. is Mr. JOHN STABB, 6, Norcott-road, Stoke Newington, N.

Mount Hermon Mission Girls' Orphan Homes (Kilburn and West Hampstead).—A circular recently issued says: Our family consists at present of 114 orphans. We have had very heavy and unforeseen expenses this year, and are quite without funds. Our needs are: money for general expenses, new matresses, and other household necessaries. New or cast-off clothing is always acceptable. Address, Mrs. PARRY, 55, Cambridge-road, Kilburn, N.W.

Bethesda Town Mission, Portsmouth.—The funds of this Mission are very low; so much so that the superintendent fears a missionary will have to be discharged this month unless some considerable help is given. The work comprises that of a town mission with mission halls, services, Sunday-schools, and various branches of Gospel ministry for the ingathering of souls from among the poor and working classes, and is superintended by Commander B. H. KEY, Downham, St. Edward's-road, Southsea.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HOME.

A plebiscite taken at Norwood on Sunday closing gave out of 2000, 1785 for, and 210 against.

Rev. David Macrae is the author of the Scottish Temperance League's "New Year Tract."

The late Duchess of Sutherland was an ardent temperance advocate, and wore the blue ribbon.

Mrs. Reaney, of Manchester, and Mrs. Lewis, of Blackburn, have been addressing a series of meetings on the temperance question in Lancashire.

An eight days' Gospel temperance mission has been held in the Wesleyan Schoolroom, Cheadle, by Mr. W. Forbes. It has been a success, growing in interest from the first.

Sir Edmund Hay Currie, the great London distiller, some time ago declared himself an abstainer. It is now stated that he has given up his connection with the business.

Speaking recently, Mr. W. Bowen Rowlands, Q.C., M.P., alluded to the great triumphs of the temperance party. In a mixed company a teetotaler no longer has to adopt a tone of apology because he does not drink wine. The wine-drinker has now to adopt the tone of apology.

The Board of Guardians of Mile End Old Town, London, E., recently adopted a petition in favour of Sunday closing. An objection that the subject was not one on which the Board was called upon to express itself was promptly met by Mr. F. N. Charrington with the statement that the workhouses are filled as a direct result of the liquor traffic.

A movement has commenced among Wesleyan Methodists to wear the blue ribbon in such a manner that wherever Methodist workers meet they can recognise each other. The members have a white border to the blue ribbon, and the centre of the blue bears in red the letter "C.," for Crusader, or "M.B.," for Mission Band. Every wearer of the ribbon is understood to pledge himself in favour of temperance, the social purity movement, and aggressive Christianity. The movement originated with The Crusader, the organ of South Wales Methodism.

FOREIGN.

There are 136,000 drink-sellers in Belgium, or one for every ten families.

An estate of 500,000 acres has lately been purchased on the River Murray, Australia, by a company who have prohibited the sale of drink thereon.

Mr. R. T. Booth has resigned his position as a temperance advocate, and now represents the Sun Insurance Co. (Victoria) at San Francisco.

A temperance café and restaurant has been opened next door to the Seamen's Rest, Marseilles, and it is expected to prove very helpful in the work of that institution. It was formerly a low public-house.

REV. JOHN D. KILBURN has resigned the pastorate of the British and American Congregational Church in St. Petersburg.

CANNES.—A Bible-reading is held every Tuesday at 2.30 p.m., at Châlet des Syrphes. Any who wish to attend will please communicate with Mr. Cheyne Brady.

REV. J. E. SOMERVILLE has left Cannes for Mentone, to the great regret and disappointment of the congregation, which has been greatly increased during his ministry, especially on the week-day service.

Forthcoming Meetings.

The Evangelisation Society will send evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

SOCIETY FOR THE RESCUE OF YOUNG WOMEN & CHILDREN

GO AND SIN NO MORE

The Rescue Society

79, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, E.C.

Several circumstances have combined this year to cause very heavy additional expenditure to the above Society.

The REBUILDING on a greatly improved and enlarged plan, and furnishing of our New Preventive Home at Woodford (now occupied), in place of the one destroyed by fire in January last, will cost £2,400. The INDUSTRIAL work of this Home is very encouraging, £4 PER WEEK having been earned by the reduced number of inmates in the small temporary building. With the increased accommodation a still larger sum can be raised, thus going far towards self-support.

The REMOVAL of a second Home to MORE HEALTHY AND SUITABLE PREMISES at Dalston necessitated an outlay of £850 for the purchase of lease, repairs, and alterations, but saves £43 per annum in rent.

At a THIRD HOME at Buckhurst Hill it was compulsory to replace the wooden Wash-house, &c., by brick buildings at a cost of £100.

The large sum of £3,350 has thus to be found this year, IN ADDITION TO THE ORDINARY EXPENDITURE, towards which amount we have received from the Insurance Company £1,510, and Special Contributions to the Rebuilding and Fire Fund £599 15s., leaving OVER £1,000 to be made up from other sources.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, our GENERAL WORK HAS INCREASED, and more than 560 Young Women and Girls have already received the benefits of our Homes this year.

We are now in Urgent Need of Help. Our Homes are more than full, and our Funds are quite exhausted.

Contributions will be kindly received by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, Office of "THE CHRISTIAN;" by the Bankers, Messrs. BARCLAY, BEVAN & Co., 54, Lombard-street; or will be gratefully acknowledged if sent to the Secretary,

Mr. C. STUART THORPE,

79, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, LONDON, E.C.

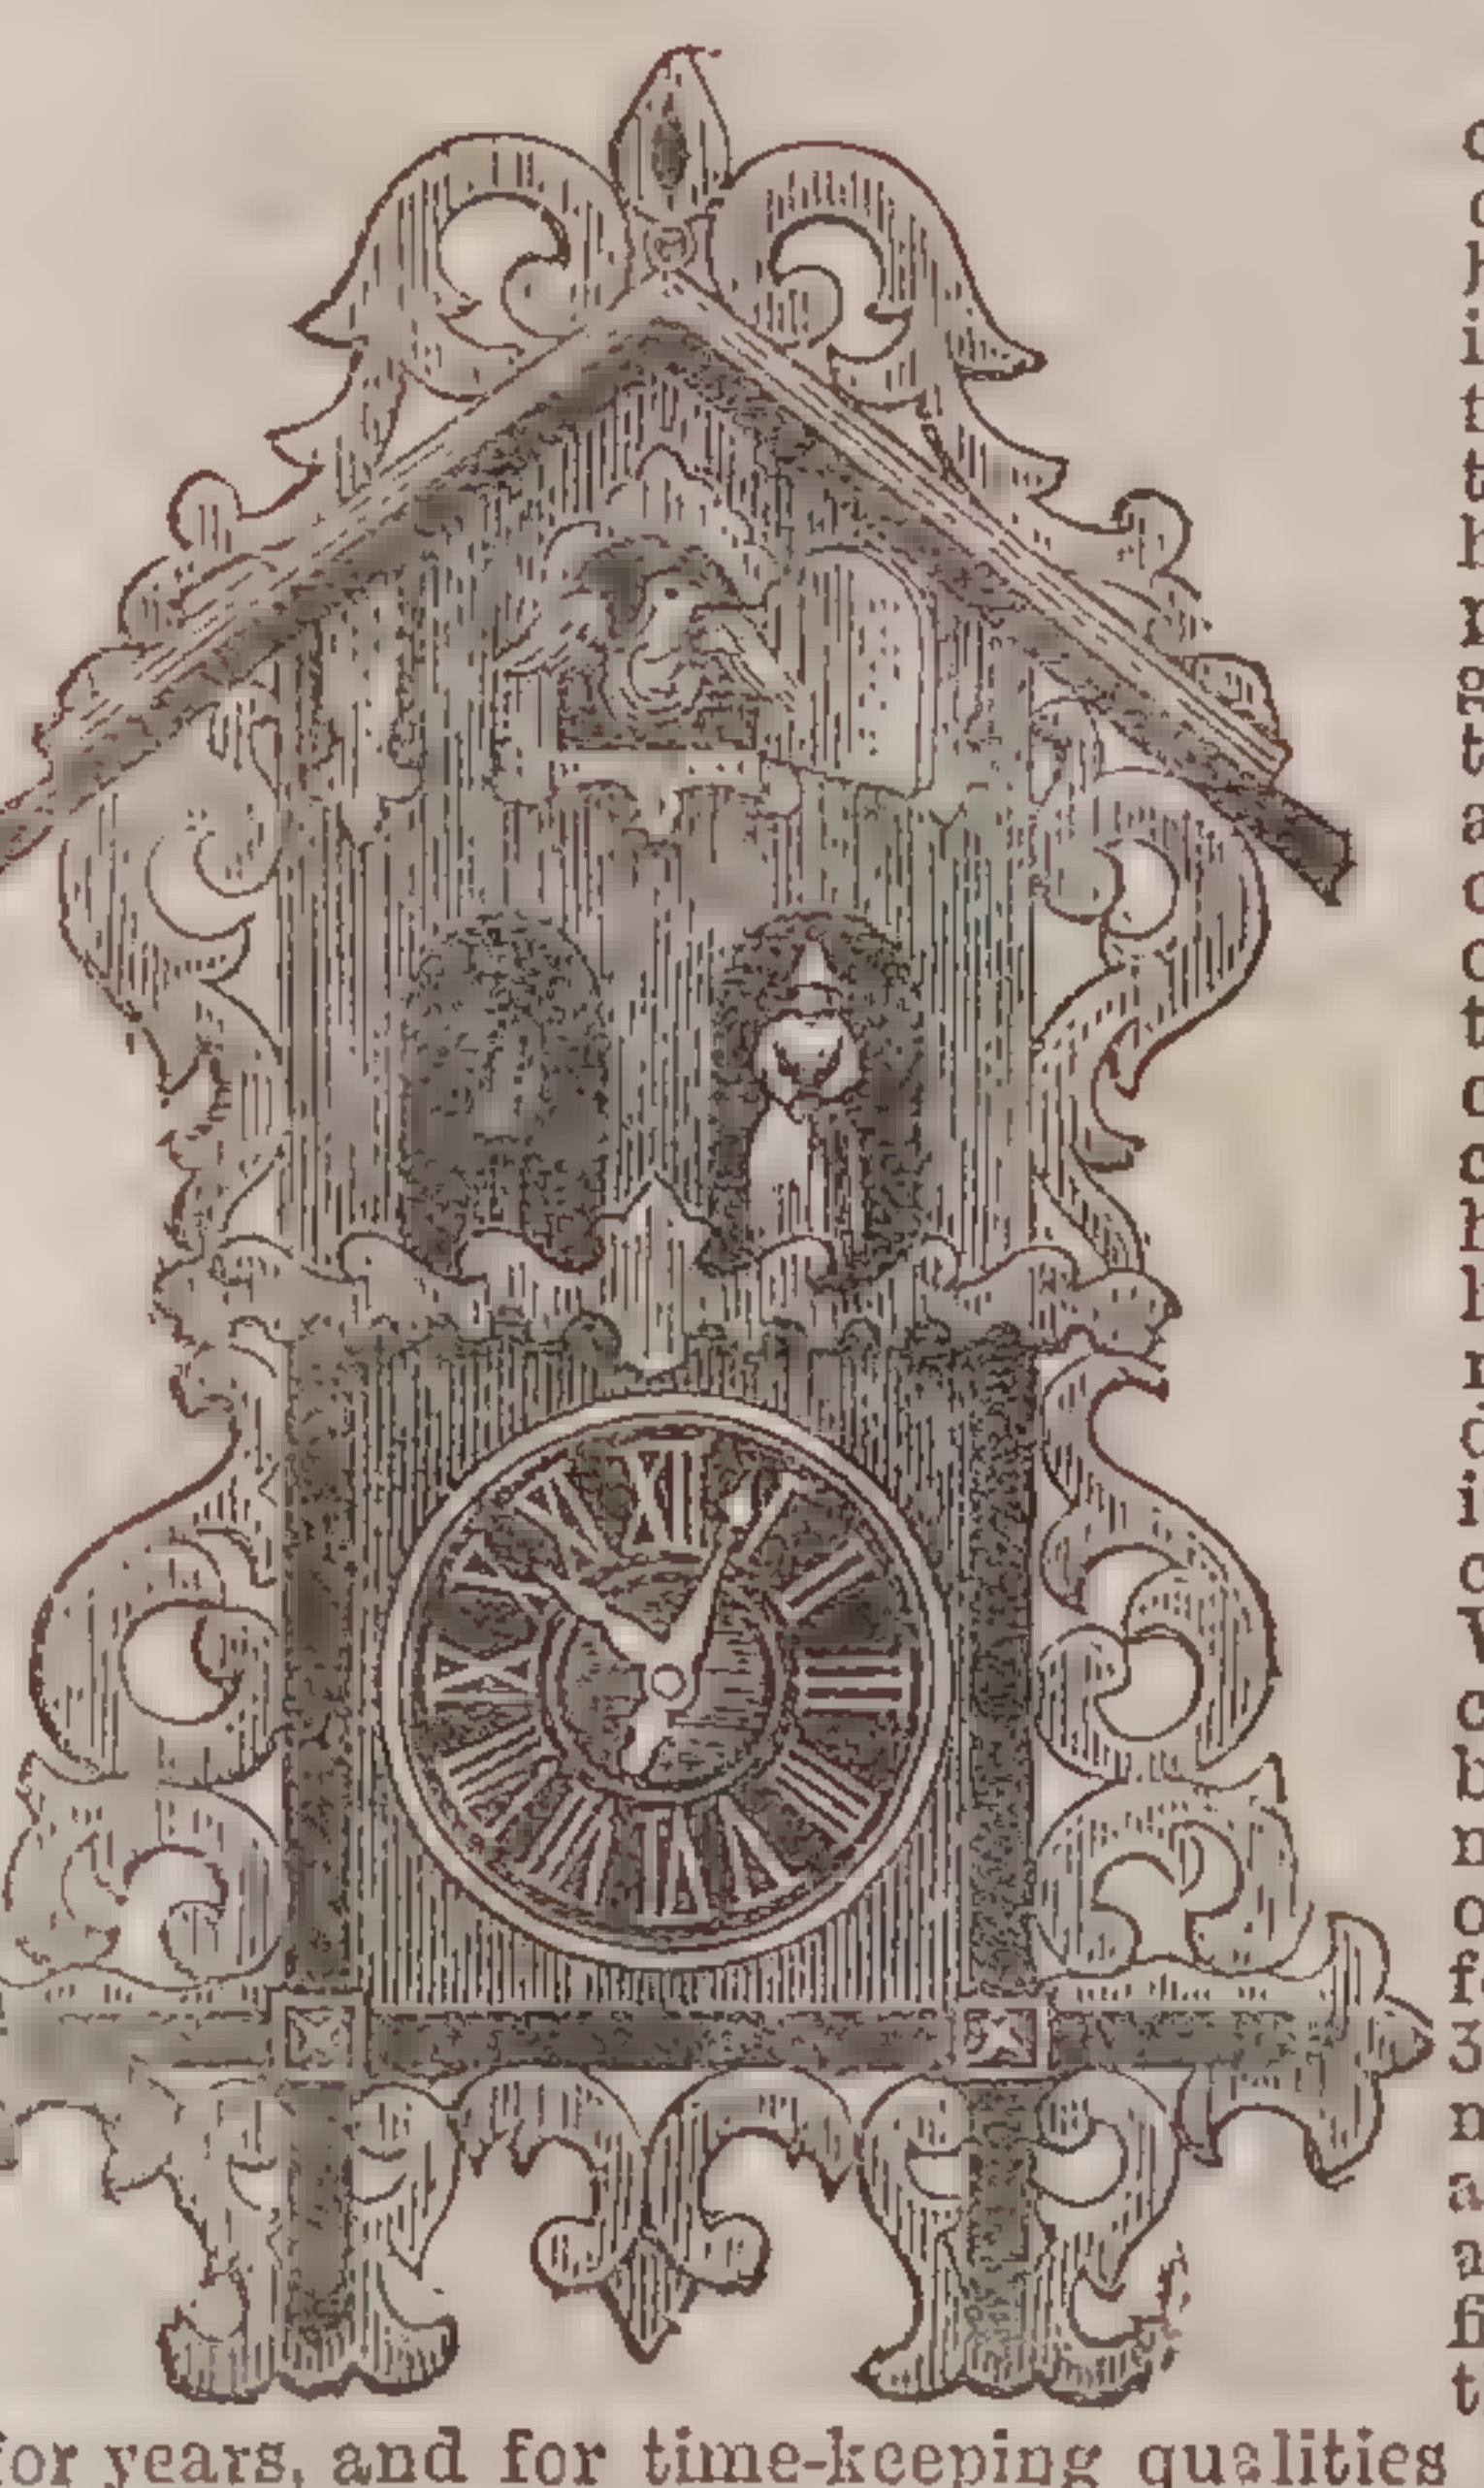
CUCKOO CLOCK and WEATHER HOUSE

(COMBINED).



A handsomely carved wood clock, 22in. in height, with ivory hands and figures, strikes the hours and half hours on a powerful wire gong. Each time the clock strikes a charming little cuckoo pushes open a door at top of clock, and comes out, and cuckoos the hours and half hours, then retires, and the door closes after it. Above the clock is the Weather House, containing beautifully modelled figures of male and female peasants, 3in. high. The man comes out if about to be wet, and woman if fine. We warrant these clocks to go for years, and for time-keeping qualities no better clock can be obtained at any price, while they are ornamental and fit to decorate a palace.

REV. PETER THOMPSON,

London Wesleyan Mission East.

(From Photograph by Messrs. Elliott & Fry)

A VERY conspicuous figure in the ranks of Christian chivalry at the present time is that of PETER THOMPSON, who is at the head of the London Wesleyan Mission East. Most of our readers will have heard of the great work of religion and philanthropy which Wesleyan Methodism is doing in the neighbourhood of St. George's, a centre of sin and misery unsurpassed in East London; and they will be interested to know something of the man who is the leader in one of the bravest and most successful crusades against evil amongst the many which are the glory of this century.

Peter Thompson is of a sturdy stock, belonging to one of those Lancashire families in which the grit of the most rugged and determined section of our Teutonic ancestry remains with all its strong characteristics in their ancient vigour, undiluted by any alien intermixture. He was born in the Fylde between Preston and Blackpool in 1847. In the pure and bracing air of that wild region he spent his boyhood and youth, developing on his father's farm a physique constructed for wrestling with difficulties, and adapted for the toils of the most arduous service. His father is a Methodist local preacher and class-leader of forty years' standing, and the boy grew up in the midst of the sacred influences of a Methodist home, having religion in its intensest and brightest form continually exemplified before him.

He ascribes many of the best elements of his character to the influence of his saintly mother, who was distinguished by a strong practical sagacity. She very early became a teetotaler through her own observation of the terrible mischief wrought by intoxicants, and through her influence they were banished from the farm. Mr. Thompson attributes his first interest in Christian work to the zeal for teetotalism which his mother's precept and example inspired in him.

From his earliest childhood he was taught that he belonged to Christ. The period of his full decision was when he was about eighteen years of age. As soon as he had surrendered himself to God, he began work as a home missionary, taking the sphere which was nearest to his hand in seeking to win the donkey drivers of Blowing Sands for temperance and for Christ. The Church soon discerned his gifts and graces, and in March, 1866, he became a local preacher on trial in the Blackpool Circuit. As a local preacher he was "in labours more abundant," displaying that avidity for hard, persistent toil which has always characterised him. On the Lord's Day he was generally in the pulpit either in his own or the Garstang Circuit, and on the week-day evenings he was engaged in fighting alcohol, taking an active part in the formation and working of the Fylde Temperance Union, of which he was for some years a vice-president.

In 1869 he was accepted as a candidate for the Wesleyan ministry, and was sent to Didsbury College, where he was a most diligent and successful student, being the first to whom an extra year was granted on account of his proficiency and good influence in the College. In 1871 he matriculated at the London University. His duties in connection with his work since then have been so many that he has not proceeded to his academic degree, but he has won a better degree which will confer greater honours upon him in eternity.

At the Conference of 1873 Mr. Thompson was appointed to Broughton-in-Furness, in the Ulverston Circuit. Here our friend found himself in the midst of circumstances calculated to test his tact, his faith, and his courage. He had no chapel, and only six members constituted his little church. But he is one of those men who find stimulus in difficulties. He threw his whole energy into the work, and at the expiration of three years, the longest period allowed amongst the Wesleyans for continuous ministry in the same circuit, he left behind him new places of worship and healthy churches at Broughton and Coniston.

In 1876 he went to the Queen-street Circuit, Huddersfield, taking with him as his wife and helpmeet in the work a daughter of the late Mr. John Thomson, of Annfield, Glasgow. Mrs. Thompson has been an invaluable co-worker with her husband in all his undertakings, and has not only made sunshine at home, but by her personal efforts has contributed greatly to his successes. Upon entering on his work at Huddersfield he found the minds of many of the young men agitated by rationalistic questions. With his usual facility of adaptation to the special needs of his sphere, he set himself in his pulpit ministrations to combat those errors, and won the gratitude of many by removing their doubts.

In 1879 Mr. Thompson began his labours in the Metropolis, becoming the resident minister at Wood Green, in the Finsbury Park Circuit. During his stay there the admirable school premises at Wood Green, which are amongst the best in the neighbourhood, were built, and also a beautful little chapel at Winchmore Hill. His most successful work in this place, however, was the establishment of a working men's Bible-class, a department of service which has been his peculiar delight, and in which he has had remarkable success. He succeeds in awakening in the men an intense enthusiasm for Bible study, and in making each member feel a personal interest in the class. By means of his class at Wood Green Mr. Thompson won his way into the hearts of many amongst the working classes, and in that neighbourhood his name is gratefully remembered.

In 1882 he became superintendent of the Redhill Circuit. During his ministry in this lovely district of Surrey the work was strengthened in every place. At Dorking the chapel was enlarged, and a schoolroom and class-rooms were built. At Reigate a fine chapel and schools were erected. These enterprises, costing about £6000, were completed without entailing any burden of debt. Here, again, his working men's Bible-class was a training-school for Christian workers, as well as a seminary for the study of the Scriptures. During the three years about four hundred men were members of the class.

At the Conference of 1885 Mr. Thompson was appointed to take charge of the first effort of Wesleyan Methodism to respond to the appeal of "The Bitter Cry of Outcast London." He had St. George's Chapel in Cable-street, E., as the centre of his work. He took with him as his aide-de-camp a most devoted and able lay evangelist, Mr. Jameson; and succeeding events have shown the wisdom of Mr. Thompson in his choice of his chief fellow-worker. The Mission has been one of marvellously rapid progress. Three chapels are now included within its area—viz., St. George's, Spitalfields (which is full of historic interest, having been originally a chapel of the Huguenot refugees), and the Seamen's Chapel in the Commercial-road.

The "White Swan" public-house, situated in that part of the Ratcliff-highway now known as High-street, Shadwell, has become the property of the Mission. That public-house with its two music-halls had long been notorious as one of the vilest dens of iniquity in East London. Well known amongst the seafaring community as "Paddy's Goose," it was a great resort of prostitutes and sons of Belial. It was frequented by the habitués of the prize ring, and it is said that men of high position used to go there to witness fights between women stripped to their waists. "Paddy's Goose" is now a glorious focus of Christian activities. In its principal music-hall evangelistic services are constantly held. Its bar is used as a working-men's Christian club-room, and from it a network of Christian toil radiates into the streets and alleys of the neighbourhood.

Another notorious public-house has also been converted to Christian uses in connection with the Mission. The Old Mahogany Bar and Wilton's Music-hall came into the market, and were purchased by Mr. Watson, a Methodist local preacher, who has the salvation of the masses much at heart. He fitted up the premises for mission purposes, intending to work them himself; but, feeling the infirmities of age, and being struck with admiration at the methods of Mr. Thompson's Mission, he finally decided to offer them to him. The property has been purchased by the Committee, and is entirely free from debt. Situated as it is close to Wellclose-square, the Old Mahogany Bar, with its Coffee Tavern and Mission-hall, is a centre of gracious influence in a district "where Satan's seat is."

When the Mission was inaugurated, St. George's Chapel was almost deserted. There were then only 150 church members; now there are 430. More than 1000 persons have come out as inquirers, but a large number have been seamen, others have not remained in the neighbourhood, and thus nothing like the full results can be gathered into church fellowship. The congregations are large. And, what is best of all, the most glorious triumphs of grace have been witnessed amongst the most degraded.

Soon after entering upon the work, Mr. Jameson suggested that an attempt should be made in the evenings to gather in the ragged children who swarmed in the streets, and to instruct them in the ways of God. This Children's Meeting has achieved a success far beyond Mr. Jameson's most sanguine expectations, so that, on three or four evenings of the week, hundreds of these poor little ones are brought together for Christian instruction. Through the children the workers have got access to the parents, and something like 500 mothers assemble weekly in the mothers' meetings at the several centres.

In all these various enterprises, Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are assisted by a large number of helpers, many of whom are voluntary. There are workers' houses for the accommodation of these workers, both men and women. Ladies and gentlemen of wealth and position from the suburbs, and even from the provinces, have given themselves to the work; some are occasional helpers, and others have entered into residence for longer or shorter periods. A great deal of the best work of the Mission is done by women, whose tact and tenderness find a way to hearts that have long been closed against the truth. The band of Christian women, who, with Mrs. Thompson as their leader, go into the dens of this awful neighbourhood, carrying light into places which never saw it before, deserve all praise. The terrible revelations of the last few months (for the locale of the Whitechapel tragedies is in the heart of this district) will show how great are the self-denial and courage involved in this work.

The ladies from Blackheath who assist in the Mission are supporting, at their own cost, in that important suburb, a training-home for servants, to which young girls are drafted from the Mission circle, in order to preserve them from the contamination arising from the overcrowding and other evil environments of the district.

In addition to this, his main work, Mr. Thompson is also connected with several other good enterprises. He has considerable interest in the management of one or two better-class lodging-houses. He is the proprietor and editor of Experience, a journal whose design is to revive the testimony of the early Methodists, and to promote mission work. It was commenced eight years ago by Rev. Alexander McAulay, one of the most honoured of the Ex-Presidents of the Wesleyan Conference. Mr. Thompson is also one of the secretaries of the "Out-and-Out Band," and one of the editors of its monthly organ, Out-and-Out. The aim of this movement is to band together young Christians in whole-hearted devotion to Christ, and service for man. Instituted only at the beginning of thepresent year, it has had marvellous success.

The London Wesleyan Mission, East, is giving the best possible answer to modern scepticism by showing that the preaching of Christ crucified is the best solution of the vexed problem concerning the lapsed masses, and by demonstrating that those whom social reformers have abandoned as outcasts can be transformed into saints by bringing them under the spell of the compassion of Christ. Mr. Thompson feels deeply the necessity of the establishment of better social conditions for these populations, herded together under circumstances which render decency and morality well-nigh impossibilities; but still he holds that it is not the social reformer who is to be the forerunner of the evangelist, but the evangelist of the social reformer. He believes that the Gospel, which in the days of Whitefield and the Wesleys regenerated and raised the colliers of Kingswood and Newcastle and the roughs of Moorfields, is the power of God for the salvation of outcast London. We commend him, and all the noble army of Christian workers in East London, with their glorious work, to the prayerful sympathy of our readers.

SEAMEN IN "THE SOUND."

A WORK has recently been begun among sailors on ships passing through the "Sound," between Denmark and Sweden. Vessels are often compelled to "bring up," or pass slowly through this channel, and fishermen and others have for years made this an opportunity for a traffic by no means elevating to the morals of the sailors.

Having been a seaman, and converted during my seafaring life in Liverpool, I thought what an excellent opportunity this would be for bringing the Gospel to these men. Lastsummer I went there in a small boat, flying the Bethel flag, with tracts in different languages, a little musical instrument, my Bible, and the love of God in my heart. This work is carried on day by day, and I have had many encouragements in it. I shall be pleased to supply any Christian friend with more particulars as to this work,

JOHAN MARCUSSEN.

Fortuna Tvergade, 10, Copenhagen, Denmark.

THE CABMEN OF BATH, to the number of about 120, were the other day entertained at tea by the local Public-house Mission. Several gentlemen and ladies afterwards delivered brief addresses, which were listened to with marked attention. The men appeared to highly appreciate the kindness thus shown to them by the Mission. Copies of the report may be had from the secretary, Miss Skinner, 5, St. James's-square, Bath, who will also gladly receive suitable books and tracts for distribution among the men.

Apocalyptic Interpretation.

III.

In considering what notes of time are to be found in the Apocalypse, we must distinguish between the time when the visions were seen (which was probably about the year A.D. 95) and the time to which they refer, which can only be known by the subject-matter of the visions themselves. No one supposes, or at least has reason to suppose, that what John saw was what was actually taking place in heaven at the time when the visions were shown to him. What he saw was a symbolical representation of certain events, but whether these events may have been as to the actual time of their occurrence—past, present, or future—can only be discovered by such notes of time as the visions may themselves afford. Nor does the threefold division of the book into "things seen," "things which are," and "things which shall be hereafter," forbid the thought of some of the events portrayed in the visions under the third division being already past when John saw them, for in exhibiting events in the main future it might be necessary to go back and exhibit the sources from which such events had originated. Many actions cannot be rightly understood unless seen in connection with the roots out of which they have sprung. Thus in chap. xii. the conflict between the Dragon and the Woman and her Seed, is traced back to the birth, resurrection, and ascension of Christ, the Man-Child, who is to "rule all nations with a rod of iron."

After the grand vision of the fourth chapter, in which the throne of God is seen surrounded by elders and cherubim, the seven-sealed roll is shown in the fifth chapter, and the challenge goes forth, "Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?" Of all the explanations of this sublime vision none can be compared to that which a Futurist writer, the late Dr. De Burgh, following in the steps of Edward Irving, gives in his "Exposition of the Revelation." By reference to a Jewish legal custom, described in Jer. xxxii. 7—15, he shows that a sealed roll suggests the title-deed of a purchased inheritance, and that the language of the whole chapter confirms the thought that we have here the earth, considered as the lost inheritance of Adam, redeemed by the Goel or Kinsman Redeemer, and redeemed, it may further be added, in accordance with another Jewish law (illustrated in Ruth iv. 5—10), by which the widow of the dead is purchased also as wife by him who redeems the inheritance, to raise up the name of the dead upon the inheritance. Thus in Rev. v. we have both an inheritance claimed by one who has redeemed it, and a people purchased to share it with the Redeemer (vv. 9, 10).

This view of the whole scene is infinitely grander and more in accordance with the language used in the chapter than the popular notion that the roll contains the Revelation itself. The challenge as to worthiness, and the acceptance of the challenge by the Lamb, would in this case be pointless, for no peculiar worthiness had ever been required in those many prophets through whom God had granted of old revelations of the future. Nay, some of the leading ones, such as Isaiah, Daniel, and Jeremiah, were specially convinced of their unworthiness when God vouchsafed to use them (see Isa. vi. 5; Jer. i. 6; Dan. ix. 20). But if the redemption of the lost inheritance of earth be seen to be the subject, then all is in keeping, and the opening of the sealed roll is the unfolding of the title-deed, and that by the rightful Purchaser Himself, preparatory to his entering upon the possession of his purchased inheritance, as seen in Rev. xix., which chapter, as the late Edward Bickersteth said, "really belongs to the time of the Seventh Seal."

But now let us mark a distinct note of time. After the challenge has gone forth there is no response; nay, we read: "No one in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth was able to open the book, nor to look thereon." Plainly then the vision contemplates in this its introductory stage a time previous to Christ's death, for John, who wept much because no one worthy could be found, is at once comforted by the announcement, "The Lion of the tribe of Judah, the Root of David hath overcome (literally 'conquered') to open the book, and the seven seals thereof" (see for the meaning of "overcome," John xvi. 33, Rev. iii. 21); then appears the Redeemer as "a Lamb as it had been slain," and He takes the roll, and in doing so his title is recognised, not only by the Church more immediately concerned, but by all sentient creation. Thus we identify the time referred to in the vision with that spoken of by our Lord (Matt. xxviii. 18): "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," or rather "authority" (R.V.), for we are reminded by this more accurate translation that while the right or authority was conferred upon Him at his resurrection, it is not till his Second Coming that He "takes unto Himself his great power" (Rev. xi. 17). The word here for "power" is different.

To sum up, then, the argument in favour of a definite point of time being here referred to. Only before the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus could it be possibly said with truth of the title-deed of redemption, "No one in the heaven, or on the earth, or under the earth, was able to open the book, or to look thereon." The scene, therefore, presented to John in vision goes back to this time, in order to exhibit the total lack of redemptive power in man; but then appears the true Redeemer in all the efficacy of his sacrificial work, and his claim to open the title-deed of earth's inheritance is fully recognised. He then proceeds to open the seals, that so the writing within may make good his claim, and hence the point of time from which the opening of the seals begins is the death and resurrection, and glorification of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Those who view the vision seen at the opening of the first seal—a white horse whose rider has a bow and a victor's wreath going forth conquering and to conquer—as being (to quote Godet's words) "an emblem of the Gospel which through the instrumentality of preaching is about to extend itself victoriously through the earth" cannot but be struck with the very parallel vein of thought between the subject of chap. v. leading to the opening of the first seal, and our Lord's words (Matt. xxviii. 18, 19), "All authority hath been given unto Me in heaven and on earth, go ye therefore and disciple all nations," &c. Indeed this parallelism goes far to confirm the correctness of the view thus arrived at—viz., that the time indicated by the vision (Rev. v.) is that connected with the death, resurrection, and exaltation of our Lord, and that this is the true starting-point of the subsequent visions of the Book of the Revelation.

In the Potter's Hand.

"The vessel was marred."—Jer. xviii. 3, 4.

Dear brother or sister in suffering, is it so with you? Marred, and broken, and laid low; but, oh, not laid aside! The marred vessel was in the hand of the Potter all the while. Is there not wonderful comfort in this one thought? In weakness, in suffering, in uncertainty as to what the issue may be; but in the skilful, loving hand of Him who cannot make one mistake. Another might lay the vessel aside as useless; not so the Potter. His own glory is at stake. Concerning the broken earthen vessel He has a purpose—a purpose of mercy—and it must be accomplished.

"Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him." However useless you may appear in the eyes of others, you are precious in his sight; hence all this hewing, and filing, and polishing—this continual movement of the Divine hand. Job had not "seen the end of the Lord," when he cried, "Cease then, and let me alone, that I may take comfort a little." He was weary of his chastening.

We cannot now fully know his purpose concerning us. Nay, it is too glorious. "He made it into another vessel as it seemed good unto the Potter to make it." A vessel meet for his use, filled with his glory, on earth and in heaven, in time and through eternity: that is what He is making "upon the wheels"! According to the Divine pattern, pure and complete and perfect, it will reflect that glory throughout the ages to come in the palace of the King. Shall we not say—bruised and bleeding and broken as we are—

Take thine own way with me, my Lord,
Thou canst not otherwise than bless.

It is said that there is a place of rest in the centre of the mighty wave, which the sea-bird knows. It is said that there is a cool spot in the heart of the consuming flame where life may exist in safety. Dear sufferer, so may we rest in the hollow of our Father's hand.

The mighty waves and billows may go over us; but "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee." This for the present; and for the future we "reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us" Rom. viii. 18).

THE COTTAGE HOME, KINGSTOWN.—The annual meeting of the friends and supporters of this Institution for little children was held a few days ago, the Archbishop of Dublin presiding. Just a year ago the new Home was entered. At present some forty children are being cared for, varying in age from eleven months to six years. Since the Institution was founded, on a small scale, in 1879, about 250 children have been received as inmates for a longer or shorter time. The Archbishop eulogised the work, which was also commended by other influential gentlemen to the cordial support of the Christian public.

EVANGELISATION IN ROME.—A new centre for evangelistic work has been inaugurated in a hall on the new street, Marco Minghetti, leading up from the Piazza Sciarra on the Corso. It is intended to hold an English service every Sunday evening for preaching the Gospel and bringing strangers into contact with the various branches of evangelical work in the city. As soon as possible, Italian services of an entirely undenominational character, and with the help of the various pastors, will be begun in it. The need for such a rallying centre has long been felt. Major Colquhoun, in this effort, merits the hearty and generous support of all who would see the progress of evangelical work in the city.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR:—FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Situation surveyed, Defects disclosed, and the Church recalled to her Lord's Instructions.

III.—Still Other Resources.

A CURSORY glance at the literature which this Missionary Movement is producing, and which in turn increases its momentum, reveals many other items claimed as points of advantage and elements of success for the future. Some of these may be profitably considered and their actual value weighed.

Constant reference is made to THE MECHANICAL APPLIANCES OF THE AGE; THE INCREASED FACILITIES OF LOCOMOTION, INTERCOURSE, AND COMMUNICATION OF THOUGHT. These, it is said, offer us marvellous advantages over former ages. It is in a sense true. But let us not glory over much in these devices of the world, or join in its boastings of progress and celerity of movement. They are but bringing it more swiftly to its doom.

The PRINTING PRESS, for instance, has indeed been a mighty help to the friends of Christ; but has it not been a still mightier ally to his foes? Estimate the proportion that good books and spiritual periodicals bear to the flood of literature, obscene, rationalistic, infidel, fictitious, vomited uninterruptedly forth, and you may estimate its comparative advantages. It might be desirable for a regiment to possess a Gatling gun; but would not the advantage be questionable if it also gave the enemy a score of them?

Much is also heard of "the sea white with the sails of commerce," and of INTERNATIONAL TRAVEL AND TRAFFIC. We may send men and Bibles everywhere. But do we consider the awful price at which this convenience is purchased? These vessels do occasionally take a missionary party and a few cases of Bibles; but their holds are full also of other things—liquid fire, devilish engines of destruction, troops of soldiers, for whose sake vice must be legalised. They bring back from abroad the seeds of the ancient demon-inspired mysteries and philosophies of the East—and plant them among us, so that Buddhism and Theosophy find kindly soil in London, Paris, and Boston. They familiarise us with Islam, and raise up for that creed of war and lust, apologies and panegyrics. True, the world is opened up, but rum is being pushed into Africa, opium into China, and European infidelity into Japan and India. True, the sturdy Anglo-Saxons now are everywhere; but is it a great advantage to the spread of the Gospel that England is so well known in China, where millions languish in the fumes of opium? Is India or Cape Colony so much nearer the kingdom of God for learning that England provides brothels of native women for her redcoats? Are Mohammedans edified by seeing English and French steamers yearly cruising along all their seaboards to carry their devotees on their vain pilgrimages to Mecca?

In unevangelised lands England's drunkenness, America's reckless extravagance, Spain's popery and ignorance, and France's shameless licentiousness and infidelity, are on full exhibition, and the diplomatic representatives of all these nations unite in agreeing that the nations should not be disturbed in their respective superstitions. All, too, carry violence and bloodshed. All press the weaker races to the wall. "Christendom" does not carry Christ with it. Do not let us assume that it does; it rather does the reverse. God's providence has opened the world, and has given us certain material facilities, but the devil is making a thousandfold greater use of them than the Church. Therefore, while we use them, let it be without boasting, or reckoning on forces that are more against us than for us. Such a spirit induces disappointing reliance.

In addition to all this, we question whether it is according to the mind of the Spirit for us to point our exhortations and adorn our perorations with the assumption that the world has only become open, within the past fifty years, to the inroads of missionary effort. In a very true sense IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN EVERYWHERE OPEN to heroic souls who loved not their lives unto the death, and who went upon Apostolic methods. The Moravians long ago found even leper communities sufficiently open for them, as were countries where Christians could only go as slaves. They sold themselves as slaves: they became lepers. Of such the world is not worthy.

Centuries ago China, India, and even the cruel Barbary states, were open enough for Roman Catholics. To the average missionary of the modern type, who settles down safely and comfortably upon the edge of civilisation, in coast towns or inland military stations, with their little circles of Europeans, the world may not have been opened a century ago. But when, in all the centuries, was not Africa open to a Livingstone, an Arnot, a Wilmot-Brooke; or the far-away islands of fierce cannibals to a Williams or a Patteson; or the frozen shores of Patagonia to an Allen Gardiner? Some of these, indeed, died; but thus was the rift made that let in the light. Let us hereafter abandon this assertion also, of the world being but recently opened, lest thereby we make the more apparent the divergence of our thoughts and methods from those of Pentecostal times.

Much is continually said of a few FIELDS IN WHICH GRATIFYING RESULTS HAVE APPEARED. Thousands have been gathered in, generally very gradually through many years, but in one marked instance within a few days.* How cheering such a Pentecostal scene! It is right that we should speak of these instances to the praise of God, and therewith encourage our hearts in the Lord. But have we not now spoken of them in print and on the platform quite enough? Should they not suggest to us the humbling thought, after all, how isolated, how very exceptional are these cases? How very dark the other portions of the field appear by contrast! On a vast prairie, with the ripe heavy grain rustling in the breeze, and inviting the sickle and stretching away for miles, shall we boast if three or four swathes a few rods long are garnered? Was it seemly for Israel to glory in Caleb having long before taken Hebron from the sons of Anak, when almost all the land was yet to be possessed, and failure and defeat because of sin were their chief portion?

Another element of success much emphasised is THE CHURCH'S VAST WEALTH. She has but to give, and all the shafting, pulleys, and belts revolve, that give motion to her multiform machinery of home effort, with its secretaryships, boards, committees, agents, delegations, workers, theological and medical students, and nurses in hospital training, its outfits and passages; and, abroad, its schools, colleges, seminaries, dispensaries, hospitals, churches, services, and itinerant work. But without the money all must stop. Therefore, naturally, much is said of money. More is said of it than of any other factor. Money is that which, at all hazards, must be had. How it overshadows all other items, even in Mr. Johnston's valuable statistical pamphlet, "A Century of Protestant Missions." Observe the place it took in the recent World's Missionary Conference. How extraordinary that mammon should occupy a place of such overweening importance! It was not so in Apostolic times.

* Among the Telugus, when 2222 were baptized in one day.

Let us not boast ourselves that the Church has such wealth. How came she to be "rich and increased in goods"? Being rich, how is it she does not fill the Lord's treasuries? The spirit that disobeyed in accumulating, disobeyed in retaining. A rich and covetous Church! Gold in the forefront! What wonder there is something wrong! Wedges of gold and Babylonish garments agree not with spiritual power, and have brought defeat to God's Israel before. But this subject of money requires separate treatment.

There is yet another force the Church possesses in which is more of potency and promise than all the rest combined. It is in THAT MOVEMENT IN PROGRESS NOW FOR YEARS, EVER GATHERING FORCE AND NUMBERS, IN THE DIRECTION OF CONSECRATION AND HOLINESS. This is one of God's chief factors in the vast problem of the world's evangelisation in the little time of harvest that remains. Closely related to this remarkable movement, and before it in point of time and causation, is the clear and increasing light which for half a century has been pouring in upon God's Word in all its departments. The privileges of believers are entered upon, their responsibilities realised, and the prophetic word has glowed in sevenfold light. Especially has it come to be largely seen that the Gospel is to be preached, not for the conversion of the world, but as a witness, and to take out of the Gentiles a people for Christ's name. When the witness is fully borne, the elect will have been gathered in, and the end of the dispensation will come—the Lord Himself will appear.

This last feature, to an intelligent and spiritual people, waiting to do his bidding, is like a prophecy of blessing. It is they who will discern the voice of the Lord pointing out afresh in the Word his principles and methods, whose adoption must precede his fulfilment of Joel's great promise of the Spirit being poured upon all flesh, of which Pentecost was but a provisional and partial fulfilment. It is from their ranks those will yet go forth who, in the Spirit's power, shall shake the nations. But let them be humble and obedient, for even their works are yet far from perfect before the Lord. To point out what is the marked defect in present attainments in consecration will next occupy us, as it bears so vitally on our general subject.

A MISSIONARY.

Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we hope to give portrait and sketch of Mons. Eugene Reveillaud.

Appeals flow in upon us from London workers, asking help in providing some material cheer for the poor at the approaching Christmas season. We shall be only too happy to respond, if the generosity of our readers will enable us to do so.

Canon Butler, we very much regret to say, is seriously ill; the nature of his malady causes a depression which is one of the most trying circumstances of the case. We are sure our readers will affectionately remember him and Mrs. Butler at the throne of grace; and also a little granddaughter suffering with spinal affection.

The Times of Friday has a leader on "Affairs in Eastern Europe," in which the complications between Russia and Austria, on account of Servia, Bosnia, and Montenegro, are discussed. The article thus concludes:—

> Can King Milan resist? Is he strong enough to prevent an insurrection in Belgrade, the proclamation of Karageorgevitch, and the inevitable consequence—an Austrian occupation of Belgrade, and, as a certain sequel, the outbreak of war between Austria and Russia and the beginning of that Armageddon to which pessimistic politicians are looking forward? That the danger can be altogether overcome and swept out of existence is scarcely possible; we can but hope that it may be long deferred.

It seems a little inconsistent to stigmatise as "pessimistic politicians" those who foresee a danger which the writer himself thinks cannot be altogether overcome, and only hopes that it may be long deferred.

☞ Messrs. Morgan & Scott beg to announce that their establishment will be closed for the Christmas Holidays from Saturday, December 22, until Thursday, December 27. Orders for books, &c., should therefore reach them not later than Friday morning, December 21, by first post, to prevent their delivery on the Lord's Day. ADVERTISEMENTS for THE CHRISTIAN, December 28, must arrive not later than Saturday morning, the 22nd.

The editor of The Homilist gives as one reason for the failure of marriage,

> The wretched laws of breach of promise and the unjust way in which they are administered. A young man discovers on sufficient acquaintance that a girl to whom he has got engaged is not calculated to make him a suitable wife, but he finds that he dare not withdraw. He must either be publicly ruined by law proceedings, or else he must be privately ruined by being dragged into an alliance he knows will end in an earthly hell.

There is truth in this, but our contemporary makes no mention of the other side. It much more frequently occurs that the weaker one is deserted, to the ruin of her prospects; and is often betrayed, to the ruin of her character.

But we should not have taken notice of the above remark, had not the Homilist continued his homily in the following astounding fashion:—

> There has been an outbreak of diabolical crime by some individual in the east of London, who has committed murder after murder undetected, and is still at large. ...I believe that the withdrawal of the Contagious Diseases Acts is one of the most fatal blunders, religiously and morally, that was ever undertaken.

What can we say when a professedly religious teacher commends the uncleanest legislation that ever disgraced our statute book? The Homilist seems to think that the best way to check immorality is to attempt to remove the penalties which the Creator has attached to it.

Mr. Dyer, whom the Homilist criticises, telegraphed to us on Friday the message given on page 22, under the heading, "Is there none to save her?" We cannot but wonder whether the writer in The Homilist ever, in all his life, made as much effort to save one woman, as Mr. Dyer is making on behalf of all women every day of his life.

The reply of Sir John Gorst in the House of Commons, on Monday, to the question addressed to him, is altogether unsatisfactory. He has apparently been instructed that the girl is married, and that the courts decide on her return "to her husband and mother." The contention of Mr. Dyer and his friends seems to be that she is a widow, and that sending her back to her mother is simply compelling her to lead a life of sin—a course which she now regards with loathing. Certainly the last has not been heard of this unhappy case.

A fresh voice has now been raised against theatrical entertainments on behalf of religious work. The manager of a theatre in a provincial city has lodged an objection to such an item on the programme of a bazaar held in the Congregational Church, on the ground that no licence had been obtained. Is it not time to "draw the line" when the world itself has to step in and rebuke the Church's worldliness! The minister of the church in question lays the responsibility upon a deputy who, unknown to him, engaged professional actors and actresses for the occasion. But surely he ought to have expressed his wishes more clearly. As it is, the incident has become a scandal and a stumbling-block.

The North Middlesex Chronicle also utters a needed protest against "smoking concerts for lads of fourteen," and "entertainments which can be obtained at any music-hall," held at a Church "Iron Room" in a northern suburb, under the auspices of a "Young Men's Mutual Improvement (!) Association." The writer suggests that these are hardly calculated to "improve" the youth of the neighbourhood. That such things should be done in the name of religion, is the saddest feature of the case.

In a recent note we stated that the Archbishop of Dublin had said that in Portugal, during the last twenty-five years, some ten thousand persons have come out from Romanism. A correspondent writes to us from Oporto:—

> This may be the case in Spain, but not in Portugal, and I think you will find that the Archbishop referred to the former country. In Portugal I do not suppose there are 2000 open converts, and they are poor, and much dependent upon outside help for spreading the Gospel.

With regard to the increase in the number of religious institutions in Spain, the same correspondent writes:—

> Unfortunately, this is also the case in Portugal, at least, so far as female votaries are concerned. As convents and nuns are prohibited, these institutions and their inhabitants are called "Retirements" and "Sisters of Charity." The votaries go to France and other countries to take their vows. The whole country is overrun with them, and as they are well off, the authorities wink at them. Jesuitism, though illegal, has regained much of her old sway, and is the cause of these institutions.

Nevertheless, with a vigorous reformation movement in Spain, and a hearty response to the Gospel in many parts of Portugal, there is much to encourage Christian labourers in the fair Peninsula.

We ask our readers' attention to the important article in our present issue reprinted from The Financial Critic. It shows that modern mammon worshippers are prostituting commerce into worse than gambling—into a criminal conspiracy—into gambling with loaded dice in the necessities of the people. Is this one of the ways in which curses come home to roost? In the name of commerce successive English Governments have blasted China with unnecessary and destructive opium; now the necessaries of life to our own people are the stakes for which prostituted commerce gambles with loaded dice. South-sea bubbles were bad enough, but corn, and cotton, and copper corners, and salt syndicates, are infinitely worse.

The American Board of Foreign Missions is agitated afresh by the "future probation" question. A church in Boston has three times applied to the Board to send to Japan a Rev. W. H. Noyes, who draws what he terms corollaries and inferences from Scripture that the love of God in Jesus Christ will be revealed after death to those who have not heard the message in this life. Why, it may be asked, should men intrude into what is not revealed? We cannot take a step in speculations about the state after death except as Scripture gives us light, and no words are more emphatic than of the "now" being the acceptable time and the day of salvation. This matter is sorely agitating good men in the United States, and it certainly seems to us that missionary boards are justified in declining candidates whose opinions are formed on "inferences," concerning which they may be mistaken, rather than from the unambiguous teaching of God's Word.

A Welsh correspondent calls our attention to the custom which prevails in the Principality of raising statues as memorials of departed worthies. Quite recently several such monuments have been erected at considerable expense. Our correspondent well says:—

> Are there not many other ways more Christian-like, and more sure to perpetuate the characters and usefulness of the mighty dead than by erecting statues? Now that Christians are being more stirred to consider the need of workers for heathen countries, could not the money be far more profitably utilised, in the name of the departed, for the preparation and support of missionaries, or to enable some poor thirsty boy or girl to obtain higher education, or to place destitute children in a Christian home?

We leave these suggestive words to carry their own force, confident that they will receive due attention at the hands of Welsh Christians.

In times of political discussion concerning Ireland, it is pleasant to read of the ministers of the Irish Presbyterian Church meeting in Belfast for a day of humiliation and prayer. An utterance not often heard respecting the "evangelisation of the nation" was made prominent, and it was confessed that the Presbyterian Church had in this respect "miserably failed." Doubtless the difficulties are very great. But Ireland has not been without her great spiritual revivals, and they are her true friends who, in these days of her trouble, are preparing the way for the uniting and ameliorating influence of another gracious visitation.

We can see no sign of any satire in Mr. Bent's paper, in the current Nineteenth Century, written after two visits to Patmos. The information, although not entirely new, possesses a curious interest. From Patmos, he says, there may be seen, rising out of the sea, a conspicuous and awe-inspiring cone of a submarine volcano, called the Island of Thera (thēr—"the beast"); that it is surrounded by a number of islands all of which seem violently agitated during an eruption; that the sea appears at such a time to be mingled with fire; and that classical writers bear witness to a remarkable activity during the first century when thick vapours darkened the air. Sir William Dawson, the Christian scientist, has held the opinion that John derived illustrations from these phenomena. This would not be inconsistent with his inspiration. The prophets often took their imagery from contemporaneous events, and the facts would go to confirm the orthodox opinion as to the date of the Apocalypse.

Now that the season is at hand for kindly thought on behalf of those to whom winter brings want and little work, some words may be remembered which Archdeacon Farrar lately uttered in Westminster Abbey. He did not make the mistake of condemning the outlay whereby a man sought to give employment to others, according to the position in which Providence had placed him; but, after referring to a costly and luxurious expenditure on articles of ostentation, the Archdeacon said:—

> If there is such a Pactolus of wealth for these gewgaws of silk and clay, can there be by comparison only a drop or two to heal the bodies and ameliorate the souls of men? Why should the runnel of charity dribble on as it does, while the tide of luxury is still at flood.

This, surely, is a right way of looking at this matter. At a time of Christmas appeals it may be fittingly asked whether to the expenditure that terminates with ourselves there should not be some correspondence in gifts that go to bless others?

In a recent volume of sermons, Dr. Whiton refers to a poor negro woman, "who bequeathed to the Yale Theological Seminary the savings of a life spent at the washtub, to be a fund for the education of men of her own race to preach the Gospel of Christ." He goes on to say:—

> Here we have found, on one of the humblest levels of the modern world, a life of the commonest drudgery, filled with dignity and power by the same divine object that inspired Paul's life of tribulation with thanksgiving. The laundress, the Apostle, are both full of the same inspiration.

What an impetus would be given to the evangelisation of the world if we had more of the spirit which animated the poor washerwoman!

The Hospital, in calling attention to what it terms "the slaughter of shop assistants," says that in many parts of the United Kingdom the working hours of shop assistants number eighty-four or eighty-six per week, i.e., fourteen hours every week day, and that the condition of many of these, especially the young women, is painful in the extreme, at least half of them being in chronic bad health.

> We take the pick and flower of our lower middle class, and utterly destroy them in health and physique.

It is perhaps useless to appeal in such a matter to the majority of shopkeepers. Backed up by the teachings of political economy, the shopkeeper does his best to increase his profits, and it is for the Legislature to see that the profit is not built up upon the happiness and lives of others.

Commenting upon the recent attacks by a Romish paper in Dublin upon Christian and philanthropic movements in that city, The Ecclesiastical Gazette recently remarked that it would look better if the critics were doing something to reduce the number of public-houses responsible for the thousands of destitute children. A recent official return points to the sad pre-eminence of the Irish capital in regard to intemperance. It shows that the number of arrests in Dublin between the hours of 8 a.m. Sunday and 8 a.m. Monday, during twelve months, was nearly double that of the other four cities together; Belfast, with a population nearly as large, and with a much larger number of the "working classes," not having a sixth of the number of arrests.

Notwithstanding the great reduction which has been made in the death-rate of our large centres of population during the last quarter of a century, much remains to be done in the direction of improving the surroundings, which are so influential in producing preventable sickness. The better housing of the poor remains one of the most pressing duties of the time, and the longer the solution of the problem is delayed the greater will be the roll of those whose death is nothing more or less than martyrdom to the apathy and neglect of those who should have cared for them. In London alone nearly 36,000 preventable deaths occur each year, deaths which, it is asserted, more attention to sanitary arrangements would stop. What, then, must be the number for the entire country?

The Epistle to the Hebrews.

VIII.—CHRIST'S MERCIFUL AND FAITHFUL HELP.

HEBREWS ii. 16, &c.

DOST thou wonder that thy Lord was tempted and sorrowful? It is indeed the marvel of eternity; and yet not so marvellous, when we consider the beings whom He elected to succour, help, and save, and of whom each of us is one.

Had He chosen to lay hold of fallen angels, with a view of raising them from their lost estate, He would without doubt have taken upon Himself their nature, and descended into the pit, identifying Himself with their miseries, and paving, by his sufferings, a pathway across the great fixed gulf which intervenes between their lost estate and Paradise. But verily He took not hold of angels, but of the seed of Abraham, and had no alternative therefore but to assimilate Himself in all points to the nature of those whom, in infinite mercy and grace, He brothered.

There are two things thou needest, reader, and not thou only, but all men—reconciliation, and succour in the hour of temptation. These instinctive cravings of the soul are as mighty and as irrepressible as the craving of the body for sleep or food; and they are as evident amid the luxury of Belgravia as in primeval forests, or beside the historic rivers of antiquity—the Nile, the Indus, the Euphrates.

To meet these two needs, men have constituted one of their number a priest. That word has an ominous sound to our ears, because it has been associated with immoralities and cruelty. The world has never seen more unscrupulous or rapacious tyrants than its priests, whether of Baal or Moloch, of Judaism, or the Papacy. All through the ages it has seemed impossible for men to receive power in the spiritual realm without abusing it to the injury of those who sought their help. Study the history of the priesthood, which murdered Christ because He threw too strong a light upon their hypocrisies and villainies, and you have the history of every priesthood which has darkened the world with crime, and saturated its soil with the blood of the noblest and saintliest of men.

And yet the idea of the priest is a natural and a beautiful one.—It is natural for men who are conscious of sin barring their access into the presence of a holy God, and demanding sacrifice in order to peace, to say to one of their fellows, "Our hands are stained with blood, and grimed with toil; our garments spotted with pollution and dust; our lives too busy for us to spare time for those rites which alone can fit the sinner to stand before the eye of God; do for us what we cannot do for ourselves; prepare thyself by holy rite, and vigil, and fasting from sin, so as to be able to stand in the presence-chamber of the All Holy; and, when thou hast acquired the right of audience with Him, speak for us, atone for us, make reconciliation for our sins, and then come forth to us, succouring and blessing those who cannot attain to thy position, but must ever struggle as best they may with the strong, rough, bad world in which they are doomed to live."

This seems the underlying thought of the vast system, which has built temples in every land, reared altars on every soil, and constituted a priesthood amid the most degraded as well as the most civilised races of mankind. And there is great beauty in the work and ministry of a true priest. Not always engaged in the darker work of sacrificing flocks of fleecy sheep, by which alone, in those rude days, the cost of sin could be computed, the true priest would have other, and, perhaps, more congenial work. He would be the shepherd of the timid souls around him; listening to confessions whispered over the heads of the dumb victims; feeling compassion for erring and wayward ones; comforting those who were passing through scenes of sorrow, till faces, shadowed with tears, began to gleam with holy light; arresting the proud hand of the oppressor, as Ambrose did in lawless days, to rescue the poor from the mailed blow. Never studying self-interest; never consulting ease, or pleasure, or gain; never resting while one poor wanderer was away in the snowdrift or on the wild. Yes, and more; he would be the spokesman of souls, praying for those who did not pray for themselves; praying with those who knew not what or how to ask; interceding for the whole race of man. Ah! how often must such a one have been compelled by the pressure of the burden to go apart from the busy crowds to some lone spot, that he might pour out before God the long litany of need and sorrow and temptation which had been poured into his heart. Lovely ideal, ah! how seldom realised!

All this is Jesus Christ, and more.—Words fail indeed to say all that He is in Himself, or all that He can be to those that trust Him. And it is because of this; that He is able to give such blessed help to all who need it. Let us consider that help.

I. IT IS SOVEREIGN AND UNEXPECTED HELP.—Angels fell. Once they were the peers of heaven. They sang its songs, plucked its flowers of amaranth, and drank its tranquil bliss. They loved its King, and served Him, like the sunbeam, with unpolluted brightness and unswerving direction. But, alas! they fell from heaven to hell. And for them there is no help, so far as we can learn. "God helped not angels."

But He has set his heart upon us, the poor children of dust, the creatures of the transient moments of time, who had fallen by the same sin of self-will. Here is a theme for meditation! We cannot pierce the mystery, or understand its full import. But we may, with wondering faith and joy, accept the chalice, brimming with unmerited, unexpected, undeserved grace, and drain its draughts of bliss.

II. IT IS HUMAN HELP.—"Made like his brethren." The peculiarity of this phrase testifies to Christ's pre-existence and glory, and indicates how great a stoop on his part it involved ere He could be like man. He had to be made like man, i.e., He was not like man in the original constitution of his being. We cannot solve the mystery of the holy incarnation. And yet the thought of it has never been quite foreign to the heart of man. Many a Greek and Hindu myth rested on an instinctive craving for the presence of God in human flesh, which became parent to the belief that such a thing had been, and might be again. Even in the highlands of Galatia, the most ready explanation of the miracles of Paul was that the gods had come down in the likeness of men.

But though there be such a profound mystery resting on this subject, yet the union of the Almighty with a human life is at least not more incomprehensible than the union of a spiritual, unmaterial principle, as the soul, with a material organism, as the human body. When the secrets of our own nature have been unravelled, it will be time enough for us to demand of the Almighty that, when He assumes our nature, He should disrobe Himself of all mystery. How lovely is the arrangement that God's help should come to us through the Son of Man; that our helper should shed true human tears, and feel true human pity. Jew though He were, child of the most exclusive, intolerant of peoples, yet the humanity which is greater than Judaism makes us oblivious to all else than that He is our Brother.

III. IT IS HIGH-PRIESTLY HELP.—The full meaning of this phrase will appear as we proceed. It is sufficient to say here, that all that men have sought to realise in human priesthoods, but in vain, is realised with transcendent beauty in Him. Nor is there any way of weaning men from the human priesthoods which deceive, but to present to them the all-glorious, immaculate priesthood of Christ.

It is of little use only to denounce the priests that are coming back to Protestant England through a thousand covert channels, or the people who go to them. There is a craving in their heart which impels them. It is of no use to fight against nature. But satisfy it; give it its true nutriment; supply its wants with reality; and it will be content to drop the false for the true, the paste diamond for the Golconda pebbles, the human for the Divine. Men must have a priest; and they are going back to the mummeries of Rome, because there has been too scanty a presentation in our pulpits of the priesthood of Jesus.

IV. IT IS MERCIFUL AND FAITHFUL HELP.—When we are in need, we want help wedded with mercy. The patient in the infirmary does not like to be treated as a broken watch. Oh that he were at home again to be nursed by the soft hands of his mother, which always seemed so skilful, and gentle, and soft. We need merciful help, which doesn't upbraid, isn't in too great a hurry to listen, and gladly takes all extenuating circumstances into account, Such mercy is in the heart of Jesus. And his help is ever faithful, too. This word has a fine tint of meaning, almost lost in our translation, giving the idea of one who runs up at the first cry of distress. He neither slumbers nor sleeps. He watches us with a gaze which is not for a a moment diverted from us. He sees us through the storm. He sits beside the molten metal. He will help us right early—i.e., when the day breaks. You may be bereft of all power of consecutive thought, unable to utter a single intelligible sentence, frantic with agony and remorse; but, if you can only moan, He will instantly respond. "He will be very gracious unto thee at the voice of thy cry."

V. IT IS HELP BASED ON RECONCILIATION FOR SIN.—Sin is one of the greatest facts in our history. It is impossible to ignore it. You cannot explain man unless you take it into account. For this the world has been covered with the apparatus of sacrifice; and the cry has rung in a monotone of despair, "How shall man be just with God?"

But Jesus met the demands of conscience, echoing those of a broken law, when on Calvary, as High Priest, He offered himself as victim, and made an all-sufficient, satisfactory, and complete sacrifice for the sins of the world.

Burdened one, groaning under the load of sin, remember that He bare thy sins in his own body on the tree. Approach the Holy God, reminding Him of that fact, and daring on account of it to stand unabashed and accepted in his sight.

VI. IT IS SYMPATHETIC HELP FOR THE TEMPTED.—"Them that are tempted." Within that circle we all stand. Each is tempted in subtler, if not in grosser, forms; in extraordinary, if not in ordinary, ways. You have been trying, oh! so hard, to be good; but have met with some sudden gust, and been overcome. Tempted to despair! Tempted to yield to Potiphar's wife! Tempted to become a brute! No lawn without the fowler's snare! No day without its arrow! No night without its noisome pestilence! No rose without its thorn!

Do we not need succour? Certainly; and He is able to succour the tempted, because He has suffered the very worst that temptation can do. Not that there was ever one symptom or thought of yielding, yet suffering to the point of extreme anguish, beneath the test.

O sufferers, tempted ones, desolate and not comforted, lean your heads against the breast of the God Man, whose feet have trodden each inch of your thorny path, and whose experiences of the power of evil well qualify Him to strengthen you to stand, to lift you up if you have fallen, to speak such words as will heal the ache of the freshly gaping wound. If He were impassive, and had never wept or fought in the garden shadows, or cried out forsaken on the cross, we had not felt Him so near as we can do now in all hours of bitter grief.

O matchless Saviour, on whom God our Father has laid our help; we can dispense with human sympathy, with priestly help, with the solace and stay of many a holy service; but Thou art indispensable to us, in thy life, and death, and resurrection, and brotherhood, and sympathising intercession at the throne of God!

WORK IN YORKSHIRE VILLAGES.

MESSRS. HARMER and PARKER, Mr. Spurgeon's evangelists have just concluded a very successful seven weeks' mission in the manufacturing villages around Bradford, Yorks. At Queensbury, under the preaching of Mr. Harmer and the singing of Mr. Parker, many were induced to confess Christ. The work at Denholm, a village of 4000 inhabitants, was also greatly blessed, denominational differences being left quite out of sight in the warmth of combined Gospel testimony.

At Allerton, another large village, a work of much depth and breadth was done. People of all churches and no churches at all trusted the Saviour for the first time, and many a Christian home was made bright by the conversion of the younger members of the family. Sunday-school teachers were also, in several instances, gladdened by their children entering the inquiry-room. Clayton was the last place visited, and peace was there spoken to many a heart. Great was the joy of believers to see the power of the Gospel night after night in large assemblies of people. The young converts have been banded together in classes for weekly meetings.

Messrs. Harmer and Parker have engagements for some months ahead. Letters to them may be addressed, care of Mr. Hibbert, Metropolitan Tabernacle, S.E.

MERSEY MISSION TO SEAMEN.—For some years past an effort has been made at Christmas to show a little seasonable brightness to the sailors and boat people of Liverpool and neighbouring places. It is hoped that by the hearty assistance of friends this will be rendered possible again this year. Rev. T. Patrick, Seamen's Institute, Hanover-street, Liverpool, will be glad to receive donations, and also gifts in kind, including woollen articles, such as are so welcome to those who face all weathers at sea.

Dr. Saphir on the Bible.—6.

ON Thursday last week, at St. John's Presbyterian Church, Allen-street, Kensington, Dr. Saphir delivered the sixth of his series of seven addresses on the Bible. The aspect of the subject dwelt upon was "Israel since the Dispersion a witness for the Truth of the History and Prophecy of Holy Scripture." The address was replete with historical allusions and instruction on Bible themes. There was again a large attendance.

Since the destruction of Jerusalem and all during the dispersion of Israel, we behold the descendants of Abraham under the displeasure of God, spiritually blind, yet in allegiance with God, and God still regarding them with favour. Israel is a witness for the truth in a negative way, as compared with the Church of Christ, which bears a positive testimony. Wonderful are the complicated methods of Divine Providence! That the Messiah, after many centuries of preparation, should come to Israel and be rejected, and that Israel's rejection of the Messiah should not end their history, but only retard it for a number of centuries, thus giving opportunity and time for the working out of another portion of the counsel of the Most High; this none but prophets sent by God could possibly have foretold!

Having shown how the prophecies concerning Christ's coming in glory are commingled with those setting forth his First Advent to suffer, Dr. Saphir pointed out that the fulfilment of the one set of predictions was not such as to compel faith. In all God's revelations there is an element of darkness, in order that faith may be tested. Proceeding, the speaker powerfully maintained that the nation of Israel is now being preserved, as up to the present it has been, for the fulfilment of God's gracious purpose.

Dwelling upon the scattering of Israel, Dr. Saphir said: What a strange thing, that, after God had for centuries been keeping them away from all the nations, and caring for them in one little corner of the world, he should take them and disperse them among all peoples of the earth! The entire history of Israel went to teach them that they were to remain separate, and to keep themselves distinct as a people — concentrated, not scattered. No human wisdom could ever have foreseen such a paradox as is exhibited in the experiences of Israel in their own land and the subsequent dispersion which, in his providence, God brought upon them. At some length Dr. Saphir showed that the Israelites were never led to believe that God's interest was confined to them; rather, God said, in effect: "I have chosen you as my first-born, for I want to bless all nations of the earth. You must not think I have chosen you for your own sake alone, but that you may give forth my light among the idolatrous nations of the world." Israel was prepared in some measure for the dispersion by the influence of the Greek language and culture, and also by the multiplication of places of religious worship and instruction in Palestine, in the form of synagogues.

When the destruction of Jerusalem came, and thousands of Jews lost their lives, many being also led into captivity, a calamity such as no nation has ever experienced overwhelmed Israel. Still, notwithstanding all this, the people remained loyal to God, although blood-guiltiness was still upon them. Nothing would induce them to give up the worship of the one true God, or to adapt themselves in any way to the idolatrous customs of the nations. Indeed, as if nothing had happened, they continued to love the Holy Scriptures, and every Sabbath the law of Moses was read. They did not apostatise from God, and lapse into infidelity; they did not give way to despair, but, feeling that they were justly suffering for their sins, with wondrous heroism and faith they continued in the old ways. It was the Word of God that thus preserved Israel. Although not understood, there being a veil upon the hearts of the people, that Word was with them. To this day Israel is a witness for the Word of God. Monuments of marble and stone are nothing compared with a nation of millions, who, for centuries, in spite of bitter persecution, have continually commemorated the great facts which are recorded in Holy Scripture as having occurred in the days of old.

Dr. Saphir went on to speak of the Sabbath and its significance; the Passover and its associations; the Day of Atonement and its teaching. These, with the Feast of Weeks, and other ordinances, have been observed, notwithstanding degrading persecution. The deterioration of Israel in some respects was then noticed; on the one hand, their growing indifference, and on the other their superstitious helplessness. Yet, as the prophets have declared, Israel shall yet "Seek the Lord"—seek Jehovah, and hail Him whom they once rejected, saying "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord." For this glorious consummation and blessing to the world, God is preserving Israel. Their condition since the dispersion runs in every sense parallel with prophecy, which is also eloquent with the glory that will follow the return of the Lord from heaven. These themes were pursued at some length. The hope of the pious Jew meets with that of the instructed Christian here; for at the Passover commemoration the Jew says "Next year in Jerusalem," while at the table of the Lord the Christian says, "Until He come." Thus the testimony to God's purpose is a combined one, in presenting to view Him who is, and who was, and who is coming.

MISSIONARIES AT SEA.

THE following extracts from the letter of a passenger on board the ss. Victoria, en route to Adelaide, may be read with interest:—

What do you think? Out here on the Indian Ocean to-night we have had a missionary meeting upon deck. It was so full, and was not over till past ten o'clock. Four missionaries going to China and four going to New Zealand spoke. The Bishop of Waiapu closed with prayer. On Friday we are to have a farewell meeting, as we hope to be at Colombo on Sunday. Last Sunday was the happiest day we have had in the Red Sea, only so hot that we had the piano on deck. Last Friday and Saturday the glass stood at 100 degrees. At eight on Sunday morning there was a communion service in the saloon; at eleven, a service on deck; at three, a service for children (of whom there is a good number on board) in the saloon; and at four, a Bible-reading. Then at eight in the evening a service on the second-class deck, followed by the singing of Mr. Sankey's hymns till eleven o'clock. God grant that some souls who came on board dead, may leave it alive.

Nov. 9. We had the farewell meeting to-night, and such a meeting out on sea you could hardly imagine. The deck was full from end to end; many were in tears. A testimonial was given to each missionary, presented by the Bishop, with nearly a hundred signatures promising to pray for them. The venerable Bishop spoke so nicely to them and all. One gentleman gave £20 to start a collection for them.

SUNDAY CLOSING.—Mr. Stevenson's bill is down for discussion to-day (Friday). Would it not be well if Christians would devote some portion of the day to private prayer that the subject may be fairly discussed and not shelved? It has been suggested by the leaders of the British Women's Temperance Association that a portion of the noon-tide hour should be devoted to prayer for the success of temperance work. M. E. D.

THE SICK, SUFFERING & DESTITUTE POOR.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY is in URGENT NEED of DONATIONS for AID to the POOR by Tickets for Coal, Bread, Lodgings, &c., which are available all over London and Suburbs; also for its Convalescent Homes at Bournemouth and Sandgate.

RECENT TESTIMONIALS ON THE WORK OF THE CONVALESCENT HOMES.

Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest, Brompton, S.W.,
October 4, 1888.

During the year we have sent from Brompton Hospital to the London Samaritan Homes at Sandgate and Bournemouth over two hundred patients to complete there the time which they would have spent here.

This fact, as expressive of our confidence in these Homes, speaks for itself.

Many of these patients have afterwards come spontaneously to express their gratitude for benefits received; and, indeed, all that I have seen and heard during this period of these admirable Homes only goes to confirm the high opinion which I had previously formed of them.

HENRY D. WAUGH, B.A.,
B.Sc., M.B.,
Resident Medical Officer.

From tee past Vicar of Sandgate.

It gives me much pleasure to bear my testimony to the value and benefits of the Convalescent Homes in connection with the London Samaritan Society. During the six years of my sojourn at Sandgate, as Vicar of the parish, I had ample opportunity of observing the arrangements in the home at Beach Rocks, and frequently performed Divine Service within its walls. The patients were well cared for, and treated most hospitably, and I am fully sensible of the energy and prudence of Mr. John James Jones, the Director. I hope all the Homes will be well supported, and beg to subscribe myself,

E. MUIRHEAD EVANS, M.A.
Vicar of Ilkeston, Derbyshire.
November 24, 1888.

From the present Vicar of Sandgate.

My Dear Mr. Jones,—

My experience of the Homes is sufficient to make me willingly subscribe to their excellence. The patients have laid special stress, when speaking to me, upon two things, 1st, the food, 2nd, the thorough feeling of "home" which they have when under your charge. The secret of your success I believe to be the great care in management of details. It is true that Sandgate is exceptionally healthy, and that there are nice walks in abundance, that, in fact, nature has been bountiful, but if it were not that the homes are well looked after, we should soon find patients grumble. I have never heard a word said by Convalescents in anything but praise; from outsiders I have never heard any complaints, and I can therefore, with justice, speak as reflecting the opinion of the people of Sandgate.—Yours sincerely,

H. RUSSELL WAKEFIELD,
Nov. 17, 1888. Vicar of Sandgate.

Donations for the General Relief Work of the Society, by means of Tickets for Coal, Bread, Grocery, Provisions, Cocoa and Bread, Lodgings, &c., will be thankfully received by the Director—

JOHN JAMES JONES,

THAMES CHURCH MISSION.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT.

DURING the year the Missionaries have paid 79,059 visits to individuals, 16,326 visits to barges, 19,839 visits to ships and steamers, and 2,385 visits to foreign vessels; they have distributed 538,260 English and 18,452 foreign tracts, 1,277 English and 2,813 foreign "portions" of Scripture; and 17,573 copies of the New Testament; they have also sold 641 Bibles, and 5,845 New Testaments in English and 105 Bibles and 104 New Testaments in foreign languages; 450 Prayer Books have been either sold or given away; 603 total abstinence pledges have been taken; library bags have been placed on 269 additional vessels; medical aid has been rendered in 17 cases, and hospital letters granted in 107; 1,053 mufflers and cuffs have been given away, and 12,266 Emigrant's Packets have been distributed on board 141 emigrant vessels, and last, but by no means least, 5,065 services have been held, with an aggregate attendance of 130,727. Never before in the history of the Mission has so much been accomplished. To God be all the glory!

The work has been, and they hope it will ever be, essentially a quiet work, but they venture to believe it has been none the less real. "Jesus only" is the keynote of every effort of the Thames Church Mission.

LIVERPOOL CONVENTION.

This Convention was held last week in the Gordon Hall, Hope-street, the centre of the operations of the Y.W.C A., under the superintendence of Mrs. Stephen Menzies. These noble premises are well adapted for the purpose, containing a number of retiring-rooms, as well as a fine audience chamber, capable of containing, when the wing-rooms are added, some eight hundred persons. The audiences have been very large, at night overflowing into the passages and every available space.

The meetings were held three times a day, presided over by Rev Evan H. Hopkins, and among the principal speakers were Revs. Dr. Elder Cumming, J. B. Figgis, W. Haslam, F. B. Meyer, and Mr. Robert Wilson. Rev. Walter Mayers presided at the harmonium, and interspersed the addresses with solos that produced a deep impression upon the audiences. On Monday a preparatory prayer-meeting was held with short addresses by Revs. W. Haslam and J. B. Figgis, and the holy power which pervaded the meeting was a true augury of the blessed times which followed.

TUESDAY.—PEACE.

Dr. Elder Cumming, speaking on Psalm lxxxv. 2, referred to the frequent complaints made by Christians of their want of peace and power and victory over besetting sin; he asked if they were satisfied with the results; and pointed out that the life of which the Scriptures spoke was infinitely superior. Rev. J. B. Figgis next dwelt on Haggai ii. 9. Peace of conscience, peace of mind, and peace of life are God's gifts to his children. In the afternoon, Rev. W. Mayers spoke of the keeping which is at the bottom of all restful life. Place yourselves by full surrender and earnest faith under Christ's control. Endeavour to realise the Divine purpose in your life, and seek to fulfil it. Aim at likeness to Christ. Cast all your care upon Him. Ever be ready to take all that God is willing to give. Rev. W. Haslam gave an address on peace with God, and the peace of God. In the evening, Rev. F. B. Meyer gave the five sources of peace in the believer's life. The Blood of Christ (Col. i. 20), the Rule of Christ (Isa. ix. 9), the Care of Christ (Phil. iv. 6), the Ownership of Christ (Gal. vi. 17), and the all-sufficiency of Christ (2 Pet. i. 2), and urged that all should abandon the wilderness wanderings of Hebrews iii. for the rest and Sabbath-keeping of Hebrews iv. Rev. Evan Hopkins spoke of Hebrews iv. 1 and 1 Peter v. 6, 7, 8: Power over us, "submit yourselves"; power under us, "casting all your care upon Him." Power around us, nearer than the devil or circumstances.

WEDNESDAY.—PURITY.

Rev. J. B. Figgis said purity is possible, not sinlessness. If Christ is in a man, the Christ will not drink, or be puffed up, or get out of temper. In many, Christ is a visitor, not the owner. Does every whit of the temple of our body utter God's glory? Rev. Evan Hopkins gave an address on how to get holiness, describing the three methods advocated in the present day, the ordinary teaching as to progressive sanctification, the extreme view of eradication of the old nature, and the one advocated on that platform of the placing the heart and life by an instantaneous act into the hands of Christ, and expecting Him to work within, to will, and to do of his own good pleasure. God is stronger than flesh. Expect victory therefore through his indwelling. In the afternoon, Dr. Elder Cumming spoke on 1 Cor. i. 1: Saintship is not sinlessness, but deliverance from the outburst of evil, and from the chafing and stirring of the soul. No quarter to sin. God has grace sufficient to cleanse it away, and keep it away. Moses, naturally hot-tempered, became the meekest of men. Make God first in everything. Rev. F. B. Meyer said that holiness was the presence of God in the heart, and described the five purifying agents—blood, water, life, faith, and fire. In the evening, the addresses were given by Rev. W. Haslam on Luke xi. 21, Christ casting Satan out of God's Temple; and by Rev. Evan Hopkins on Zeph. iii. 17: Don't seek holiness, but the Holy One; and when He is within, beware of the sin of Israel, in limiting the Holy One.

THURSDAY.—POWER.

Rev. F. B. Meyer spoke of the three conditions of power in service, as exemplified in the life of the Lord Jesus—living on God's plan (John v. 19), seeking God's glory (John vii. 18), and yielding the whole nature as an organ for the Spirit of God (John xiv. 10). Rev. Dr. Cumming, Ps. lxii. 11: The longing, the cry for power. There is nothing that needs more guarding then power. Has anything proved more destructive of men than the possession of power? Our self-love feeds on the sense of power. God, therefore, cannot answer our prayer for power without previous preparatory work. The Christian never gets power apart from God. It is not an entity of the mind, but the attribute of a person; get the person, and the attribute is yours. We must receive Him in whom the power resides. What are the conditions of receiving the Holy Ghost? Emptiness, willingness to receive by faith, yielding to Him. No being so sensitive as the Holy Ghost. If He be welcome, He stays, and gives greater power. We lose many blessings because not quick to understand and obey. "I once thought the baptism of fire was a great and marked experience. I have found it to be a series of losses, humiliations, that He might burn away self. There is the concurrence of bitterness and the sweetness of his will." In the afternoon, Rev. W. Haslam spoke on John xv. 4, and Rev. J. B. Figgis on Luke xxiv. 49. In the evening, Rev. F. B. Meyer spoke on power toward (Eph. i. 19), power with (Mark xvi. 20), power in (Col. i. 29), and concluded by referring to Samson's loss of power through indulgence in the sins of the flesh. Rev. Evan Hopkins concluded the Convention by some very graphic and telling illustrations of the life of faith; and, at the close, many rose to testify to the blessing received.

THE CLAIMS of the HEATHEN WORLD.

It has happily become a well-established custom to devote the closing day of our Christian conventions to this vast subject; and the custom was followed at Liverpool. At the forenoon session, Gordon Hall was well filled, almost exclusively by ladies; Mrs. Menzies held the reins of the meeting. The first item on the programme was a pathetic little address from Miss Barclay, of Reigate, one of the China Inland Mission band about to leave England. She pressed home on her young Christian sisters their responsibility towards the women of China. As an instance of the great need, she observed that in the one city of Gan-king, in the province of Ngan-whi, there are 40,000 women, and only two lady missionaries. In the same province there are forty-six great walled cities without a single missionary among the women. There are so few that seem to care about these things. Even a Y.W.C.A. worker said to her lately, "I don't care a bit for the heathen, and I do not know how to." How many young girls there are in our English homes to whom the love of Christ and his work is but an empty name; they hear so much about it without any practical result that it almost ceases to have any meaning for them. People are so ready to make excuses when their responsibilities towards the heathen abroad are brought home to them; they refer to the claims of the heathen at home. But surely the people of England have had so many invitations to the Gospel feast, it is time to go to those in the highways and hedges abroad. Is it not a piece of terrible self-conceit to think it necessary that every Englishman should be pressed to accept it over and over again, while there are millions of others, for whom Christ died, who are lying in the shadow of death? If young girls had some definite aim in life in connection with Christian work, how it would give an added interest to all their studies and all their acquirements. Miss Barclay referred to a lady who went from a Surrey home a year ago to the mission field, and whose going had been a wonderful blessing to that home. Are there not many others who would like to be the means of bringing a similar blessing into their homes? Alas! there are so many who are retaining for themselves what God would have them lay at his feet, and their souls are suffering loss in proportion. At the close of Miss Barclay's remarks, Mrs. Grattan Guinness led in earnest prayer that she and those about to proceed to China with her might be endued with power and consolation according to their need.

A brief but very practical talk by Mrs. Menzies on "How to reach and influence our young Ladies" was interposed before Mrs. Guinness's address on the subject of the day. While there are many Christian mothers who are seeking to bring up their daughters wholly for God, there are other Christian families into which the spirit of the world has entered. One who is now a very devoted worker stated that she was brought up in a Christian home, but they were allowed to go to dances. That sort of thing, said Mrs. Menzies, is an utter paradox. She entreated mothers to put aside everything in the way of education or earthly advantage that would interfere with the training of young daughters for God. As to those who were not as yet definitely on the Lord's side, it was a great mistake to leave them alone. They may be interested and won, if the likely means are devised and carried out. Many of these worldly girls are thirsting for something that will satisfy their hearts and minds, which cannot be done by the empty round of calls, the fancy work, and the lounge on the drawing-room sofa. They perhaps will not go to a Bible-class, pure and simple; but they may be attracted by pleasant social gatherings in the afternoon or evening where informal Bible study takes a portion of the time. It is a great responsibility to have a drawing-room and not to use it in such ways for God's glory. These young ladies may also be invited to help in flower missions and in other ways that will bring them within the circle of Christian influence. Mrs. Menzies closed by quoting a statement made by Mrs. Guinness, that in cases where mothers had prevented their daughters yielding to the call of God to some definite work, she had watched the future of these daughters and found that they had gone back into a semi-worldly life, or into something worse. The young lives have been blighted, and for that the mothers have been responsible.

THE CRISIS OF MISSIONS.

A MASTERLY REVIEW BY MRS. GUINNESS.

For the remainder of the sitting Mrs. Grattan Guinness held fast the attention of the meeting by a vivid and comprehensive survey of the advance of Christian missions during the last century. Applying to the present juncture the term "crisis," she first of all referred to previous periods that might be similarly described. Such was the defeat of the Spanish Armada, three hundred years ago, now being celebrated; an event which conserved for England, and through her Europe at large, the power of Protestantism. A century later there was the English Revolution and the establishment of a Protestant dynasty, on the basis of righteousness, with liberty of conscience and an open Bible.

Then, after a rapid glance at the gross darkness of the Middle Ages, Mrs. Guinness came to the time, about a century ago, when the modern missionary enterprise was virtually begun by Carey and his contemporaries. At that time there was scarcely a country in the world open to the Gospel. All the Papal lands were closed to the free proclamation of the truth; so were the regions under the sway of the Greek and Armenian Churches. Mohammedan countries were sealed against the Gospel preacher. In India the so-called Hon. East India Company turned the first missionaries out of the country; these few Englishmen thought more of their gains and their selfish aggrandisement than of doing good to the people out of whom they extracted their wealth. No one could get into Persia; Burmah lay buried in darkness; China's great wall effectually excluded the light from its teeming millions. Africa was then indeed the Dark Continent, not only in its unknown centre, but on its coasts. Across the Atlantic the American Indians were purely idolatrous. Mexico and the southern regions of America were the abodes of Papal darkness and the grossest corruption. In England at that time nobody seemed interested in the work of missions. The opposition to it was almost incredible, and the ignorance equally so, as the experience of Carey and the few earnest spirits of that time shows.

Look, now, at the state of matters to-day, and see the marvellous change in one short century—mainly indeed during the last thirty years of that period. Papal France open and studded with McAll Mission stations, besides those of other workers; Spain, once the darkest of European countries, open, and a Protestant Church planted in it; Portugal pretty much the same; Italy with the Gospel planted at the very gates of the Vatican, so that the Pope can almost look into the Bible depôt, and religious liberty complete; Austria, Belgium, and most other European countries as open almost as they can be. In all these changes the Divine hand has been clearly manifest. Coming to Mohammedan lands, we find the power of Turkey broken, and one after another of its tributaries liberated from its influence, not only in Europe, but in Northern Africa. Persia and Arabia now occupied in many place by Protestant missionaries, with their Christian education and other Gospel agencies; India, now under direct British rule, with its hosts of missionaries and Christian institutions, so that the ancient forms of corrupt faith are undermined and nearly tottering to their fall; even at the present rate of progress, India will very soon be christianised, in spite of Canon Taylor. China, though still under a heathen government, now open to the messengers of Christ from end to end, so that any English young girl may travel through it unmolested, without an escort, and with every possible facility. Yes, China, so long jealously guarded from the intrusion of the foreigner, is thrown wide open, and its 350 millions are waiting to be evangelised. Truly the pillar of cloud and of fire is moving; the providence of God is in operation.

There is another very important thing to be noticed. A century ago there was not a single heathen language reduced to writing. Now there are many aids to the acquisition of these tongues and dialects; and, best of all, the Word of God is translated into 250 of them. So that this gigantic barrier of language has been thrown down like the walls of Jericho, and the hosts of the Lord's missionary army have but to march in and take possession.

Surely the grand lesson of all this is that it is the purpose of God to have the world wholly evangelised in these last days. What do we mean by the crisis of missions? A crisis is a combination of two things—a great opportunity and a great responsibility. We have the opportunity, and most assuredly the responsibility rests upon us, the Anglo-Saxon races, to seize it. Supposing that the doors had all been open a hundred years ago instead of being shut, the Church of Christ in England was not in a position to take advantage of it. Then there were very few Christians of the right sort. There was such deadness in the Church that all the available power was needed for home evangelisation. Thank God for the blessed revivals of the last thirty years! Notwithstanding mistakes in teaching and in methods, the people known as "Brethren" were among the first to hold a clear, simple Gospel, and to show that not merely to clergymen, but to every Christian, is committed the stewardship of the Gospel, and that every believer is indwelt by the Spirit of God. These truths are now the property of all the evangelical denominations. The tide has gone on rising. When Mr. Guinness began as an evangelist, there were hardly any others in the field, except Mr. Brownlow North and Mr. Reginald Radcliffe. Now we have not only ministers, but evangelists at work in every part of our own country, and going out into the wide world besides. Where we had one true Christian thirty years ago, we have a thousand now. We have our great meetings and conferences; our flood of Gospel literature, and, above all, we have had the mighty working of the Spirit of God, till England, Scotland, and the United States are like new countries. There is not merely the outward form, but a living and God-energised host, anxious to evangelise the world.

All this supplies another tremendous argument as to the importance of the present crisis. An officer of the Queen's army recently stated that a Royal proclamation might, with the resources at disposal, be made known in every city and town in the British Empire in about eighteen months. Eighteen hundred years ago our Lord and Master sent out his proclamation. We will not speak of these years; they are past and gone, and may God forgive their sins. But how long is it going to take a revived and privileged Church to make known that proclamation, with the whole wide world open to it; with steamboats, railways, and telegraphs; a printing press that can scatter the Scriptures by millions, and with the power to acquire any of the languages of the world within twelve months? I solemnly believe, and many are of the same opinion, that, if we were minded to do so, we could do it in ten years. We have got the men and the money and the opportunity. The solemn question is: Are we going to do it? Or are we going to add one more to the terrible list of failures and unfaithfulness and delinquencies from Christian duty, which form the staple of Church history?

Addressing her younger sisters, Mrs. Guinness told them that none of them must say they had not the necessary talents for the work. Nearly every Christian educated girl in England has all talents required. She has the grace of God in her heart; youth—a great talent that is too often squandered; a good education; the power of speech; knowledge of the facts as to the state of the world; the facilities for easy and inexpensive travel, as well as inexpensive living in such lands as China, whither one can go for £50, and where she can live comfortably on £50 a year. Are there not thousands of Christian girls in Liverpool who could either provide these resources, or get friends to do it for them, and thus have the glorious privilege of making Christ known among the millions of Chinese women who never heard his name? Handel, the great musician, was so stirred by the prophecy recorded in the Bible about Christ one day reigning from pole to pole, and from the river to the ends of the earth, that the thought filled his soul, and he sat down and wrote the "Messiah," bringing it to a glorious climax in the unparalleled "Hallelujah Chorus." Let us be inspired to resolve, not to write a Hallelujah Chorus, but to live one.

Rev. CHARLES GARRETT presided over a large assembly in the evening, but he made no set speech. Mr. Reginald Radcliffe and Mrs. Guinness between them did the lion's share of the talking. As a sort of interlude, Mr. Garrett remarked that they had experienced great blessing during the week, and if they did not do more and give more for the Lord's service than before, they would have received that blessing in vain. There would be no formal collection, but an opportunity would be afforded for voluntary gifts, and any surplus after paying expenses would go to the China Inland Mission. That Mission was one of the noblest movements of the day, and he hoped that by their generosity they would show their appreciation of it. Then the chairman had a little hit at the religious dissipation of the confirmed habitués of Christian conventions. If we look, he said, into the unutterably terrible abodes in the Liverpool slums, the fever dens where thousands of our fellow-creatures are rotting, how can we quietly sit in meetings, and talk about "getting a blessing" for ourselves, while these multitudes are left to perish? Alluding to a remark by Mr. Radcliffe, about the folly of transplanting home-church differences to heathen lands, he observed that the churches would do well to forget for a time their denominational peculiarities, and combine to evangelise the world. It was at the close of the day, after their work was done, that those mentioned in the parable disputed among themselves. If the churches would leave their disputing till their work was done, they would have clearer heads and warmer hearts, and would reach a more satisfactory conclusion.

MR. RADCLIFFE'S ADDRESS

was marked by his usual boldness and ruggedness of metaphor and fervour of appeal. He based his exhortation on the narrative in 2 Kings xxii., which tells how the good king Josiah, when he heard the words of the book of the law, that Shaphan the scribe had found, rent his clothes, called his people together to hear the Lord's message, and rooted out the idolatrous practices that prevailed. Our fathers, he said, did a good thing when they translated the Scriptures into the vulgar tongue; but the devil survived it, and he was only too successful in persuading them that they need not observe all the things written in the Book. He blinded the eyes of the king, clergy, and people, so that they acted as if the Gospel commission included only the little kingdom of Britain, and had no reference to the vast outlying peoples of the globe. The Lord's last command was given to the whole body of the disciples, but nowadays the devil has persuaded ministers and people alike that they need not obey that command unless they have each received a special command to go! Here is the command: "Thou shalt not steal"; who ever heard of a man saying that unless he received a special impression in his soul that he was not to steal, he might righteously be a thief? Yet the one command is as binding and as inclusive as the other. No lawyer accustomed to interpret the decisions of the court, could distinguish any difference between the two. Christ said his followers were to be fishers of men. Surely it is in accordance with reason that fishermen should go where the fishes are. What is the puny population of these islands compared with that of the great world? Besides, those in Great Britain have had abundant chances of hearing the Gospel, whereas the millions of our fellow-subjects in India have never had the chance.

Hereabouts Mr. Radcliffe went off at a tangent, and said that on Sunday week he was to meet young Wilmot Brooke in Manchester, and they are to have two great meetings about the Central Soudan. Mr. Brooke has made every effort to penetrate, from the East, this region which he has taken up as his parish—3000 miles long and 700 miles broad, with a population far greater than that of Great Britain and Ireland put together. He has been thwarted at every point and has had to retreat for the present; but he is going back to see if he cannot enter from the West Coast. He is only some twenty-four years of age, and this is the fourth time he has been in Africa. He has surrendered himself entirely to the Lord, and it matters not to him whether he lives or dies, if only the Lord's will is done. Any young man or woman who is not fully surrendered to Christ had better stay at home; they are not wanted abroad. God keep them out of all the missionary societies. This led on Mr. Radcliffe to expatiate on the need of whole-hearted consecration, and to tell some rather striking cases of it he had lately met with. Towards the close of his very earnest address he referred to the spirit of devotion to missionary work he had recently seen manifested in Canada. He made a solemn appeal to architects, ministers, and trustees of churches not to spend money in beautifying church buildings, at the expense of the heathen, who are starving for want of the bread of life.

MRS. GRATTAN GUINNESS

again spoke with great power, mainly in continuation of her morning address. We regret that we have only space to indicate her leading points. Like Mr. Radcliffe, she started from an Old Testament passage, Ps. lxvii., "God be merciful to us, and bless us...That thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations." It is because we do not give forth the waters of salvation, with which God has inundated us, so to speak, that we grow so poor and lean, and lame and worldly, as Christians. Picking up the threads of her previous address, she went on to show, in a very impressive way, how the Lord had made the great curse of negro slavery to work for the furtherance of the Gospel. Another encouraging point in the survey of missions is the rapid extension in Bible translation that we have seen within the last generation, and chiefly within the last ten years.

Turning to the other side of the shield, Mrs. Guinness went on to point out how the rapid successes in missions had roused the devil to devise counteracting influences. One of the chief devices of Satan in this direction has been the paralysis produced by what is known as "the New Theology," added to scientific infidelity. The great point at issue is: Are we living in a lost world or not? Has man risen from the level of the monkey to that of the angel, or has he fallen from the image of God to the image of Satan? As one who had searched a good deal into every branch of the subject, she made bold to say that there is not a single science that does not contradict the theory of an upward growth, and that does not support the position that we are living in a lost world. She appealed to Christians everywhere not to allow this false theology, or these pseudo-scientific speculations, or any foolish and baseless teaching about comparative religions, to cause them to relax missionary effort for the heathen. Another modern danger is the growth, in the churches, of worldly selfishness, and this also was the text for a fervent warning and exhortation to real self-denial and whole-souled consecration to the cause of Christ. Yet another point that demands our earnest attention is the want of more living links between churches or Christians at home and the work abroad. She would not wish to say a word against any of the missionary societies, but there is a decided loss of stimulus to the home churches in present methods. Every church, if possible every family, and certainly every Christian circle ought to have a living link with the heathen world in the shape of some worker whom they support, and from whom they could receive the stimulus of direct and frequent communication. Such a plan would greatly intensify and increase our interest in the work. On this point Mrs. Guinness very effectively used as an illustration, the case of her own daughter in China, through whom the needs of that land had become far more real to her than ever before. She said she felt certain that almost any middle-class family in a city like Liverpool could furnish the support, either of one of themselves or someone else as a missionary in China, at £50 a year. In closing, Mrs. Guinness addressed a strenuous appeal to Christian mothers, elder sisters, governesses, and teachers, to realise their responsibility in moulding the minds of the young, and in training them up with a view to their being witnesses for Christ at home or abroad. If this were universally done, who can estimate the effects it would have on the evangelisation of the world?

A brief address came from Rev. E. O. Williams as to the circumstances which led him to leave his parochial work at home and go to China as a missionary. Then Rev. F. W. Baller displayed a Buddhist tract issued in China in the time of famine, and showed from an analysis of its contents how dark is the boasted so-called "Light of Asia." Altogether it was a very full day, and the eye of faith sees a rich harvest of results that must come from the scattering of so much of the good seed of the kingdom.

N. OF ENGLAND Y.W.C.A. CONFERENCE.

The conferences which, during the last year, have been a feature of the Northern Division of the Association, have done much to draw together workers who had hitherto been unknown to each other, and to stimulate interest in work amongst young women. Both at Harrogate and Leicester these occasions for mutual help and counsel were much appreciated. The one which has just closed in Liverpool was arranged simultaneously with the Convention for the Deepening of Spiritual Life, in order that secretaries and workers might not only meet for deliberation upon plans of extension, but also for their own spiritual refreshment, believing that the increased impetus thus given to their own spiritual life would ensure increased energy in their work. Truly, the Convention meetings were a feast of good things; dove-tailed in between were the ladies' meetings to confer together on Association plans.

The Executive Committee, on Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning, was occupied mainly with the consideration of departmental organisation, and well to the front came the North of England Foreign Missionary Scheme. The first suggestion was that each of the thirteen northern counties should try and raise sufficient funds to maintain each county its own missionary. But as many of the branches are already helping various societies, it will not be practicable thus to draw the funds into our special channel.

Mrs. Grattan Guinness suggested that the aim should be to arouse interest in branches where at present it is dormant, and that in such cases the contributions might be directed into our central North of England Missionary Fund (already started), and devoted to the planting of missions in new foreign spheres. The advantage of this would be that probably missionary interest would be greatly stimulated if the funds were thus spent on missionaries chosen and planted by our own Association. Co-operation with the North Africa Mission was suggested. After further prayer and consultation, it is hoped that these plans may take definite shape, and that at the next Conference, to be held at Leeds on March 27 and 28, further progress may be reported.

Meanwhile, Miss McLean, who has laboured in China for eleven years, is ready to respond to any invitation in the North to visit and stir up branches. Letters addressed to her, care of the Secretary, Gordon Hall, Liverpool, will always find her.

The next subject discussed was the importance of new explanatory papers; these have been prepared, and are already in the printer's hands. The importance of securing a lady as travelling and organising secretary was unanimously admitted; and negotiations are already on foot with this in view.

The subject of emigration was treated very practically by Mrs. D. W. Drysdale, who pointed out the importance of only advising young women to go out to our colonies who are prepared by habits of industry and perseverance to adapt themselves to the needs and surroundings of a new home. Free passages are only now granted by Government to Queensland, but servants who can afford to go to the States would find excellent openings and good wages. Idle, thriftless girls are not wanted in the States or our colonies any more than they are at home; and the young woman who is of no value here will not be welcomed there. Strong emphasis was laid on the importance of giving time, by writing well beforehand, for young women to be properly met at their destination. So often lack of forethought or promptitude has involved most serious consequences.

Another practical suggestion was that secretaries should always reply at once to a transfer paper commending a young woman to a new locality.

The Factory Helpers' Union was represented by Miss Browne, of Manchester, and Miss Lucy Guinness, of London. The former has been instrumental in opening about ten Evening Homes in Manchester, which have an aggregate attendance of nearly one thousand weekly. The mill-girls pay nothing. The meetings are held chiefly in the City Mission Rooms, kindly lent for the purpose. Sewing, singing, musical drill, and games are some of the features of these meetings, which are closed by a hymn, a few short, bright words on some part of Scripture, and prayer. Various ways of drawing out the latent talent of these girls might with great advantage be pursued.

Factory work admits of almost infinite development, especially in our large manufacturing centres; and it is hoped that through this Factory Helpers' Union a friendly link may be established amongst all workers in this special department of the Master's vineyard. The co-operation of any and all such workers would be greatly valued; and if such would send their names and addresses to the Secretary, Gordon Hall, Liverpool, it would be a real help.

The Week of Prayer for Young Women is fixed for Feb. 3 to 10, 1889; and it was agreed to adopt the suggestion of the United Central Council, and print a letter to be supplied to secretaries, for them to forward to the clergy and ministers of a town, asking that special sermons for young women might be preached on either of the Sundays, and drawing attention to the work of the Association.

Reports from branches, especially those recently planted, were listened to with warm interest. Openings for new branches are earnestly invited, and existing Bible-classes may be affiliated with mutual advantage.

The Convention and Conference were closed on Friday, by a conversazione of Christian workers in the afternoon, and by missionary meetings morning and evening. Thus closed four blessed days of help and refreshment, which we doubt not will mark an era in the spiritual life of very many.

THE OPIUM INIQUITY.

The conviction that something must really be done to awaken the conscience of this nation to its bloodguiltiness in the continued existence of the opium trade between India and China, led to the formation last June of "The Christian Union" for the stoppage of that traffic. Its membership already exceeds fifteen hundred, many of the members being well-known Christian workers. The scope of the Union embraces "national sins" other than those relating to the opium trade, and we earnestly commend it to all who would lend a helping hand in the promotion of national righteousness. The hon. secretary is Dr. Maxwell, 104, Petherton-road, London, N.

An occasional paper, entitled National Righteousness, and edited by Mr. B. Broomhall, will be issued as the mouthpiece of the Union. The first number (2d. Morgan & Scott) contains a full report of the speeches at the recent Misssionary Conference, on the opium trade, the drink traffic with heathen lands, and the licensing of vice in India, besides other important matter bearing on the subject. Friends of the cause should give this paper a wide distribution.

A collection of toys, picture books, &c., new or used, will be made at the young people's service in Princes Hall, Piccadilly, on Sunday, December 16. The articles collected will be distributed among children who are sick in their homes or in hospital. The service will be conducted by Major Mears, and begins at 3 p.m.

For the Young.

BY REV. JAMES WELLS, POLLOKSHIELDS.

IF you were to go to Palestine, you would find thousands of pilgrims going to the supposed grave of Christ. I wish you to be a pilgrim in spirit, and with me take a delightful walk in the garden of Joseph of Arimathæa. The object-lesson for this afternoon is Christ's empty grave. It is full of lessons about (1) Salvation, (2) Victory, (3) Heaven. Christ professed to be a Saviour, but He died on the cross amidst shame and pain, and that seemed to be the end of Him. His salvation seemed to have come to an end. His own disciples thought so. They said in their sorrow: "We trusted that it had been He who should have redeemed Israel." Christ said on the cross "It is finished"; but He Himself seemed to have been finished, yet, during his life, He told them that He would rise again from the grave on the third day. And on the third day He did rise from the grave, and his rising from the grave is God's seal to the work of Christ as our Saviour. It tells us that Christ has finished his work, that He is able and willing to save to the uttermost all that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth.

The empty grave is filled and crowded with proofs of Christ's full and blessed saving work. How the early preachers delighted to speak of Christ's empty grave. They thought it the best and grandest proof they could give that Jesus was the Saviour of sinners. I think Christ was not the same in mind after He rose. He was not the Man of Sorrows, He had not Calvary and Gethsemane before Him. He seems to me to move with freer step. He was Christ still, but his great work, his hard work was over: He felt free. But He was the very same in heart. You remember how tenderly He instructed the two disciples on the way to Emmaus, how He solved the fears of the doubting Thomas, and forgave the backsliding Peter. The risen Christ has the very same kind heart to sinners that He had while in the days of his flesh. He is ready to welcome all comers, and to do them good. And, therefore, Christ's empty grave speaks to you and me of perfect, full, free salvation.

When I was a student in Edinburgh there was a street preacher known as Bobby Flockhart. He was a soldier; and some thought him a little wanting in his wits, but he was a clever fellow, and had some genius in him. Bobby used to tell two stories about two soldiers who were condemned to death. One was condemned to be shot, and Robert Flockhart did a Christian's part to him. The soldier out of gratitude made a will, a testament, leaving Robert his kit and the two or three pounds he had saved. "But I didn't get the legacy," Robert used to say, "because the man did not die. So, because the man who made the will did not die I lost my legacy." A legacy is of no force while the testator, the man who made the will, liveth. The other soldier, who did die, also left Robert his kit and some money, but the man's relatives disputed the will, because some words in it were not very plain, and so Robert said, "I lost this legacy because the man didn't live to make plain what the meaning of it was."

By a stroke of genius Robert put these two stories together to illustrate the testament of Christ, the legacy of salvation Christ leaves to his people, "Christ has died and so I get the legacy, Christ lives and so no man will be able to dispute it, for Christ will make it plain." And this was the meaning of the Apostles, and the early preachers, when they said that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and rose again. I receive the Saviour, He has died, and we are sure of the legacy, for the testament takes force when the testator dies. The empty grave shows us we get the legacy of peace and salvation. This dying will and testament He has made over to us. This is one of the grandest themes I can bring before you.

We have (2) Victory. Perhaps some of you have been by the bedside of a dying mother. Oh! how cruel and black and dark is the victory of death. The beloved form wastes; she cannot speak; at last she dies. Then is brought the horrid, black coffin, and the body of your mother is laid in it, death has swallowed it up, and you are not permitted to see her beloved face. And when the hearse, with its nodding plumes and black horses, arrives, what black thoughts of death's tyranny and cruelty fill your heart, and the coffin is taken away and covered up and nothing is left but red earth. Was ever victory more complete? How sad and dark and full of sorrow everything seems to you. If you had not known of the empty grave, what a sad heart you should have had that day. But at that hour you thought of Christ. Christ had conquered, and that thought told you that death is not to have its own way in this world. Christ has abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light by the Gospel, and there rushed upon your soul all the blessed hopes with which God cheers his own people in their days of sorrow. Christ has gained a complete victory over death and the grave. All does not die when the saint dies.

A little boy and his sister, a little older than himself, had gone into the room where lay the body of their mother ready for burial, and the door being left open they were heard to reason—the little boy first: "Mother's dead, we shall see no more of her." "No; she isn't dead," replied the little girl. And so they argued and argued; but he said, "She is dead, she cannot stir nor speak." At last the sister said, "No; she isn't dead, her 'think' is not dead." So we read in 1 Cor. xv., "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality ... then shall be brought to pass the saying, Death is swallowed up in victory." And, therefore, as we look into this empty grave, we see that Christ has not only conquered death for Himself, but for all his people. He is the firstfruits of them that sleep. And so we thank God; and, remembering Christ's empty grave, we can stand by the horrid black coffin and see it lowered into the dark earth, and say with the Apostle, "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Christ's empty grave is a favourite spot which we should love in spirit to visit, and where we should love to linger. If Christ is not in the grave, where is He? He is at the Father's right hand. He Himself has told us, "I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto Myself; that where I am there ye may be also."

Christ's empty grave tells us that He is in (3) Heaven, to receive and bless his people. Think more about heaven, my dear children. And when death comes to your own homes, how blessed it is to let your thoughts go to heaven,

> Where death-divided friends at last
> Shall meet, to part no more.

A minister, preaching the funeral sermon of one of his flock, a good man, made a profound impression by pointing to the vacant seat in which he used to worship, and solemnly saying, "absent," and then, pointing to heaven, "present." An aged minister lay dying, in sore pain. A friend called to see him, to whom he said, "I am supported by three pillows, God's infinite love, God's infinite power, God's infinite wisdom." The minister preaching for him told the people that their pastor was dying, and that he was supported by three pillows. A young woman was present, who shortly after had to undergo a serious operation. One of her limbs had to be cut off, and they supported her with pillows. When the limb was taken off she pled with the doctor to let the pillows remain. The doctor said he could not; she must lie straight on the table. The suffering girl replied, "Well, at any rate, you cannot take from me my minister's three pillows."

You know not whether you may have sorrow or trial, but these are pillows no man can take from you by land or by sea. Let me, in closing, roll these pillows into two, Christ risen, and Christ in heaven. Or, if you will have three pillows, we may get them from my text, Christ's salvation, Christ's victory, Christ's home for us in heaven. Have these pillows with you, and then you will agree with me in thinking that one of the grandest and best objects in all the world from which you can gather object-lessons, is the empty grave of which the angel said, "He is not here: for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay!"

THE WORK AT GRAY'S YARD.

UNOBTRUSIVELY, but effectively, the little band of workers at Gray's Yard plod on in their self-denying labours in the most unpromising of all fields—among tramps and outcasts.

Every Sunday afternoon the spacious new premises are filled to their utmost capacity. Ragged children flock to the Sunday-schools, so that, not unfrequently, there are 400 in attendance. Upstairs, from 600 to 700 adults, of the tramp and vagrant classes, are fed with coffee and bread, whilst the workers pass in and out, speaking to them of the sinner's Friend. Many a jewel has thus been rescued for the Saviour's crown.

Besides these, there is a constant round of services and meetings, clubs, schools, and bands, which are exercising a very beneficial influence on the neighbourhood. It is further desired to establish a soup-kitchen and a night refuge. But all the work just now is overclouded and cramped by a deficit in the working expenses account to the amount of £200. Is it too much to ask this of the Lord's stewards? All contributions may be sent to Dr. Habershon, 70, Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, London, W.

THE LATE MR. PASCOE'S WORK.—In a circular, Mr. J. Mercer, 29, Queen's-road, Southport, remarks that it is impossible to say much of the work in Mexico which the late Mr. Pascoe had so much at heart. He says:—"Miss Pascoe's return to the field of labour will, in all probability, be the means of giving animation along the whole line of the work. The boy, Frank, is likely to take up the printing work he has so ably helped on for years. Meantime, there is sufficient printed matter to give work in circulation for some years. The brother-in-law, Nestor Gomez, is still carrying on the work at St. Telmo; so that friends may consider there is a present definite claim for sympathy and help."

Is Neuralgia Curable?

WE are, fortunately, able to speak as hopefully of this complaint as of rheumatism. Few people suffer so acutely as the lady whose condition is described below, but such an experience should encourage the greatest sufferer to apply for advice which may be had for asking.

This lady described her symptoms as follows:—

"My case will interest several medical means, I have consulted some of the most eminent, both in England and abroad. One gave me no hope of a cure, and declined to write a prescription, deeming it useless, and even predicted blindness, saying that morphia only would afford relief. Eleven other medical men have prescribed for me, and morphia has been the chief ingredient in their prescriptions; but none have lessened my pain or alleviated my sufferings, and I am convinced that it has been wrong in my case, or at least I could never consent to such treatment again."

She accepted our advice, and shortly after wrote:—

"I have not lost one hour's sleep since I was treated by Magnetism, and though at times an attack of pain sets in, it yields to the friction gloves, and is no longer a deadly and desperate enemy. I am losing the nervous tension under which I have struggled for years past. I have lost also that exaggerated sensitiveness of hearing which has made sleep a fiction during the last two years. My walking powers are quite restored, and my alertness of mind also. I have learned to lay my head on my pillow without the dread which innumerable nights of suffering and wretchedness had inspired in me. I do not, in truth, desire to be in better health, and I cannot say more; I take no medicine whatever, have good appetite and digestion, and excellent spirits."

Three years later:—

"After an interval of years I am anxious to record my entire and increased faith in the power of Odo-Magnetic apparel. I began to wear it about three years since, when my health was a wreck, ten years or more of acute nervous suffering having so shaken the life centres that to live was a burden. I rapidly recovered sleep, tone, and power, with comparative freedom from pain, and in a few months I experienced a complete cessation of neuralgia. But this is not all, for at the time I consulted you I was labouring under considerable bronchial disturbance, and had spent the greater part of three consecutive winters in the south of Europe by my doctor's advice. I was indeed threatened with chronic bronchitis, and saw no escape from it; but during the first winter of my wearing the magnetic jacket I had no trouble with the chest, and though remaining in England, was able to go out safely in all weathers. I feel sure it is a more important agent in conserving the vital powers and enabling patients to resist the encroachments of disease than climate itself, and I wish I had known of it sooner."

No one need hesitate to seek advice for themselves or friends. Mr. Garratt advises gratuitously through the post or in personal consultation, and every inquirer submitting the descrtipion of a case may reckon upon a thoughtful and candid reply. Information upon the treatment of any complaint may be had free by post.

WAR AND CHRISTIANITY.

Miss Ellen Robinson, of Liverpool, has lately addressed meetings in the Midland counties on Peace and Arbitration as opposed to war. Considered in the light of Christian principles, war was powerfully declared to be both criminal and productive of crime of all kinds. Every Christian acknowledges Christ as his Master, and war, if it is right, must be justified by the spirit and teaching of the New Testament Scriptures. In view of Christ's teaching, however, no one can pretend to say that war is consistent with a Christian profession.

Pointing to the militarian spirit of the time, Miss Robinson maintained that, though peace reigns for the moment, there is war in the heart of the nations of Europe. She went on to show that the approval of war by Christian people leads to most illogical consequences, and results in the virtual establishment of two codes of morals, one private, the other national. In private life, the duty of forgiveness is felt to be binding; but in international affairs revenge is tolerated, and military reprisals are frequently taking place. So also with other Christian principles, until it is found impossible to carry on war without lying, dishonesty, fraud, brutality, murder, and every species of violence and crime. The time has come, the speaker maintained, when all right-minded men should unite in the determination to discover some wiser and better way of dealing with international disputes.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN SAILORS' SOCIETY.—The institute at Shadwell was re-opened last week, after renovation, by the Duke of Cambridge. The important work of the Society by means of its many agencies in different parts of the world, was heartily attested by his Royal Highness, who moved a resolution, commending the Society's labours to the generous support of the public. Lord Brassey, president of the Institute, in seconding, stated that, in addition to fifty ports in which work is regularly maintained, twenty are visited every year. There were forty-six institutes, homes, rests, and bethels, either owned or worked in direct association with the Society, as well as two steam launches, eighteen boats, and three floating bethels. The Society enjoys the valued co-operation of the American Seamen's Friendly Society.

Is There None to Save Her?

We received the following telegram on Friday last from Mr. Alfred S. Dyer, Bombay:—

Mr. Quinn, the European magistrate at Patna, yesterday, illegally and by force consigned Christian girl, whom he holds to be under fourteen years of age, to life of infamy. Under magistrate's order, girl torn amidst her piteous screams and struggles from arms of Miss Abraham, Church Missionary Society Zenana Mission, and handed over to immoral man to whom her mother had sold her. Is there no power in the British realm to save this child? We exhausted all legal expedients prior to yesterday. "Whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."

The following particulars, received from Mr. Dyer by letter, explain the case referred to in the telegram given above:—

On November 4 I received a letter from Miss Abraham, of the Zenana Mission, Patna, stating that two widows, aged respectively twenty-six and fourteen, both living in the house of a man named Kadha Kishen, having heard the truth, wished to leave a life of sin and to embrace the faith of Christ. They went to her a fortnight before, without help from anyone, and had remained under her roof, eating with her teacher, and learning both to read and understand the truth very rapidly.

A summons was sent to Miss Abraham, charging her with having unlawfully abducted Musammet Lachhmin, returnable on Nov. 6, "in order that she may be made over to the charge of her husband or mother, who have been directed to be present on that date." Miss Abraham asked if there was any new law bearing on this point, and if a mother could force her child to lead an immoral life. The following request had been made by the girl:—"I beseech the Sahib log (Magistrate) not to let me be returned to my mother. She left me in Kadha Kishen's house, and will again, if she can, place me where I must live in sin!"

After Maurice Gregory and I had carefully looked up the law upon the subject, I telegraphed early the morning after the receipt of Miss Abraham's letter, both to her at Patna and to her solicitor at Bankipur: "Section 551, Code Criminal Procedure, only refers to cases where a girl is detained for unlawful—that is, immoral—purpose. You are not detaining child widow for unlawful purpose, and must not give her up. Magistrate's order is illegal, and if persisted in, case shall be at once brought before Parliament. Under Section 372, Indian Penal Code, the mother is liable to ten years' imprisonment."

Miss Abraham wrote from Patna, on Nov. 7:—"I am indeed grateful to you for telegram. At the hearing of the case the solicitor clearly showed that detaining a child in order to prevent prostitution was not an immoral action. The case is postponed until Nov. 14." On the night of the fourteenth I received the following telegram from Miss Abraham:—"Case adjourned, on condition that girl lives in house of third party—Mohammedan. Committee appointed to devise modus vivendi. In default case to proceed." In reply I wired the same evening:—"The compromise not satisfactory. If girl still desires to escape evil life, or to be a Christian, she should not be sent to Mohammedan household. Mr. Gregory, representing me, will start to-morrow evening to consult with you, unless you wire not to come." No reply having come, Maurice Gregory started for Patna last night.

The case of the girl widow comes on at Patna to-day, Nov. 23. The Mohammedan to whose charge the magistrate consigned the girl went away to a feast, and returned the girl to Miss Abraham. The spirit of violence is abroad. Twenty-five men have bound themselves to ruin the girl-widow.

Night Shelters for Women.

The consternation caused by the awful atrocities recently perpetrated in the East-end of London, followed by a season of suspense and almost paralysis of action, has at length given place to a movement for mitigating the evils from which the poor women of that and other districts of London suffer.

A few representative ladies and gentlemen of mission work in the Metropolis met last week at the Home of Industry, Bethnal Green-road, E., to consider the matter, and seek Divine guidance as to the means to be adopted for accomplishing this most desirable object, and it was unanimously agreed that free Night Shelters, and a meal night and morning for each poor woman seeking admission, will meet the need. As to the kind of building most suitable for carrying on such a work, it was considered that warehouses could be most readily and cheaply adapted, and we rejoice to hear that such a building has been offered rent free for the coming winter. The only thing needed, therefore, to commence operations at once will be means for fitting it up, and providing for a laundry in the basement, which, it is considered, would make the effort self-supporting.

Will not the Christians of England assist in this pressing enterprise? Sixty-six poor girls have, within the last few weeks, fled for refuge to places provided by Christian women for them.

At the meeting referred to, two committees were named—one of gentlemen to provide buildings and fittings, the other of ladies to undertake and carry on spiritual work among the poor women. Means sent for the work to the office of The Christian will be acknowledged therein. The Treasurer's name will be published as soon as one is appointed. A crisis is upon us. Urgency is needed. May we, as Issachar of old, have "understanding of the times to know what Israel ought to do."

MISSION-WORK AT JAFFNA.

News from Jaffna, Ceylon, tells of continued blessing following upon the recent awakening among the churches. Believers have been quickened to new zeal in the work of God, and the conversions among the heathen have been very cheering. At a recent communion service, six students of the Jaffna College were received into the church on profession of faith. The religious interest is deepening in this important educational institution. Besides the two weekly prayer-meetings, conducted among the professors, there are now three such meetings held weekly among the students themselves.

The intended settlement of Dr. H. J. Marston, as head of the medical department, is looked forward to with much interest. It is hoped that the philanthropic work of the Mission will then be of greatly increased value. A considerable sum of money has been promised, by friends in England and America, towards developing the various departments of the college. At present the need of a hospital is greatly felt. Further particulars may be had by addressing the Misses Leitch, care of Spicer Brothers, 19, New Bridge-street, E.C.

ROME.—A correspondent writes:—We are hoping for a Conference in the spring; it will be the first ever held here. Major Colquhoun has secured a large newly built hall close to the Corso, which will hold about 300 people. He told frankly all the uses he would put it to, and said he would only take it on condition that it was stated in the agreement that it was for evangelical religious meetings. We hope it will be a glorious winter in the history of the Protestant Church here. Pray for us especially this winter.

SOCIETY FOR THE RESCUE OF YOUNG WOMEN & CHILDREN
GO AND SIN NO MORE

SEVERAL circumstances have combined this year to cause very heavy additional expenditure to the above Society.

The REBUILDING on a greatly improved and enlarged plan, and furnishing of our New Preventive Home at Woodford (now occupied), in place of the one destroyed by fire in January last, will cost £2,400. The INDUSTRIAL work of this Home is very encouraging, £4 PER WEEK having been earned by the reduced number of inmates in the small temporary building. With the increased accommodation a still larger sum can be raised, thus going far towards self-support.

The REMOVAL of a second Home to MORE HEALTHY AND SUITABLE PREMISES at Dalston necessitated an outlay of £850 for the purchase of lease, repairs, and alterations, but saves £43 per annum in rent.

At a THIRD HOME at Buckhurst Hill it was compulsory to replace the wooden Wash-house, &c., by brick buildings at a cost of £100.

The large sum of £3,350 has thus to be found this year, IN ADDITION TO THE ORDINARY EXPENDITURE, towards which amount we have received from the Insurance Company £1,510, and Special Contributions to the Rebuilding and Fire Fund £599 15s., leaving OVER £1,000 to be made up from other sources.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, our GENERAL WORK HAS INCREASED, and more than 560 Young Women and Girls have already received the benefits of our Homes this year.

We are now in Urgent Need of Help. Our Homes are more than full, and our Funds are quite exhausted.

Contributions will be kindly received by Messrs. Morgan & Scott, Office of "The Christian;" by the Bankers, Messrs. Barclay, Bevan & Co., 54, Lombard-street; or will be gratefully acknowledged if sent to the Secretary,

The Turning of the Tide, 1688.

A TRUE TALE OF THE COVENANTERS.

Being Extracts, hitherto unpublished, from personal narratives of James and Elizabeth Nimmo.

IX.

CONCLUSION.

WITH the flight of the tyrant, in 1688, the "killing times" in Scotland were at an end, and throughout the land the doors were thrown open to everyone lying in prison for conscience' sake. Women received, as it were, "their dead raised to life again," and many who had literally been "tortured, not accepting deliverance," were restored to freedom, so that, in many hundreds of Scottish homes, high and low, they sang, with a meaning such as nothing could have imparted to the words but the sudden cessation of a persecution, which had lasted for many years, that beautiful song of deliverance, Psalm cxxvi., commencing:—

When Zion's bondage God turned back,
  Like men in dreams were we
Then filled with laughter was our mouth,
  Our lips with melody.

The tide had, indeed, turned for the whole nation, and there was not a single hamlet or cottage in which the influence of the turning was not felt.

And Nimmo finds that it brings for him not only freedom, personal and religious, but prosperity in matters temporal likewise, though but slowly. Like many others who had suffered persecution and survived, he obtains employment under Government, and though his income is very small, it provides for his family necessities.

In the year 1693 we find him holding the post of Treasurer to the University, and in a few years thereafter he is raised to the dignified position of Treasurer to the City of Edinburgh, an office of much responsibility and fair emolument. His means, at a later period, are largely increased from other sources, and until his death, in 1709, he holds a high position in the esteem of his fellow townsmen.

His narrative and diary are carried down to within a few years of his decease, furnishing records of his religious experience which show that, throughout the years of his prosperity, he was no less earnest in seeking to walk closely with God than he had been in those of his adversity.

Nimmo died at the age of fifty-five. His wife survived him for several years, and with some characteristic extracts from her narrative, we shall bring to a close this record of their joint lives.

In reference to the death of one of their children in infancy, she writes: "On the day before his death, I was concerned about his salvation, and was crying to the Lord for mercy on his soul, when I got a pleasant discovery of Christ's second coming, and the little child on Christ's right hand; and then, as if there had been a holy contest between him and me, which of us was most obliged, and greatest debtor to free grace, as if the child had asked me 'whether you for pardoning, or me for preventing mercy?'"

In the following extract we have an exceedingly affecting picture of Christian resignation under suffering of no ordinary kind, brought to her personal notice about this time, an outcome of the civil war in Ireland, which had been brought to an end shortly before:—"In 1694, about the end of my long sickness, I heard one of my servants saying one morning, 'There is a poor woman dying of starvation in our water-wife's house.' I desired the servant to carry some things to her, which she did, but the poor woman was past taking anything. When I heard this I was sore afflicted that one should have been in such a case so very near, and I not know of it, it being in the same close. I said I would go and see her, so with great difficulty I got downstairs, and when I entered the place where she was lying I had almost fainted with the smell of foul linen. I had taken a cordial to her, but I was to receive a better from her.

"I thought she looked a gentlewoman, and like one that had breeding, though lying on straw, with scarcely a rag of clothing about her. So I asked where she lived formerly. She said, 'I was a merchant's wife in Londonderry, and bare fourteen children. I lived many years in great plenty, but in the time of Ireland's troubles my husband was killed, and my family scattered. I know twelve of my children died, and I had two sons went to sea, dead or alive I know not. But for all these trials, and for all the outward misery I am in, yet there is mercy and love in all; and for as great an object as I am in, yea, for all I am brought to, yet I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand in the latter day on the earth.' She spake for a little very pleasantly, but her strength failed; neither was I able to stand, being very weak, so I went off, and ordered clean linens and bed-clothes for her. She died that night, and truly I got what was well worth my pains."

The last extract we shall give from her narrative is as follows:—

"August 6, 1709.—The Lord removed to his eternal rest my precious yoke-fellow. He said, 'My Lord seems to stand at a great distance, and as if He did not hear my prayer, but yet He heareth, for He is my God, my own God is He; these thirty-three years He has made me seek and serve Him as my God and Father, and now, though He hide his face, I have no fear. I can say since my soul first closed with Him by saving faith, I lay not down one night but that I saw a need of Christ to wash me from guilt." This he said to a lady, and to others who came to see him. At another time he said to a gentleman, 'Sir James, I have been a man of many troubles, but when I look back on them all, I cannot pitch upon one that I dare this say, I wish it had not come my way.'

"His bodily sickness was so great that he was not in case to speak much, but, taking me by the hand, he said, 'My dear, my dear, my sympathising wife' (he was pleased to say), 'the Lord in mercy put us together, and He will in mercy part us, and it will not be long till you come where I am, even where Christ is!'"

Their only daughter has left on record, with other particulars as to her father's death, the following:—"When anyone asked him how he was, he said, 'I am a ship at anchor, blow the wind as it will, I am safe, because I am on the rock, Christ, so, whether death or life, it is all one.'

"That morning before he died he said to a friend, 'It is a rough sea, but a sweet harbour, the landing is safe and sure.' He told my mother he was made to observe a mercy he had not noticed before; that, though he had not much sensible joy, yet Satan had never got leave to tempt him with the least doubt of his interest in Christ. I heard him, when in extremity of pain, cry out, 'My God, help me. Thou seemest to shut out prayers, but I know Thou hearest, and wilt answer, for Thou wilt not make me ashamed of my hope, nor shall my expectation be cut off.' He spake not much in his sickness, but all was the language of strong faith. His last words were: 'My Lord is now on his way, my Lord is coming with deliverances.'"

In selecting the extracts which have been furnished from the diaries of the Nimmos, many more containing interesting notices of their personal experiences under persecution might have been given; but have been withheld, in the belief that others would prove more instructive which record their spiritual experiences, and show the armour in which they were clad and overcame in spiritual conflicts, with the secret of their patience under outward affliction.

And such extracts have been quoted the more freely, as they largely illustrate certain features in the piety of the writers which are worthy of all admiration. We find in every page of Nimmo's diary, within a few years after his conversion, evidences of the closest heart searching, with Bible searching, the former in the light of the latter, and the latter not only for instruction in righteousness but for guidance from day to day as to the will of God; very much tenderness of conscience, also, as to sin, with continued humiliation in the sense of utter unworthiness of mercies. And the diary of Elizabeth Brodie is no less remarkable for characteristics of the same kind, and this from a period long before she met with James Nimmo. With both, but especially in her case, the habit of self-introspection was practised to a morbid extent, too often; but was it not safer to err on this side than on the other, of failing to cultivate the habit, as we are so prone to do? To Nimmo, again, there was no reality more real than, in prayer, his presence before God, and God's presence to him in Christ. How often, during the years when he had to live in concealment from his persecutors, do we find him by night in the fields, the darkness his closet, wherein, in prayer, he takes refuge in the secret place of the Most High. Nor are his prayers mere religious reveries (as those of believers so often are). He will not be denied, and, though he may fail to win the blessing one night, he returns to the conflict on the next night, with weeping and supplication, until he has the assurance that he is heard, and now the lonely man, who crept into the field like a hunted animal, goes forth from it stronger than the mightiest monarch on earth, in the confidence that he has the Lord of Hosts Himself on his side. Is it not thus that "the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by storm"?

Nor was Elizabeth Brodie any stranger to midnight wrestlings in supplication until assured that she was heard; but we find in the diaries of both frequent mention of seasons of deadness in prayer, causing them to go mournfully before God. Intercessory prayer is very often recorded, but praise and thankfulness more frequently still, even in their days of darkest trouble.

But there is one feature common to both diaries which deserves very special notice, and that is their silence as to the names of their persecutors, and we may search both narratives from beginning to end without finding one word of bitterness or resentment against either the Government or its servants, or any others at whose hands they suffered, or of murmuring against God. How Christlike is this! What a noble lesson does it present to us!

It is not pretended that, in the Nimmos, we have a fair type of the Covenanters at large, but there is no reason to believe that they were, spiritually, much in advance of very many of that body throughout the lowlands of Scotland (and of this there is no lack of evidence from other sources than the diaries before us), as we find that, whether in Morayshire or in the Lothians, in Berwick or in Rotterdam, the Nimmos were never without intimate friends, whose fellowship in the Gospel could not have been so precious as it evidently was to them, had these not been found like minded as to spiritual things with themselves. The number of such people of God among the Covenanters was very much greater than their accusers suppose, and we maintain that, under God, it was mainly due to the very large number of such in their body, and to their influence, that the Covenanters showed such marvellous patience under twenty-eight years of persecution, their unyielding endurance at length winning the victory.

It would be wrong to assert that they recognised the duty of religious toleration to others required by the privilege of religious freedom for themselves. But by whom was this recognised in those days, outside small communities of Friends and of Baptists to be found here and there? The followers of Christ, as a body, had yet to learn the meaning of his words: "My kingdom is not of this world, if my kingdom were of this world then would my servants fight," and that the measure of the dependence of the Church upon the civil power, the men of this world, the arm of flesh, is the measure of its weakness. How many of them have yet to learn the lesson, even at this day! R. Scott Moncrieff.

"SOMETHING FOR THEE."*

By Rev. Dr. PENTECOST.

Sometimes a Christian really cannot, at a given time, bring himself to talk freely with an inquirer; or it may be that deficiency in knowledge of the Scriptures, through past neglect of the blessed Book, gives a sense of weakness and unfitness for this work, where there is still a desire to do some service in an inquiry-room. I knew a dear brother, whom I could not on any account persuade to sit down and talk with an inquirer himself, but who would move about the inquiry-room, and, by a question here and there, and taking advantage of his knowledge of the people, find out who were and who were not Christians; and then he would communicate with some good worker and bring the inquirer and the worker together.

I knew another, who never seemed to be doing anything but standing about the door; yet his face was a benediction to everyone who came in: he would greet them, as they entered, with a beaming smile of welcome; a cordial grasp of the hand; and some such salutation as this: "I am so glad to see you in here to-night! We have been praying for you, and shall rejoice to know that you have accepted the Lord Jesus Christ."

This was all he could do; at least it was all he thought he could do: but he did this so heartily and lovingly that I believe he prepared the way most effectually for another to win the inquirer. This also is to serve the Master.

I knew another Christian man who refused to talk to an inquirer, on the ground that he did not know how, never having done such service for the Master. The inquirer was a poor woman who was compelled to bring her baby with her. In passing from the Tabernacle to the church where the inquiry meeting was held, the baby had awakened and was very fretful. The mother was doing her best to pacify her little one, while at the same time she was trying to attend to what an earnest minister of the Gospel was saying to her. The situation was an awkward one for both inquirer and minister.

At this juncture the gentleman who had declined to speak with the woman came up to where the minister and his inquirer were trying to converse. Taking in the situation, he said: "Dr. G., it is quite true that I did not feel competent to talk to this good woman about her soul; but if she will trust me with her baby, I will do the best I can to take care of it while you tell her the way of life." Well, the woman handed her crying baby over to the gentleman; and he marched off under one of the side galleries, and there hushed the little thing into sleep and quiet by walking up and down with it in his strong arms. In the meantime the mother was converted; which she possibly might not have been at this particular time but for the help of the man who held the baby.

I have often, since then, said: "If you can do nothing else, you may at least hold a baby."

There are many babies to be held beside flesh and blood ones. "To every man his work." Find out what it is, and then do it with your might.

Spain: A Mission Field.

Little is known about this country by Christians generally at home. There is a wonderful variety about its scenery, its climate, and its people. It combines the richest natural beauties with spots so naked, barren, and poor that one is surprised to meet with them in a civilised country. Its climate varies considerably, as it is modified by its elevation, southern position, and coast line. The northern provinces, so easily reached by steamer from England, are temperate, and Catalonia—having Barcelona as its capital—with the exception of its hills and valleys bordering on the Pyrenees, especially so. The eastern coast is hot. Andalucia, on the southern coast, is much resorted to by invalids in the winter. A resident may find many temperate spots to retreat to as the season advances. Throughout the country there are many lovely towns and villages where English families might find a comfortable residence, and a wide sphere of Christian influence in a land so much needing it. The sonorous and musical language is easily learnt, and the people are very accessible. It would be easy to remove furniture by any of the numerous English steamers plying to Spanish ports on the north.

The Spaniards are constantly forced upon our attention here in Algiers as we meet so many of them in our walks. They receive our tracts and Gospels thankfully, with scarce an exception. They are quickly discerned, in their sheet sleeves, with waistcoat unbuttoned, a sash round the waist, sandals, and black slouched hat. The old men, with their dark wrinkled faces, mostly wear a jacket. Sober and industrious, they swarm into Algeria by thousands; they work on the roads, as agricultural labourers, and alfa gatherers. They come from their own poor country to gain their bread more easily, and, as they are here free from priestly influence, a mission in Algiers, Oran, or Tangier would be productive of vast benefit.

Very high hopes were entertained in 1868. Queen Isabella having been driven from the throne, a constitution with religious liberty was proclaimed, and missionaries, evangelists, colporteurs, and school teachers could work openly. This liberty, up to a certain point, still exists, though desperate efforts are made by the Jesuits to contravene it. For instance, on the outskirts of Malaga are some hamlets which have not been visited by the priests for years.

of the Reformed Spanish Church, commenced a mission there. Hundreds came to hear the word, and groups of "Evangelicos" were formed, and a school opened in Puerto de la Torre. The priests took the alarm. A small "local" was fitted up; a solemn procession, with an image of the Virgin, was organised, in which many priests, beatos (devotees), and soldiers took part; and on March 25, 1887, the image was installed, a sermon preached from a balcony, and the preacher cried aloud, "Death to the Protestants!" He then issued a paper against "the wretched Protestants," and had it widely circulated in the neighbourhood. On April 6, Signor Vila issued a pamphlet in reply, in his own defence, which also had a wide circulation. The Curé replied by another sheet, entitled, "A Denunciation," and on July 17 an order was issued for Signor Vila's arrest, his pamphlet seized, and nine months after a day was fixed for his trial. On the day appointed the Fiscal spoke for an hour, stating that the penal code respecting the free exercise of religion was modified, and demanding five years' imprisonment and a fine of £100. On the 27th the trial was continued. An able defence was made by his counsel, and he was afterwards allowed to speak himself, on which he boldly and faithfully proclaimed the Gospel. Finally he was sentenced to two years two months and one day's imprisonment, a fine of £10, and the payment of the costs, the prison being a den of filth and iniquity. At present, as far as we know, this sentence has not been carried out, and he has appealed to the Supreme Court of Madrid, meanwhile zealously preaching everywhere as before.

A similar case previously occurred in the country contiguous, at Puerto Santa Maria, where is superintendent of the College for Pastors and Evangelists in connection with the Presbyterian Church of Ireland. His schools were arbitrarily closed, and kept closed for two years. The Alcalde, counting on the impunity with which his illegal closing of the schools had been treated, proceeded further. He entered the chapel one Sunday evening during service with a number of policemen, ordered the evangelist to come down from the pulpit, and the people to disperse under threat of imprisonment. The chapel remained shut for six weeks. The British Ambassador took the matter up, and brought the case under the notice of the Spanish Minister of State. Matters were delayed for some time; however, by the perseverance of Sir Clare Ford that was rectified. The Alcalde, who six weeks previously had thus acted, was ordered by telegraph to hand that same preacher a written order, authorising him to preach and to re-open the school. Seldom have the Jesuits received such a rebuff, or has such an effective check been put upon their wicked devices. It is to be observed that almost all those who have suffered persecution in this and other ways have been Spaniards. Numerous cases have occurred of processes against those who have declined to kneel to the Host as it has been carried in the streets; but, notwithstanding these things

ONE WHO HAS LONG LABOURED IN SPAIN SAYS:—

"There is not a better missionary field in Europe than Spain for God-sent labourers who will work on Apostolic lines, as laid down in the Acts. The climate, on the whole, is healthy. Ladies who have means could settle in any of the large towns quite well, and prepare themselves, and receive others to be prepared. To what better use could they apply their means? Lady —— has been travelling over Spain with her daughter and a maid, visiting the Christians, and her visit has been useful to all who have had the privilege of communion with her. Why should not others do the same, or even settle in the land for the Lord's sake? But the true work of Spain lies outside of the towns, which are awfully corrupt. God's elect," he continues, "are to be found in the villages; they are numerous, and must be sought out. Here is the true Spanish field, but a difficult one, though yielding much fruit. It is a blessed service, one of much self-denial, needing spiritual, mental, and physical strength. It was the service to which I had given myself, but I have no longer the strength for it; it must pass into younger and stronger hands than mine." He concludes with

THIS NOTABLE STATEMENT:—

"I do not know a single Spanish village in which the Gospel has been faithfully preached without some accepting it and being converted to God. Of the Latin races, Spain is the one in which there lingers more faith in proportion."

Surely some of the young men and women whose hearts God has touched in our own favoured land will come forward and listen to the cry of these dear souls for the light of grace and salvation.

The Curse of the Day.

[Under the title of "The Power of Money," the editor of The Financial Critic publishes the following scathing indictment of mammon worshippers, for which he deserves the hearty thanks of the poor and the honest.]

THERE have been periods when the tendency to combine in gigantic monetary schemes prevailed as the curse of the day, such as we see now, but the objects of those concentrations of wealth were very largely of the chimerical sort. To-day it is very different. Wealth is more eager than ever to embark in enterprise...But...the venturer now must see some practical demonstration of the scheme set before him. Bubbles may attract the silly, and those who hope to become rich by short cuts, but men who can command immense aggregations of wealth must have some such tangible commodity for the object of their speculation as will, at least, rank among

THE COMMON NECESSARIES OF LIFE.

There is no falling off in the demand for bread, for salt, for cotton, for coal, for sugar. If the power of money can be so stretched as to obtain the control of the demand for any of these commodities, surely millions are to be made by it.

Here is where the adventurous speculator of to-day is so far ahead of those of times gone by. The speculator who can venture millions to-day demands that the commodity to be speculated in must be something that so entirely enters into the economy of men's lives, that there can be no mistake in starting out on a solid basis. And it is from this happy assurance that have sprung the many shameful combinations that to-day disgrace our civilisation. Our operatives in the cotton industry are suffering at their firesides, and must continue to suffer, because of what is nothing less than a conspiracy entered into in America to control future cotton. The copper industry has been practically revolutinised by the action of our great copper companies conspiring with French speculators. A similar trick in the tin line failed. British capital went to the rescue of the Viennese Syndicate, whose object was from the start

TO MAKE BREAD DEARER.

Salt now desires to become a rival with copper, cotton, and wheat. One man at Chicago, which is the governing centre of the price of wheat, has by his speculative genius controlled the price of that cereal throughout the world and pretty much decided the price of the loaf to the Englishman, the Frenchman, the German, as well as the American, at least for months to come. By this man's manœuvring, wheat was made to sell at eight shillings per bushel, which should normally be but four shillings per bushel. To this price it came in forty-eight hours, and yet there was no less supply, and no greater demand for the commodity than there was two days previous. If this sort of jockeying with the staff of life can be carried on, we must not be surprised to see "corners" in salt, coal, cotton, copper, or any other commodity entering fundamentally into our everyday life. This is worse than mere gambling. It is criminal conspiracy. It is gambling with loaded dice in the necessities of the people.

What remedy is there for the fearful tendency of to-day's speculation? There is none. The law of supply and demand used to be considered a safeguard against such craftiness, but the foresight of financiers can now easily discount the probabilities of the future. The law of supply and demand must be considered as a more or less exploded one. How can it break up a wheat ring; or how is it such wealthy people as our cotton manufacturers are unable to contend against a cotton conspiracy aimed at them? And as for the copper industry, those who have not been able to find substitutes for the metal have been compelled to discontinue business.

There must be new measures made to meet these new conditions. We must have laws to prevent these criminal combinations of wealth. We call them criminal, for it is not necessary that an express statute should exist to describe men's conduct. The strife for money is growing more intense daily, we might say. In this mad race are those who already have much. Forgetful of the terrible signs of the times, and seem entirely unscrupulous as to the methods by which their present store is to be doubled. It is useless to cry out against the crazy philosophising of Communists and certain grades of Radicals; wealth is supplying ground for their violence of doctrine. The lower classes cannot figure out the fineness of syndicates, trusts, corners, combinations, or rings; they only know that the commodities—the necessaries—of life are much dearer by those associations, and this is sufficient for them. And who can blame them? Men of high standing in the community, men of title, of national repute, ofttimes lend themselves as directors and supporters to these combinations, and thus contribute more to the disruption of society than the efforts of thousands of blatant agitators. These combinations are the curse of the day. There can be no peace between capital and labour so long as they prevail. Money made by combinations and monopolies to the loss and injury of the people is wrongly made. Any man, or body of men, who conspire to raise beyond their legitimate value any of the necessaries of life, sins against the common weal, and against the very life of the nation. This takes in all trusts, combinations, syndicates, and such as we have enumerated. Such combinations and trusts rob every poor family in the land.

THE RICH ARE HUNGERING TO BECOME RICHER,

These dishonest combinations must be made impossible by law. There will have to be an international law brought in, the same as there is in the case of murder, forgery, and other great crimes against society. In the United States a law is under way to imprison such conspirators upwards of five years, and to fine them upwards of £4000 for the offence of entering into "corners," whether in life necessities or otherwise. This is a step in the right direction, and if, as we suggest, an international law be agreed to, there will be an end to these illegal combinations.

"STRANGERS' REST," RATCLIFF HIGHWAY.—The monthly meeting of workers and friends, presided over by Mr. J. T. Grellier, was held last Friday evening. Mr. Isaac announced the usual gatherings for sailors, with a Christmas-tree on Christmas Day, for which 2000 useful articles, such as mufflers, caps, cuffs, &c., are needed. The address was given by Mr. Finlay Gibson, who from various passages of Scripture showed the wonderful privilege faithful and loving messengers of Christ have of refreshing our "Master in heaven." The truths brought out were most stimulating and greatly enjoyed. Misses Buchan, Stedman, Guex, and Culverwell, of the China Inland Mission, also addressed the meeting.

NORTH-EAST LONDON GOSPEL MISSION.—The past year's work in connection with this many-sided Mission, of which Mr. W. Chorley is director, had much in it to cheer as well as much to depress. The destitute poor and hungry children of a very needy district are cared for with a view to securing their present comfort, as well as their future good. In eight halls the Gospel is proclaimed, and other institutions render valuable assistance in furthering the Gospel message. Although there are many calls to increased responsibilities, these cannot at present be attended to, as there is no superfluity of funds. Indeed, the Mission stands in need of a few more hearty supporters, as its financial requirements are about £2500 a year. Those who would like to know more of this excellent work are recommended to secure a copy of the recently published report from Mr. Chorley, 2, Marquess-grove, Canonbury, N.

CHRISTIAN COURTESY.

"The multitudes followed Him, and He welcomed them, and spake to them of the kingdom of God, and them that had need of healing He healed."—LUKE ix. 11.

"HE welcomed them."
O Master, may we learn from Thee,
Never uncourteous or unkind to be
Toward those who seek or want our care,
A moment's counsel, or a word of prayer.
'Tis Thou who sent them, and Thy watchful eye
Looks on to see how we will heed their cry
For help and comfort, or reproof with love,
However erring they may seem or prove.
And He is grieved when we do send them hence
Without some ministry or some defence
From Satan's wiles, their ever busy foe
Who seeks to harm them wheresoe'er they go.
It may be thou art weak, and sore distressed
With cares that harass and oppress thy breast:
The more the reason that thou should'st display
To thy weak brother the bright, cheering ray
Of light that kindles from the realms above,
Sent from the Comforter whose name is LOVE.

Rome. ELEANOR BULL.

MR. HAMMOND IN DETROIT.

WE have just enjoyed such a series of "conference" meetings in Detroit as reminds an old Londoner of those at Mildmay in years gone by. The occasion was the third international convention of Christian workers in the United States and Canada which continued five days, from November 15 to 20. During that time we were made acquainted with the history and methods of many associated and independent workers in reaching the lost, not merely through reports, but in most cases from the lips of the principals themselves.

The chief interest, however, gathered around the children's meetings each afternoon conducted by Rev. E. Payson Hammond, who had not visited the city for twenty-three years. Local ministers, Sunday-school teachers, and others lent willing aid in personally dealing with the children in the after-meetings. About 200 of these professed conversion, some of them showing astonishing intelligence in comprehending and obeying the Gospel. The work and aims of the Children's Special Service Mission were fully described, and it is quite possible it may ere long have a branch at Detroit, as the story of its work was warmly referred to by Rev. R. A. Torrey, chairman of the Convention, and others.

An encouraging and gratifying evidence of the permanent work accomplished through these meetings in the past transpired in the unexpected presence of one of Mr. Hammond's converts, now a preacher, who was saved here at the evangelist's last visit. The earnest, simple testimony of this young man had a visible effect upon the audience, and he was one of the most active in dealing with souls in the subsequent meetings. Mr. Hammond was persuaded to stay one day after the Convention for an additional meeting. His next meetings are at Jackson, in this State, after Thanksgiving Day (Nov. 29). He is in good health and spirits, and more in love with his work than ever. E. SOPER.

CONVERTS FROM JUDAISM.—Rev. G. H. Ayerst, principal of the Operative Jewish Converts' Institution, Palestine-place, Cambridge-heath, E., writes that there are at present vacancies for two or three more suitable inmates. The primary object of the Institution is to give careful religious instruction and teach a trade. There is a very promising band of converts now in the Institution, industriously engaged in acquiring trades. Of nearly 900 who have enjoyed the benefits of being inmates, many have entered upon Christian work; while others have risen to positions of influence in business callings.

PROTESTANT CONFERENCE.

Slowly but surely the Protestants of the United Kingdom are bestirring themselves for the defence of the principles of religious liberty and God's truth against the encroachments and claims of sacerdotalism. That such activity would one day be required has long been seen by many, but the great body of evangelical Christians have hitherto failed fully to realise the gravity of the situation. Now, however, throughout the kingdom, resolute men and women are putting on their armour to fight priestly assumption, whether Romish or Ritualistic, in the name of Jehovah, at once with true spiritual weapons and by legitimate political means. In several respects the Protestant constitution of the Empire has been seriously undermined through the growing Papal influence of our time, but now, while freedom of conscience and political independence are yet secure, vigorous measures are being adopted to save the people from superstition and the State from ruin.

On Thursday last week a conference was held at Exeter Hall, to consider the course of action. There was earnest discussion on many subjects, by delegates from various parts. It was generally agreed that Protestants should now prepare themselves to fight the battle of the Reformation over again. In the evening, at a public meeting, speeches were delivered by several influential men, and comprehensive and definite resolutions were carried. Colonel Sandys, M.P., who presided, opened the proceedings with a hearty address, in which he held that the recent commemorations would be fittingly followed by a second Reformation. The means which were formerly used for the dissemination of Protestant truth are, he remarked, now being largely employed for other purposes. Therefore, it is of the greatest importance that something should at once be done to give permanent effect to the Protestant sympathies that have been evoked. Constitutional and firm united action must be taken to protect the rights which have been so long enjoyed, but which are now threatened. This was the finishing note of the Chairman's address, and the point was emphasised by several succeeding speakers.

Mr. A. H. Guinness, hon. sec. of the Commemoration Council, spoke of the great success of the meetings, over three hundred in number, that have been held during the year throughout the kingdom. When instructed on the subject the working-classes at once realise that the cause is their own, as the object of sacerdotalism is to suppress individual liberty. Endeavours should therefore be made to put the truth of the case before the masses of the people. Canon Woodward having delivered a vigorous address on the hand of God in England's great deliverance, Rev. R. Roberts made a short and hearty speech.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Wylie moved a resolution for the establishment of a thorough organisation of Protestants throughout the United Kingdom, by means of which the people may receive effective instruction in the Scriptural doctrines of the Reformation, and the electorate may be awakened to the necessity of returning to Parliament members pledged to maintain the Protestant constitution of the realm. Remarking upon Cardinal Manning's well-known statement that Protestantism must be specially attacked in London, the centre of English activity, and whence the whole world may be influenced, he said that the Cardinal was doubtless thinking of Westminster, with its cathedral stalls and archiepiscopal throne; but the statement rather reminds Protestants of Smithfield, a name more thrilling than Waterloo, or Blenheim, or Marathon. Smithfield, added the speaker, thrills us with joy and courage, but perhaps it fills the Cardinal with terror. We will meet him at Smithfield. Proceeding, Dr. Wylie urged that this cause of truth and righteousness must assert itself in Parliament. Classes must be formed all over England, the subject must have its place in Sunday-school instruction, lectureships should also be endowed in connection with the old universities. Having referred to the increasing political influence of Romanism, Dr. Wylie attended to the objection that the proposed organisation would involve the mixing of politics and religion. William of Orange, he said, had a little politics mixed with his religion, and we might well follow in his noble steps. The Dean of Achonry urged diligence in the circulation of Protestant literature. The laity, he said, have the matter in their own hands, and throughout the country they are rallying to the Protestant standard. He seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Rev. C. H. Wainwright moved a resolution urgently inviting the clergy of the Established and Non-established Churches to bring under the immediate notice of their people the consideration of the spiritual and temporal dangers that threaten to destroy the Protestant constitution of the Empire; firstly, through the recognition and support accorded to Romanism by the State, and secondly by the encouragement that is afforded, as well by the State as by some of the Anglican bishops, to those clergymen who are inculcating Romish doctrines and introducing Romish practices into the Church of England. He maintained that the country is really in a critical state, owing to Romish encroachments, and spoke of the need for vigorous agitation, so that public opinion may be educated, and sound Protestants returned to Parliament. The connivance of many members of the Episcopal Bench at Ritualistic practices was strongly condemned, although the speaker said that he thought the laity were to blame for not letting the bishops know distinctly just how things stand.

Sir S. A. Blackwood, in seconding the proposition, also held that there is good ground for alarm. He thought that little could be expected from an appeal to the clergy of the Established Church as a body. Though Nonconformist ministers are less affected by the Romanising tendencies, yet many of them may be trusted to do their utmost to counteract the evil. With the help of God the battle may yet be fought and won. The resolution was carried unanimously.

Mr. Mark Knowles moved that funds be raised for carrying out the objects in view. Mr. T. A. Denny seconded the resolution, which was heartily carried. A few words were also spoken by Mr. Geo. Williams, who said that the pure Gospel must be lovingly offered to the Roman Catholics, and by Mr. Donald Matheson, who asked that the entire cause be the subject of earnest prayer to God.

BARCELONA COTTAGE HOSPITAL. — Will friends who collect stamps, except used penny ones, for this hospital, kindly send them again to Miss Mielecka, St. John's Vicarage, Ryde, I.W. Miss Mielecka is in America, but stamps sent to this address will be devoted to the hospital.

PROFESSOR SIR MONIER MONIER-WILLIAMS delivered a powerful address a few days ago at a C.M.S. meeting at Kensington. Having shown that the missionary spirit is of the essence of Christianity, he maintained that those who talk of failure in this work cannot know what is in their own heart, or be conscious that a deep-rooted repugnance to the healing power of the Cross lurks in the very soul and intellect of man. At present God wills to do his work slowly, through man's agency, and progress is not to be settled by the multiplication table. We cannot all bear witness in a foreign land, but we can all persevere in praying to our Father that his name may be hallowed and his kingdom come over all the earth. We have undoubtedly to wrestle with formidable forces, but victory is not doubtful, for "power belongeth unto God."

DR. PENTECOST IN GLASGOW.

At the invitation of the directors of the Glasgow West-end Union, Dr. Pentecost began on Wednesday week the series of meetings now being held in Kelvinside Church. He was cordially welcomed by Mr. Ross Taylor and the members of the Union at their annual meeting on the previous evening. The afternoons are occupied with Bible-readings; and the initial evening meeting on Sabbath week was not without tokens of coming blessing. The after-meetings have been encouraging. On Sunday last Dr. Pentecost occupied the pulpit of Hillhead Baptist Church.

Speaking on Friday evening from Rom. xv. 29, the appeals of the evangelist were heart-searching, and went straight to the conscience of his hearers as he unfolded the fulness of the Gospel.

MESSRS. FULLERTON AND SMITH.

These brethren have concluded a most successful mission at Bloomsbury Chapel. That place of worship occupies a prominent site in the West Central district, and many strangers have been drawn from all parts of the Metropolis by the fame of the renowned evangelists. From the first service to the last there were manifest tokens of Divine power, and the accommodation for inquirers was frequently taxed to the utmost.

Mr. Manton Smith's talent and pathos in singing proved invaluable in these services. By the ministry of sacred song he touched many hearts, and prepared them for the sound Gospel truths uttered by his colleague. Sometimes Mr. Fullerton's appeals are like the strokes of a sledge hammer, and at other times keen as the thrust of a rapier. His tact in dealing with men who object to Christianity because of hypocrites was inimitable. "You hate hypocrites," he said, "so do I. I am travelling to a land where there will be no hypocrites, where all the inhabitants shall be real. Won't you come with me? In heaven all the hypocrites will be outside. Will you be inside?"

The special services for men were attended by hundreds; the marked attention and the hands held up for prayer revealed the sincere desire of many to lead a higher and truer life. Mr. Smith's services for the children must have been a religious paradise for the very little ones. He has a rare gift for telling a Bible story, and his singing fascinated the youngest.

The friends at Bloomsbury have given the missioners their hearty and practical sympathy. The Pastor, Rev. James Baillie, who in early life was trained under the Scotch evangelist, Duncan Matheson, appeared quite at home in these special meetings, and the men and women trained by the sainted Chown were equal to all the demands made upon their sympathy and activity. For three whole Sundays all seats were free, and every agency used in this mission has been most heartily supported by the people. Friends of Bloomsbury all over the world will rejoice that God has visited his people and refreshed them. The inquirers during the past fortnight must have been close on two hundred, and every effort will be made to instruct and guide those who were impressed during the mission.

RABINOWICH AND HIS MISSION TO ISRAEL. —Rev. Dr. Saphir has just written the second annual statement of the Mission of Mr. Rabinowich to Israel. No adequate idea can be given in few words of the intense interest of the work thus brought to view. It is gratifying to see that friends have been raised up for Mr. Rabinowich in England. A council has been formed of Christian brethren who understand the Jewish question, and are convinced that Rabinowich is called of God to be a witness of the Gospel among his brethren, and they are assisting him with sympathy and counsel, and endeavouring to supply him with the funds required to carry on his work. Copies of the statement may be had from Mr. J. E. Mathieson, Mildmay Conference Hall, N.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

CONSUMPTION—Miss E. SMITH, of HOLLOWAY.

This is a very interesting and remarkable case. The patient saw a notice of my treatment in The Christian, and came to me on May 10, 1887.

She had suffered from cough for years, in the Winter only, but now it had become constant, Summer and Winter both. For twelve weeks blood had been occasionally brought up mixed with her expectoration. The cough had become worse, the breathing very short, pains in both sides, she had begun to lose flesh fast, but feet and legs were swollen, She had lost a brother with Consumption. Her father suffered from Asthma.

She came again on June 23—was feeling better. The cough was better; she was stronger; diarrhœa had ceased.

She then wrote in July. Her "Cough had almost gone." In August, "Appetite better; can sleep well; stronger, though still weak, and no faintness in the morning such as experienced before." In Nov.: "I am pleased to tell you I have a very good appetite now; chest very much relieved by your liniment."

She came again in January last. Was so much better that I allowed her to reduce the frequency of her doses of medicine. And again she visited me in March, when I had the satisfaction to find her nearly well.

The patient acted more wisely than many, and still continued under my treatment.

In August last she writes me:—"I am quite well now in every way. I thank you so much."

The last letter I received from her was Nov. 1. She says:—"I shall be pleased to give my testimony as to the great good your medicines and kind advice have done for me, for I am indeed very grateful. I am quite strong and well. I never felt better. If this will induce any to try your treatment I shall be glad. Emily Smith, 26, Union Street, Tufnell Park, Holloway."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

C. J. VAN HOUTEN & ZOON.—WEESP-HOLLAND.

MR. C. RUSSELL HURDITCH.

ON Monday evening last a social gathering was held in Stafford Rooms, Tichborne-street, Edgware-road, W., by way of "improving" the completion of twenty-five years' service of the Gospel in London by Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, the well-known director of the Evangelistic Mission. The company was a numerous one, including many well-known workers, old and new friends of Mr. Hurditch. Many happy memories were awakened, and while God was praised for the blessings of the past, His gracious promises for future good were held in lively remembrance.

Mr. GEORGE WILLIAMS presided over the proceedings, which were high-toned throughout. Pastor W. STOTT, having recalled some past joys and sorrows of work in London, Mr. HURDITCH addressed the meeting. His heart was full of gratitude to God for having equipped him for some sort of service, and owned his endeavours in many ways. The allusions to the revival of 1859, and the operations of which the Stafford Rooms Y.M.C.A. was shortly afterwards the centre, were full of interest, and led several speakers to refer with joy to past times.

The devotional part of the meeting was very hearty. A number of letters were read from well-known workers and friends who were unable to attend the meeting. Among those who were present a number delivered brief addresses, giving glory to God, and affirming confidence in Him for blessing in coming days. These included Revs. H. G. Guinness, Dr. Donald Fraser, and F. White, Messrs. T. A. Denny, J. E. Mathieson, R. C. Morgan, J. Penstone, and A. Wallis. The meeting was on the whole very refreshing; but the serious illness of Mrs. Hurditch prevented the pleasant brightness which would otherwise have obtained.

OBITUARY.

MR. THOMAS CLARKE, WORTHING.

THIS well-known and deservedly respected Christian gentleman, formerly of the Madras Civil Service, expired while on his way to church, at Worthing, on a recent Sunday. It is just a year since we recorded the death of his truly good wife. "a succourer of many." Mr. Clarke's Christian influence and benevolent disposition will long be remembered by those who knew him in India and also on the Continent, where he spent much of the later portion of his life. At Worthing his name is likewise fragrant with mercy and uprightness, quiet usefulness and piety.

MR. ALEXANDER BROWN, LIVERPOOL.

This highly esteemed merchant, son of the late Rev. Dr. Charles Brown, of Edinburgh, recently died at Capetown, whither he had gone, by medical advice, in the hope of regaining health by the voyage. A member of the Presbyterian Church of England, Mr. Brown was also in sympathy with every form of Christian endeavour in Liverpool and Birkenhead, where his loss will be acutely felt. He was not only a liberal supporter by his substance, but an active worker in connection with several important branches of service. Social questions greatly interested him, and missions to the heathen were very near his heart.

MR. JAMES ALEXANDER.

We much regret to find the following announcement in The Times of Monday:—"French sympathisers with the crusade against Monte Carlo have learned with regret the death, at the age of 52, of Mr. James Alexander, at one time secretary of the International Committee, and to the last a zealous advocate of the suppression of the gaming tables. Under the auspices of the late Mr. Edward Cazalet, Mr. Henry Thompson, and others, Mr. Alexander pleaded the cause with many public men in France and elsewhere. He was also a promoter of railway projects in Asia Minor." It will be remembered that Mr. Alexander was connected some years ago with the Bible stand at the Crystal Palace, and took an active part in Bible and tract work at the Paris Exhibition of 1878.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. S. P. Diprose has commenced at Banbury a fortnight's mission. He holds Bible-readings and Gospel meetings. Prayer is requested.

Rev. R. Balgarnie has closed a six days' mission in West Brighton Congregational Church. The proceedings were full of encouragement.

Rev. W. Heather, of Caterham, has been holding special evangelistic services in Sheen Vale Congregational Church, Mortlake. The senior Sunday scholars were in many cases led to decide for Christ.

Kensal Town.—A mission for children was held here last week by Mr. T. Lewes Sayer, of the Children's Special Service Mission. The children were much interested, and we praise God for real work done, as we believe, in many young hearts. E. T.

Union Hall Mission.—An eight days' Gospel mission has been held at Union Hall, Carlisle-street, Edgware-road. Mr. Herbert Veasey, from Devonshire, preached every night, and was greatly helped of God. The workers fully believe that many have been brought to Christ through this special effort, and they expect to see more fruit in days to come.

Newport, Mon.—During the last seven weeks there has been a season of revival at the Duckpool-road Baptist Church. Over seventy anxious ones have been pointed to the Saviour. There have been special services; nearly all have made a stand for Christ, after the Sunday evening services. The pastor of this church is Rev. A. T. Jones, who has conducted series of special services in various places this year with much blessing.

Belfast Y.M.C.A.—Messrs. Hyde and Stevenson, the young graduates from Mr. D. L. Moody's Training Institute at Northfield, have been conducting a week's mission in Belfast, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. The meetings were held in the Great Hall of the Association, which was well filled each night. Mr. Hyde's stirring addresses created a marked impression, especially among the young men. Mr. Stevenson sang the Gospel hymns with much acceptance.

Mr. John Anderson, evangelist of the Forfarshire Christian Union, has been conducting meetings in Forfar. Week after week he addressed children, and opened up the Scriptures to people of mature years. There were many decisions for Christ, and to not a few disciples the Bible has become a new book. Gospel meetings were largely attended, and the Lord added to the church daily such as were being saved. Colonel Oldham, president of the Union, took an active part in the meetings.

Mr. Ira D. Sankey.—Last week Mr. Sankey visited Peckham Rye, and Sunday was spent at Bromley, Kent. At each of these places the services were largely attended. On Tuesday at Hemel Hampstead, and Thursday at Bletchley, Mr. Sankey also sang and spoke the Gospel. Much interest has been manifested in the singing of the new hymns from "Additional Songs and Solos," and very encouraging tokens of blessing have attended all the meetings; large numbers have expressed anxiety of soul, and many have been led into the way of peace. Mr. Sankey spoke and sang to a crowded meeting in The Dome, Brighton, on Wednesday evening last week, under the auspices of St. Margaret's Church. Rev. Mr. Pearson, incumbent, was in the chair.

Methodist missions have recently been held in many places. Rev. J. B. Grattan has conducted meetings for ten days at Basingstoke, with results of a very cheering character. Mr. A. Hare, Home Mission evangelist, has been labouring at Cromer, where a goodly number of fishermen were taken in the Gospel net. At Kettering Rev. J. F. Holdsworth has been preaching to crowds; not only have there been conversions to God, but many men have pledged themselves against the use of strong drink and tobacco. In each of these cases the Gospel was sweetly sung, as well as powerfully proclaimed. In Glasgow and Edinburgh, Rev T. Waugh has been making a deep impression. A fifteen days' evangelistic mission at King's-cross Chapel, conducted by Mr. J. H. Fearnsides, of Batley, was attended by good and increasing congregations, and many inquirers. People were visited in their homes, conversed with, and prayed for, and the earnest effort to reach them has been well rewarded.

Rev. R. Crawford Johnson, Methodist Conference evangelist, held, during the past fortnight, a most successful series of Gospel meetings in Agnes-street Methodist Church, Belfast. Several persons professed to have decided for Christ.

Mr. Leonard Weaver is paying a visit to the villages of Herefordshire with the Gospel van. His labours have been very much blessed. Mr. Weaver is accompanied by Mr. Sloggatt, who sings solos very feelingly. W. G. HALL.

Rev. J. F. T. Hallowes, of Birmingham, has held an eight days' mission in the Congregational Church, Truro. Some have been won to Christ, and a deep spirit of earnestness has moved the hearts of others. The mission is being continued for another week by Miss Savill, of Bristol.

Rev. W. A. Meaton has concluded a series of meetings for the deepening of spiritual life in the Congregational Church, Grantham. Rev. W. Weeks, pastor, and others expressed gratitude to God for the benefit received, and the hope that these hallowed services might be followed by a united mission.

Dreghorn, Ayrshire.—Mr. Steedman, of Edinburgh, has finished an eight days' series of evangelistic meetings, holding two services in the district every night. Large audiences assembled, much blessing has been received, and a number have professed to give themselves to Christ, some of them remarkable trophies of redeeming grace.

Grimsby.—Mr. W. Thomson, of Glasgow, has for the third time conducted a successful Gospel mission in the Presbyterian Church here. A large number, old and young, have professed conversion. The special feature of the mission was limelight views of the "Pilgrim's Progress." This brings within sound of the Gospel the very people who never hear it. Mr. Thomson's pithy Gospel addresses on these scenes are much used in saving souls.

Rev. Dr. Munhall has opened a mission at Davenport, Iowa, accompanied by Professor and Mrs. Towner, Gospel singers. Eleven churches united in the effort. The Morning Democrat Gazette says:—"Never in the history of Davenport has there been so great a religious awakening. Dr Munhall and Mr. Towner are reaching classes of people other than have been reached in previous similar meetings. The results exceed the most sanguine hopes of those who planned the meetings. with promise of still greater results in the two weeks to come."

Workmen's Hall, Andover. — Mr. Oscar Owers, of the Evangelisation Society, has held a very blessed fourteen days' mission in this hall. Large congregations were nightly gathered, and a widespread interest was manifested. One special feature has been the noon meetings for workmen, who gladly gave up half their dinner hour to listen to the vigorous, pointed Gospel addresses so admirably adapted to arouse the attention of the most careless. The night following the mission was devoted to a praise-meeting, when many testimonies were given as to blessings received during the special services. The introduction of the last addition to Songs and Solos proved of marked advantage to the singing, such hymns as, "What will you do with Jesus?" "The love that gave Jesus to die," &c., being "sharp arrows" to bring the indifferent to thoughtfulness, and the hymns of praise supply a felt need.

Mr. Opie Rodway requests prayer for blessing on four days' special services to be conducted by him at the Congregational Church, Usk, Mon., Dec. 15 to 18.

Church Parochial Mission Society.—The following missions are being held during the month of December. It is hoped they will be made a subject of prayer by our readers:—Rev. C. I. Atherton: Dec. 16 and 23, St. Mary Major, Exeter; 11 to 13, St. Matthias', Plymouth; 14, Totnes; 19, Swymbridge, Barnstaple; 20, Fremington, N. Devon. Rev. R. Catterall: to Dec. 18, Holy Innocents', Fallowfield, Manchester; 18 to 20, St. Anne's, Manchester; 23, Leesfield, Oldham. Rev. J. Cullin: Dec. 18, Ashford, Kent. Rev. A. R. D'Arcy: to Dec. 18, St. George the Martyr, Bolton. Rev. J. H. Haslam: to Dec. 15, Higham, Rochester; 16 to 19, Parish Church, Gravesend. Rev. W. Hayton: to Dec. 19, Terling, Witham, Essex. Rev. Dr. Morris: to Dec. 23, Colton, Ulverston; Dec. 29 to Jan 8, Stapleford, Nottingham. Rev. J. Stephens: to Dec. 20, St. James', Birkenhead. Rev. F. S. Webster: to Dec. 19, Parish Church, Lowestoft. Rev. G. J. Watts: to Dec. 18, Hanham, Bristol; 19, Amberley, near Stroud.

The Book World.

* Prices of books sent for review will be given if stated.*

The Welcome Hour (vol. xii.), E. W. Allen, forms an interesting and profitable miscellany of religious and other reading, with ample illustration.

The Expositor, for December, contains among other high-class contributions another very suggestive chapter on "The Epistle to the Hebrews," from the pen of Professor A. B. Bruce, of Glasgow.

Imperial Globe Atlas of Modern and Ancient Geography. Gall & Inglis. This work contains thirty-three large maps, with an alphabetical index of 20,000 names. The results of recent travel are embodied, and the latest political divisions indicated. The maps are, moreover, well executed.

Three booklets just issued from Drummond's Tract Depôt, Stirling, are: The Year of our Lord, 1889, a very thoughtful and instructive little work, by Lady Beaujolois Dent; Inside or Out: Which? a question for the New Year, from the facile pen of Rev. George Everard; and Why Not? an address to the young, by Mr. J. Forbes Moncrieff. (1s. per dozen.)

The Drummond Tract Depôt, Stirling, has published two very attractive penny booklets by Mrs. Eva Travers Evered Poole, entitled, So Thirsty, and Beautiful New Things. The Kensington Tracts, from the same publishers, are an excellent envelope series. Each sixpenny packet contains fifty eight-page illustrated tracts. They may be had in several different languages.

True Religion, or the Soul Hanging upon God, is the title of a tract by the Rev. Charles Bullock. Sound teaching and earnest exhortation are based upon the words "My soul followeth hard after Thee" (Psalm lxiii. 8), or, as the sentence appears in the prayer-book version, "My soul hangeth upon Thee." (1d. "Home Words" Office.) A Happy New Year, another tract by the same author, points out how that boon may be secured. ("Hand and Heart" Office.)

A Winter on the Nile. By Canon Bell. 6s. Hodder & Stoughton. Those who have read "Gleanings from a Tour in the East" will read this account of the author's further travel with deepened interest. With no pretension to pose as an "Egyptologist," Canon Bell gives the result of his observations as a casual traveller. He writes in an easy and readable style, and possesses the gift of vivid description. The scenes of his travels are themselves so full of interest to Christian readers that this volume cannot fail to be read with delight and profit.

The Present Tenses of the Blessed Life. By F. B. Meyer. 1s. and 1s. 6d. Morgan & Scott. This is an attempt to set forth in its present certainty the precious heritage of God's saints. Some of the most blessed assurances of Holy Scripture are dealt with, in language of fitting chasteness, and with great wealth of helpful illustration. The chapters are eighteen in number, and they present experimental teaching which it is hoped will be read with profit by many, unto edification in the faith of the Gospel, and advancement in the Divine life.

New Commentary on Genesis. By Franz Delitzsch. Translated from the German by Sophia Taylor. Vol. i. 10s. 6d. T. & T. Clark. Another volume of the "Foreign Theological Library," and a solid one too. Not that we think all the distinguished author's positions on literary criticism justified. On the contrary, we are convinced that, as investigation proceeds, many of them will share the fate of some of the destructive and sadly popular theories which are so powerfully exposed by the author himself. The commentary is an additional display of what is so often seen from Germany — a really spiritual exegesis running parallel with a more or less severe analysis of Holy Writ. Delitzsch, however, maintains a right spirit throughout. He grandly holds that Genesis is of "fundamental importance," and not only censures, but effectually discredits those who would, "with Vandalic complacency, reduce to ruins that which is sacred." Nevertheless, it remains true that some of the Professor's latest positions have delighted the hearts of those whom he so vigorously opposes. Scholars will discriminate between fact and inference as they read the book, in which we are glad to find the author protesting that he interprets Genesis as a Christian theologian—"a believer in Jesus Christ, who is the end of all the ways and words of God."

Among the many beautiful scenic and floral booklets which abound at this season, few, if any, surpass those produced by Mr. Ernest Nister, 28, Paternoster-row. His illustrated catalogue is itself worth having, and from it full details may be gathered of the choice collection which he has in stock. Scriptural, poetic, and children's subjects are all carefully selected, and daintily illustrated. Among daily text-books (for a month) we may especially mention Onward, and the Walking with God series. Among the larger books, His Sweet Will takes the palm, which is a "Daily Companion, containing texts and hymns for a month." Without giving further detail, we advise our readers to possess themselves of the catalogue, and choose for themselves.

Turning Points in the Lives of Eminent Christians. By Mary E. Beck. 3s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. To write upon such a subject as this and to do it justice is no small or easy task. It would involve the study of lives of hundreds of eminent Christians, and even then it would be difficult to draw distinctions. This is where we think the only drawback to this volume lies: it is very incomplete. Every reader will turn to the index to see if some favourite saint is included, and will be disappointed if he is not. Others will want to exclude some that are contained in it. But the authoress has done her work well as far as she has gone, and the book is valuable as showing what insignificant events may, in God's hand, change whole destinies and accomplish mighty work for Him.

Manual of Biblical Archæology. By Carl Friedrich Keil. Vol. ii. 10s. 6d. T. & T. Clark. The concluding volume of this important work has been translated into excellent English, by Rev. A. Cusin. The latest "alterations and additions" for this issue had all been received by the editor before the author's lamented death, recently, after a life of remarkable devotion to Biblical studies. This volume deals with Israelitish worship and social relations in their various departments and phases, and is replete with exact and well-digested information. Those who can consult this work on points of Biblical archæology, may be sure that they have access to a source of knowledge which the most learned recognise as reliable and comprehensive.

History of the Waldenses of Italy. By Emilio Comba, D.D. 7s. 6d. Truslove & Shirley. A most valuable and interesting history of the Waldenses from their origin to the time of the Reformation. The author is a Waldensian by birth; connected with the Waldensian Church; and a professor in a Waldensian College; and, therefore, possesses unusual opportunities for producing a reliable book on such a theme. He has given himself to the study of it with evident delight, and has exercised the prudence and caution so necessary in a true historian. The claim to antiquity so frequently asserted for this remarkable people is carefully examined, and proved to be unsupported by sufficient documentary evidence. Nor is it necessary that a history in itself so honourable should be encumbered by the addition of legendary statements. He traces their origin to Waldo himself, whose character and work he graphically describes; then follows them into the various places where they were scattered; tells the narrative of the cruel persecutions which they endured, and the brave spirit they manifested; and makes us acquainted with their literature and religious life. The author's work is well done. His style is vigorous, clear, and vivid, and makes reading a delight. We are thankful for so valuable a book upon such an important theme. It is needful to remember in these days the sufferings of God's martyrd hosts, inflicted upon them by a system which remains what it was before the Reformation.

MESSRS. NISBET & CO.

Dulcibel's Day-Dreams; or, "The Grand, Sweet Song." By Emma Marshall. 3s. 6d. Mrs. Marshall always writes well. Her girl characters are fresh and natural, and her stories well conceived. Here is a story which we commend to all who would live out the truth of the well-known motto lines quoted in the title.—Oliver's Old Pictures (2s. 6d.) is another tale by the same author. It is sure to be a favourite. We can give it no higher praise than to say it may safely be put into the hands of the purest girl and the brightest boy of anyone's acquaintance.

With the New Year Rev. F. B. Meyer will assume the editorship of The Christian Treasury, published by Messrs. Marshall Brothers. An attractive programme has been issued for 1889.

The Power Behind the Pope. By Rev. Dr. Wright. 4½d. Bagster & Sons. This is a cheap edition of the remarkable pamphlet in which the English public is informed of the work of Henri Lasserre, whose translation of the four Gospels into current French was first blessed and then cursed by the Pope of Rome.

A Winter's Cruise is the title of a booklet by Dr. William T. Grenfell, describing experiences and work on board one of the ships of the Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen. A good deal of light is pleasantly thrown upon the life of the fishermen, whose spiritual needs the Mission endeavours to supply. 2d. Bridge House, 181, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

Messrs. Misch & Stock, 55, Jewin-street, E.C., have published some attractive Christmas and New Year cards. Among the most successful are some designs that will greatly please the juveniles, as well as sets that cannot but gratify the most fastidious adults. Artistically finished, and expressing good wishes in choice terms, many of the cards are worthy of high commendation.

Report of the Twenty-Sixth Clifton Conference. 1s. W. F. Mack, 70, Park-street, Bristol. The addresses delivered at the Conference held in October last are here collected. The subject was, "The Word of God: Written, Incarnate, Indwelling." Some of the utterances were of exceptional interest, and, generally speaking, sound doctrine is presented with much vigour and cogency.

The brief memorial notice of the Marchioness of Ailsa, which appeared in our columns at the time of her lamented decease, has just been published, with additions, in an elegant and tasteful booklet, price 3d., by Mr. Stevenson, of Edinburgh, and may be obtained in London of S. W. Partridge & Co. It is from the facile pen of the author of "Memorials of Captain Hedley Vicars," and "The Life of Rev. William Marsh, D.D."

How to Study the Bible. A series of articles on this subject by Prof. Elmslie, Dr. Dallinger, Dr. Clifford, Rev. H. C. G. Moule, Rev. C. H. Waller, Dr. Fairbairn, and other eminent men, will appear in the new volume of The Young Man, which commences with the January number. In this volume Rev. W. J. Dawson is to conduct an "Inquiry Page," so that young men all over the world will be able to consult him on any matters that trouble or perplex them.

We have received from Messrs. Wheeler Brothers, Mildmay-park, N., an excellent Christmas packet—"The Ruby Easel Calendar" for 1889 (6d.) The "Easel" is an attractive novelty, with twelve sheets of selected daily texts for a month. "Gates of Praise"—cards combining architectural and floral designs, printed in colours (1s.) "Go Forward"—motto cards for 1889, which may be readily localised (6d.) "Those Holy Fields"—cards with charming views of the Holy Land, beautifully printed in colours (1s.) "Gems" is the title of twelve dainty floral cards, with Christmas texts and greetings (6d.) "Precious Seed" (6d.) is a packet of forty selected Gospel texts, with pretty land and sea views. For general distribution these will be found particularly useful. "The Ruby Almanac and Text Book" (1d.) contains many "favourite texts" sent in to the publishers.

MR. DENHAM SMITH.—No marked change has occurred in Mr. Smith, but his physicians note an undoubted progress in his malady, and find his strength decidedly less. He has again suffered from gastric disturbance and pain.

MESSRS. ALLANSON AND DENNIS have conducted an eight day's mission in the Wesleyan Chapel, Ketton, Stamford Circuit, with encouraging results. Many have decided for Christ, and the members of the different churches have had their spiritual life quickened.

MRS. E. T. EVERED-POOLE, after addressing meetings at Brighton and Bath, went on Thursday, last week, to Bridgnorth, Salop, where she advocated Gospel Temperance principles with much power. On Saturday she addressed a large number of children at St. John's Rooms, Winchester. This week her engagements are in the Western and Midland Counties.

NORTH LONDON HOMES FOR AGED BLIND MEN AND WOMEN.—The annual tea to indigent blind was given last week. About two hundred members of this sadly afflicted portion of the community assembled, and after the repast they listened to the Gospel message with evident pleasure. There are at present fifty inmates in the Homes, but the accommodation will shortly be enlarged so as to provide for fifteen more. Rev. H. Bright is the hon. superintendent, the office of the institution being 77, Hanley-road, Crouch-hill, N.

THE LAMB AND FLAG RAGGED SCHOOLS AND MISSION, 10, Red Lion-street, Clerkenwell Green, proved a blessing to many last year. The freehold of the premises has now been purchased, and it is hoped that it will soon be possible to erect a more commodious building on the site. The schools are in an improved condition, and the various adjuncts of the Mission have lately been worked with increased encouragement. One of the missionaries regularly visits the London Central Market, where something like eight thousand men are brought under the sound of the Gospel. The forty-second annual report may be had from Mr. J. C. Sherrard, 7, Oxford-square, Hyde Park.

MISS CHILD'S LIFEBOAT CREW.

The culminating evidence to John's disciples that Jesus was the very Christ was that "to the poor the Gospel is preached." And in accordance with this it must be noted that much of the power of God unto salvation is put forth in upper rooms, and cellars, and such like out-of-the-way places. "The Welcome Home," 173, Ratcliff Highway, is an unpretentious coffee-shop, made conspicuous, however, by the announcement in many languages that sailors are welcome there, and that their good is the purpose of the Home. The underground kitchen was a few years ago made as convenient as its circumstances allowed, and under its appropriate cognomen of "the fo'c'sle it has been the place where many a sailor has seen the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. These saved seamen and bargemen have formed, under the direction of Miss Child, a Lifeboat Crew, who as their name implies, occupy themselves in saving men of the sea and passengers "sailing o'er life's solemn main."

We attended the monthly meeting of the crew last week, and found two or three naval officers, a few ladies, a couple of saved women who had come all the way from Westminster, and the rest of the fo'c'sle crammed with sailors of many nationalities, varying in colour from the whitest Norseman to the blackest negro. To say that the room was crowded, and the atmosphere (what there was of it) was close, is to state the conditions mildly. But the power of God was there. Spontaneous, unconventional, free with the liberty of the Spirit, song, and prayer, experience and exhortation flowed in an unceasing stream, fulfilling the promise, "He that believeth in Me, as the Scripture hath said, out of Him shall flow rivers of living water." There are few places where spiritual people are more at home than in the fo'c'sle of the Welcome Home; few places where, in proportion to numbers, so many returning prodigals are welcomed home.

YOUTHFUL SALVATIONISTS.

General Booth called the immense gathering in Exeter Hall on Monday evening "a new thing under the sun." It was the occasion of the first anniversary of the "Junior Soldiers' War," now an important branch of the work of the ever-growing Salvation Army. The large hall was crowded in every part, the audience being mainly composed of Army "soldiers." The platform presented a lively spectacle, being entirely filled with representatives of the rank-and-file of the Junior Army arrayed in their uniforms, and a large number of them with musical instruments, which they handled with considerable ability.

The General delivered a long speech, in the course of which he urged the great importance of winning the children for Christ. There are thousands growing up in utter ignorance of the Gospel, and totally unreached by other Christian agencies; it is these that the Army seeks to lay hold of for Christ. There are now 744 junior corps, while the number of fully enlisted junior soldiers is 18,020, most of these being actively engaged in helping the officers set apart specially to work among the young. This is very little when it is considered what there is yet to be done, and the General made an earnest appeal for help to extend this work.

The remainder of the meeting was occupied by the singing of songs and choruses, and the giving of testimonies as to the results already attained, by the young people themselves.

THE PROTESTANT CHURCH IN PARIS has lost one of its most faithful and respected representatives by the death of Baron E. de Bussiere at the age of eighty-four. He left the Roman Catholic Church. A French peer, and a former ambassador, he served faithfully as an elder of the Church. Many philanthropic works will miss his intelligent sympathy and the help of his purse.

RUTH'S CHOICE.—RUTH i. 16—22.

Golden Text: Ruth i. 16.

(1) Ruth's attachment to the person of Naomi.—She knew Naomi was poor, sorrowful, with apparently no bright future before her, but her love for Naomi rose beyond all this. Only to be with her, to cheer and comfort her as far as lay in her power, was enough for her. We see here the mighty power of love. It is a solemn responsibility to have gained the affection of any heart. Well for us if, as in this case, love for us draw a soul to leave that which is opposed to God, and woo and win it to a higher, happier, holier life.

For this attachment to Naomi led (2) to attachment to her people.—For Naomi's sake Ruth would henceforth cast in her lot with Naomi's people. She did not know how they would receive her; it was a venture in faith.

(3) And thy God my God.—Here is the crowning point, gods many and lords many left behind; her allegiance given to Jehovah, Naomi's God. Oh, what balm to Naomi's sorrowing heart!

(4) This was a life-long choice.—"Where thou diest, I will die." No thought here of staying with Naomi for a few years, perhaps till her death, and then to return to Moab again. It is a choice not merely for Naomi's life, but for Ruth's.

(5) A steadfast choice silences opposition.—"She left speaking unto her." Naomi saw that this was no mere burst of feeling, but a deliberate and solemn determination, and so she accepted it. Opposition of friends or foes is generally dropped, or greatly modified, when the mind and will are resolute.

In this choice of Ruth's we see a beautiful picture of a soul's choice and decision for Christ. He will not have anyone follow Him without counting the cost, and it is only attachment to the person of Jesus which can stand the test. Here is a simple way of looking at the great question of decision for Christ, it is love for and trust in Himself, love and trust won by what He is and what He has done for us. "We love Him, because He first loved us."

This must lead to attachment to his people, not because of what they are in themselves, but because they are his. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (John xiv. 35). "He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness" (1 John ii. 9). This is a choice for life, for time and eternity. Stedfastness of purpose will help the young disciple to overcome opposition. As long as there is wavering Satan will use all his weapons to keep the soul chained, he never ceases his warfare, but it is very different when once a stedfast purpose is shown to serve the Lord and Him only.

19—22.—The arrival of the two women in Bethlehem caused no small stir. "They said," i.e., the women said, "is this Naomi." Grief-stricken and aged, the only one to return out of the four who left, no wonder the city was moved. Naomi's answer is very pathetic, "Call me not Naomi (i.e., pleasant), call me Mara" (i.e., bitter). The name that sounded sweet and bright in happier times seemed a mockery now.

"The Lord hath testified against me."—Here Naomi seems to acknowledge that she and her husband had been wrong in leaving their own land to dwell amongst the heathen, and those who were specially severed from them by God Himself (Deut. xxiii. 3—6). It would have been better to trust in God for provision and enjoy his favour than to expose their sons to the influence of heathen customs. The sons disobeyed the command in Deut. vii. 3, and fell under the judgment of Deut. vii. 4. Life must have looked very dark to Naomi as she returned to the old familiar scenes, and at every turn missed the loved and lost ones. But though she was drinking a bitter cup of sorrow God was preparing a cup of blessing.

They came to Bethlehem in the beginning of barley harvest.—It might seem chance to them, but the very time of their arrival was ordered by God, so that at once Ruth could find a means of gaining bread, and should be without delay led to the kinsman whose right it was to redeem.

The choice made in darkness, without hope of reward, led to rich blessing. To Ruth was given the honour of being the ancestress of David and David's greater Son.

For those who choose Christ, often in suffering and darkness there is a glorious reward, "Heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ." "If any man serve Me, him will my Father honour."

Y.M.C.A. Bible Lessons.

OUTLINES PREPARED BY HENRY THORNE.

Sunday Afternoon, December 23.

SIMON PETER.—JOHN XXI. 15—19.

Our Lord dealt with men according to his knowledge of their characters. In our lesson we have:—

(1) A Note of Time (ver. 15).—"When they had dined," or breakfasted. In this meal there was a revelation of: The power of Christ.—The food was of his providing. The sympathy of Christ.—He still took a place at the social meal. The thoughtfulness of Christ.—He provided for the physical needs of his disciples before He spoke to them of weightier things. The wisdom of Christ.—He used the charms of association for the accomplishment of his loving purposes. The meal and the miracle that made it possible at the end of his ministry bear a strong resemblance to events connected with its beginning (Luke v. 1—11). By these means Jesus broke through estrangement and reserve, and came near to his disciples. This was a fitting prelude to the faithful and loving words which were to follow.

(2) A Gracious Familiarity.—The Master called Peter by his name. One name had been given him by the Master (Mark iii. 16). By his weakness and his sin the impetuous disciple had surely forfeited his right to that name, but to show perhaps how fully he was forgiven the angel used it in his address to the women (Mark xvi. 7). Jesus, standing in the presence of one who had denied Him, used no upbraiding. We see here the compassionate nature of Jesus (Heb. v. 2). Peter's remembrance of this kindness probably found expression in his epistles (see 1 Peter iii. 9; iv. 18).

(3) Heart-Searching Questions.—In the questions put to Peter by our Lord, we have: A probable rebuke of self-confidence (ver. 15).—"More than these." Comp. Peter's proud boast (Mark xiv. 29). Note that the words, "more than these," are not repeated by Peter. The experience of failure has stripped him of self-confidence. Comp. 1 Peter v. 5. The value of repetition.—Thrice-repeated questions are likely to be remembered. Comp. John iii. 4, 5, 7.

(4) A Renewal of Confidence.—The fallen disciple receives a fresh commission. Note that this commission provides for: The lambs.—Both the Epistles of Peter were for young converts (1 Peter ii. 2; 2 Peter iii. 1). The whole flock.—"My sheep." Comp. "the elders" (1 Peter v. 1). For loving service.—The work is to be the outcome of love for Christ (1 Peter i. 8, 22; ii. 17). For the separation of Peter for a special ministry.—He had once left his nets to follow Jesus (Matt. iv. 20), but he had gone back to his nets (John xxi. 3). This call brings him again to the higher work.

(5) A Prophecy of Death (vv. 18, 19).—A probable reference to death by crucifixion. The death of the Apostle was to bring glory to God. God is glorified by the way in which his people suffer for his sake (1 Peter iv. 14).

Cannibalism in Central Africa.

Dear Sir,—Mr. Graham Wilmot Brooke, who has just returned to England for a brief visit from his missionary service in Central Africa, addressed this evening a meeting of my communicants. The account he gave of the condition of the ten million cannibals on the Upper Congo is so absolutely appalling that I cannot refrain from writing to call attention to it.

Mr. Brooke leaves England again for Africa (D.V.) in February next, but I earnestly hope that before he does so steps may be taken to give the utmost publicity to the awful facts of which he has been an eyewitness. I have attended scores of missionary meetings, but never have I realised the claims of the heathen world on Christians as I have to-night. I write this note without Mr. Brooke's knowledge or consent, but I feel sure that for the sake of Christ's kingdom he will forgive my doing so.—Yours faithfully, Edw. W. Moore.

Emmanuel Church, Wimbledon, Surrey, Dec. 7.

TENT-STREET MISSION, BETHNAL GREEN.—At the recent re-opening the Secretary gave an outline of the work done during the past year. The renovation of the building cost nearly £50, and £30 is still needed. Addresses were given by Messrs. Lobb, Pickersgill, Rennie, Kirk, &c

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Rev. G. C. Grubb, the well-known Church of England missioner, is about to start on a two years' mission tour round the world.

Rev. J. W. Horsley, the well-known prison chaplain, has been appointed to the vicarage of Holy Trinity, Woolwich. Mr. Horsley is an extreme High Churchman.

The St. Barnabas Mission House, Queensland-road, Holloway, was opened a few days ago by the Bishop of Marlborough. The neighbourhood is a sadly needy one, and it is hoped that a good work will be done from this evangelical centre. Revs. Talbot Hindley and E. S. Fardell, are, respectively, vicar and curate of the parish.

In connection with St. Mary's, Leamington, of which Rev. Dr. S. C. Morgan is the vicar, an iron room has lately been erected in the church ground, to seat 120 persons, for the purpose of accommodating Mrs. Morgan's class of working men. A Young Men's Institute has also been started, and other work is being vigorously carried on.

CONGREGATIONAL.

Rev. Brooke Lambert, vicar of Greenwich, recently opened a bazaar in connection with a Congregational Church at Greenwich, in token of his hearty sympathy with the good work being carried on. He is anxious to see an exchange of pulpits between the clergy of the Establishment and Nonconformist ministers.

The vicar of St. Saviour's, Dartmouth, Rev. J. S. Exell, was present lately at the opening of a bazaar at Dartmouth, for the purpose of raising funds towards paying off a debt on the Congregational chapel in that town. In the course of an address which he delivered on the occasion, Mr. Exell urged the need there was for union in sympathy and in spirit between religious denominations. He believed that this union would eventually come, and trusted that all Christians would work towards this end.

BAPTIST.

The monthly missionary prayer-meeting at Beulah Baptist Chapel, Thornton-heath, on Monday week, was an occasion of special interest, owing to the presence of four students of the Pastor's College, who are shortly going abroad—Mr. Huntley (China), Mr. Patrick (North Africa), and Messrs. Clark and Roger (Congo River). Dr. Soltau Eccles, of Upper Norwood, explained the work of the North Africa Mission, and the four students gave short addresses.

The church at Silvertown, Essex, under the pastorate of Mr. C. Stanley, has recently celebrated its first anniversary. The report shows that, during the less than fifteen months the cause has been established, the membership has grown rapidly and now numbers forty-three. Twenty-two persons have been baptized, and many more have professed saving faith in the Saviour. The congregations are so large that the greatest difficulty is often experienced to find room for the attendants.

PRESBYTERIAN.

After visiting Ceylon and Madras, Dr. Donald Fraser has returned to England, and preached in his church at Marylebone on Sunday.

On Tuesday, Nov. 27, Dr. Thain Davidson, of London, preached to young men at Grimsby. His subject was, "The perils of the great city." This he handled with great ability, enlarging on dangers from the largeness of towns, from late hours, and from bad company. A large audience—many of them young men—listened with deep attention to the Doctor's thrilling discourse. His earnest appeals for immediate decision have been owned of God to the arousing of many concerning their soul's salvation.

METHODIST.

Referring to the paragraph last week as to Lord Salisbury's treatment of the Wesleyans at Hatfield, a correspondent draws our attention to a letter recently written, by the Prime Minister's instructions, denying that he has refused "to let or sell a site for a chapel' at Hatfield.

The Wesleyan ministers of Manchester were entertained at tea on Friday week by the ministers of the New Connexion, the Primitive Methodist, and the United Methodist Free Churches. Several brethren took part in the friendly conversations afterwards, and it was stated by one or two that the recent evangelistic movements of Wesleyan Methodism had begun to tell beneficially on the Primitive Methodist body, which is shaking itself, as it were, in order to make determined efforts to extend the kingdom of Christ. A practical outcome of this gathering was the appointment of a committee, composed of ministers of the four bodies, to arrange for some united Methodist services, to be held in the Central Hall, Manchester, early in the new year.

A correspondent of The Methodist Times gives a glowing account of the work of a mission band connected with Wesley Chapel, Arundel-street, Portsmouth:—Since aggressive work was started, some ten months ago, hundreds of pledges have been taken, and considerable damage has been done to the vile liquor traffic. Many a poor fallen one has had her better nature roused again, and the ladies engaged in rescue work are energetically prosecuting their holy crusade. Christ-like sympathy is much appreciated by those sometimes spoken of as "the lapsed classes," and there is abundant evidence that the affection, as well as the attention, of the people is being gained. Three months ago rooms were engaged in two streets where vice openly flaunted itself, and that step has led to the resurrection of scores of souls who were dead in trespasses and sins. Christ is winning all along the line—there are more frequent conversions in the chapel, and numbers find the Saviour during the week.

SALVATION ARMY.

A special appeal is being made for volunteers for rescue work in Canada.

The Town Council of Peebles have let their Town Hall to be used as barracks.

A new slum post has just been opened at Whitechapel, and a shelter is also to be established there.

Further attempts are being made to check immorality at Woolwich. Thirty unfortunates have already been received by Mrs. Bramwell Booth in the various London Rescue Homes.

Anniversary services have been held at Hamilton, N.B. It is three years since the Army was established in Hamilton, and the year just closed has been the most successful of any.

It is reported from Canada that the band, at present on tour throughout the Dominion, are having a most successful time. Crowds have been brought together at Hamilton, Brantford, and Simcoe, Ont.

Much indignation has been caused at Needham Market by the arrest of Miss Wright and two members of the Army for alleged obstruction. The case, which came before the magistrates in November, created much feeling at the time. The prisoners were marched through the streets handcuffed like felons, and were taken to Ipswich Gaol.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Frederick Andrews, of Ackworth, has just returned from four busy weeks in America, where he has visited many Friends' colleges and schools.

J. Ernest Grubb, of Carrick-on-Suir, has been giving illustrated lectures on China mission work in the towns round his home. Interest is thus excited, and increased in foreign missions.

Jonathan Backhouse Hodgkin and wife, of Darlington, have just paid a very cheering and helpful visit to several parts of Western Quarterly Meeting, and also to Sidcot school. On Sunday week they were in Cardiff, to the gratification and blessing of the rising meeting there.

John T. Dorland has had large and valued service in London, both at the Bedford Institute and Bunhill-fields mission centres. As a young man speaking to young men, his words come home with remarkable power, and converting grace accompanies them. He is now in Gloucester.

In her eighty-seventh year, Jane, widow of John Wigham (tertius), of Edinburgh, passed away on the 29th ult., leaving a blank in a valued circle of Friends. Her sons, who fill positions of great usefulness in Dublin, and her daughter at home, mourn her loss, and the congregation of Friends in Edinburgh are the poorer for her departure, though she was "ripe and ready" for the blessed change.

NOTES FROM SCOTLAND.

Mr. Moodie is conducting special meetings, with much blessing, at Wishaw.

An effort is being made to resuscitate the once flourishing Y.M.C.A. in Kilmarnock, so as to bring this important town into touch with the movement.

Mr. Richard Hill has held a series of Gospel meetings at White Memorial Free Church, Paisley-road, Glasgow. They have been the most successful and fruitful ever held in this church.

Large congregations have lately been attracted to St. John's Wesleyan Church, Glasgow, by the ministry of Rev. W. J. Dawson, and much blessing has rested upon the services. Many young men have been among the converts. Rev. E. J. Brailsford is also working steadily away at Blairgowrie, and is training several young men to do the work of evangelists. These evidences of quickened religious life amongst the Methodist people in Scotland afford us unfeigned satisfaction, says The Methodist Times.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The lady missionary of the Women's Temperance Association and Christian Workers' Union has, during the past month, addressed meetings at Newry, Dunmurry, and Belfast, and at each place pledges were taken and good was done.

The Fuh Kien Mission, China, which is maintained by Trinity College, Dublin, is now better than a year in existence, and is doing an encouraging work. Already the Society has one missionary in the field, and in the district there are no less than 6000 native Christians.

Meetings were held last week in the Friends' Meeting House, Lurgan, under the auspices of the Y.W.C.A., and were largely attended. The meetings were addressed by Miss Garry, of England, and other ladies, and much good is believed to have been done among the young women of the town.

A conference of ministers of the Irish Presbyterian Church was held in Belfast recently. A number of brethren, who earnestly longed for an abundant outpouring of the Holy Spirit, gathered together, was a fine representation of the younger clergy—the hope—and not a few travelling many miles to be present.

High Ritualism is not confined to England. The "Protestant" rector of Donegore, Rev. J. Hunt, has recently advocated the efficacy of masses for the living and the dead, the supremacy of the Pope, and has stated that he believes that the only Church in the country which has real orders is the church of the Roman obedience.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. Dr. Albert Revel, Professor in the Waldensian Church's School of Theology at Florence, Italy. Dr. Revel was one of the most learned pastors of his Church, the author of many theological works, and a contributor to the best evangelical papers and reviews.—Rev. Samuel Earnshaw, since 1847 chaplain of the parish church, Sheffield.—Rev. G. L. Withers, Coventry, who was for thirty-five years pastor of the Congregational Church at Foleshill.—Rev. Robert Maden, pastor of the Baptist Church, Ramsbottom, Yorkshire.

Appeals.

Blaenavon Mountains.—Pastor O. Tidman writes from 39, Park-street, Blaenavon, Mon.: "I should be grateful for any help for the sick poor; also for Gospel tracts, books, cards, and left-off clothing."

Lambeth.—The vicar and churchwardens of St. Andrew's, Lambeth, earnestly appeal for help in relieving distress in a large district. Gifts in money, clothing, or old linen gratefully received and acknowledged by the vicar, Rev. Trevor Fielder, 108, Stamford-street, S.E.

Chelsea Preventive and Rescue Home, 28 and 30, Margaretta-terrace, S.W. All during the autumn the funds of this very useful Institution have been extremely low. Several young girls are waiting to be received as soon as possible. Contributions may be sent to Mrs. J. Lawson Forster, 12, Carlyle-square, Chelsea.

Brunswick Hall, Poplar.—Mr. G. Fuller writes: "We have started our halfpenny dinners, and opened our soup kitchen for the poor. Any help, either in kind or in money, will be thankfully received, as we are in sore need of funds. Left-off clothing would also be welcome." Mr. Fuller's address is, Brunswick Hall, Brunswick-road, Poplar, E.

The Boys' Farm Home, Church Farm, East Barnet, Herts, has for twenty-eight years provided healthy work, combined with moral and religious training, for orphans and sons of poor widows, or other destitute children. There is urgent need of funds to maintain the eighty-nine boys now at Church Farm. Voluntary contributions are earnestly solicited. Treasurer, Colonel W. J. Gillum.

The Poor of Newfoundland.—Rev. C. F. Hubbard writes from New Harbour, Trinity Bay, Newfoundland: May I ask for a supply of sheet almanacs, with daily texts, for the ensuing year? Half-worn clothing would also be of great value among the poor, and parcels will be gladly received by Mrs. Hubbard, who will shortly join me. Her address is, 4, Bird's Royd, Rastrick, Brighouse, Yorks.

Poor Children at Stratford, E.—The teachers of High-street Infant School, Stratford, are anxious to provide soup dinners for poor children during the winter months. Many parents cannot every day pay the penny asked for the meal, and none who really need are turned away. Most of the children—over 300 in number—live in the poorest street in the neighbourhood. Contributions will be received by Miss H. Franks, at the school.

Distress at Wandsworth.—Pastor D. M. Cameron, of Union Tabernacle, Wandsworth-road, S.W., writes that there is much want and suffering in that district. Many deserving people are in distress, but through lack of funds they cannot be relieved. Contributions for this purpose, as well as to provide a Christmas dinner for widows and others, and cast off clothing for old and young, will be gratefully acknowledged. Mr. Cameron's address is, Thurlow House, 315, Wandsworth-road, S.W.

East London Soup Kitchens.—Last winter the cost of the dinners (including plant and pannikins, coals and coppers) we gave to the poor children connected with three Board schools in this neighbourhood, was £79. The number of dinners were 10,225. The children were selected and sent by the head master and mistress. They were all really poor and needy, many being most distressing cases. Beyond the grants kindly made to assist this good work, I require funds to meet the expenses up to April next, if the soup kitchens are to be kept open. Annie S. Adamson.

200, Euston Road, N.W. EDWARD W. THOMAS.

In order to meet the convenience of many desirous of visiting his Institutions,

DR. BARNARDO proposes (D.V.) to be AT HOME every TUESDAY AFTERNOON during this Winter, between the hours of 2 and 6 o'clock, when any one can see him and inspect the Homes without making a previous appointment.

THE STEPNEY HOMES are also open for inspection on the afternoon of every other week-day (except Saturday, when no one can ever be admitted). But Dr. Barnardo hopes it will be remembered that the great pressure of the work in his hands compels him to announce that he cannot personally see visitors on any other day, except Tuesday, save by appointment, made and confirmed beforehand.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made, by which Visitors, calling at Stepney on the afternoon of any week day (except Saturday) can not only see the Boys Engaged at Work at their various Trades, but may also inspect "Her Majesty's Hospital for Sick Children," in Stepney Causeway, "The Labour House for Destitute Youths," in the Commercial Road, "Leopold House Home for Little Boys," in the Burdett Road, and "The Edinburgh Castle Mission Hall and Coffee Palace. A private Omnibus will convey Visitors (free of expense) to any or all of these Branches from Stepney, situated only a few minutes' distance from each other.

THE STEPNEY HOMES are easily reached from any part of London, thus:—By Train from Fenchurch street, or North London Railway Stations to Stepney Station; By Omnibus from Charing Cross and the Bank to Stepney Causeway; Or by Metropolitan Railway to Aldgate, thence by Poplar Tramcar (yellow) to Stepney Causeway.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HOME.

The Southampton Temperance Mission was a great success. All denominations assisted.

The London branch of the U.K.A. is endeavouring to promote the election of temperance men on the London County Council.

Several publicans in Manchester were fined recently for supplying drink to intoxicated persons, the latter also being fined.

Mr. Arnold Morley, M.P., at Lambeth Baths, said we ought to be ashamed that our principal colonies are ahead of us in temperance legislation.

Mr. William Forbes has held a three days' mission at the Thetford Town Hall, and four days' services at Miss Daniell's Soldiers' Home at Colchester.

The Northern Advance says: "Lord Salisbury in 1885 declared Sunday closing a burning question, but our leading statesmen do not seem to have caught the flame."

"Why I Became a Total Abstainer," an address by Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, appears in full in The Temperance Record for November 29. It deserves to be read by all Christians.

The late Duchess of Sutherland put on the blue ribbon about nine years ago, and her London residence was twice the scene of temperance gatherings. The Duchess of Rutland, Lady Biddulph, and other members of the aristocracy continue to do excellent service in the temperance cause.

The Methodist Recorder had a "Temperance Number" in connection with Temperance Sunday. It contained numerous replies from clergy, medical men, employers of labour, and others, to queries sent out the previous week. The replies were interesting, and fitted to stimulate temperance workers everywhere.

"Specs.," with their many attendant evils, are very common at public-houses during this season of the year. Where the police wink at such proceedings which are distinctly illegal as well as fruitful of much wickedness and misery, private persons may move the local authorities or communicate the facts to the Home Secretary. A resolute clergyman recently cleared a whole county of raffles and other public-house traps for the unwary.

The Commissioners of Customs state that the use of cocoa is growing very remarkably, the revenue from it having increased 75 per cent. in the last few years. There is, too, a remarkable increase in the use of tea, while the consumption of coffee is declining. It is not less pleasing to find also that if our national drinking had kept pace with the growth of population, the revenue from imported liquors during the year ended March 31 last would have been at least two and a half millions greater than it was.

FOREIGN.

A Bill has been laid upon the table of the French Chamber sanctioning the International Convention for the suppression of the North Sea liquor traffic.

Intemperance among the juvenile population of Austria is sadly prevalent. It is by no means uncommon for boys at school to be in a state of semi-intoxication. During the winter months poor children are often given a glass of the cheapest spirits for breakfast, partly to stave off the hungry feeling, and partly to keep out the cold. The Vienna School Board are endeavouring to secure its prohibition to children under fifteen years of age.

THE SABBATH IN FRANCE.—An address has just been issued in Paris, signed by 239 merchants and manufacturers, inviting all those who have not yet availed themselves of the Lord's Day rest to close their workshops and factories on Sunday, pointing out the physical and moral advantages of so doing.—Le Signal.

"IN TIME OF NEED."

Dear Friends,

I have been seeking for some months past to carry on the work in our Homes in unobtrusive dependence upon God. Our many pressing wants have been the means of giving us an experience of God's tenderness and faithfulness which we might never have had if surrounded by abundance.

As I do not feel free to leave the work much, even to further its interests financially, by holding meetings in various places, I am constrained, through the medium of an old friend, The Christian, to plead for the help we sorely need for the stern struggle before us these winter months against misery and sin in this vast city.

From Exeter, Leeds, Hanley, Cork, Stuttgard, Jamaica, &c., waifs are driven by the storms of life to seek shelter at our doors, open day and night. Need is the only passport, so magistrates loth to put the prison brand on a young life; City missionaries, diving into the lowest slums, and seeing in uncouth Ishmaels possible gems for the Redeemer's crown; policemen on their cold, lonely beats, stirred with pity for homeless starvelings lying asleep in their wet rags, in vans and cellars; even the hawkers and beggars in common lodging-houses, anxious to save woebegone boys from their own irretrievable ruin—all these day by day send to us cases of bodily suffering and moral danger that we dare not refuse.

Will you come and see these dear lads in our Home now, and contrast them in your mind with the spectacles of human misery you encounter now and then in the streets? I will heartily welcome you any day between this and Christmas (except Saturdays), from eleven till four, and show you them at work, in school, &c.

In a few months more than 100 of them will (D.V.) be on their way to busy, healthy Canadian homesteads, where the training begun here will be continued, and they will never again need a farthing of English money to be laid out upon them; others, as printers, shoemakers, &c., will be earning their bread honestly in dear old England, where many are now in business on their own account who a few years ago were rescued from the gutter and the gaol by our Homes.

This is a spiritual work, as truly a missionary work as if its sphere was in Fiji or Madagascar. We gather in our young home-heathen, and we are cheered by evidences of the Holy Spirit's work amongst them, many having lately confessed Christ as their personal Saviour; while glad tidings come from time to time of others bearing fruit to God at home and across the sea who "received the engrafted word" under our roof in years gone by.

We are anxious to close the year with the record, "free of debt," and be able to testify that God has supplied all our need. Our stores of clothing, boots, &c., need replenishing. Our hungry battalions require nearly 800 meals daily. In fact, our wants are legion. "Nobody's boys" are like everybody's boys in their devouring, wearing-out powers. We do not make any parade, or lavish money on ornamentation, but we do like to see our boys fat and cozy.

This is the eighteenth year of my service for Christ amongst waifs and strays. Will you, dear friends, kindly come to my aid in this time of need, and enable me to say, as the year closes, that we "owe no man anything save to love one another"?

Yours very indebtedly,

J. W. C. Fegan

MONS. EUGÈNE M. L. RÉVEILLAUD,

Editor of "Le Signal."

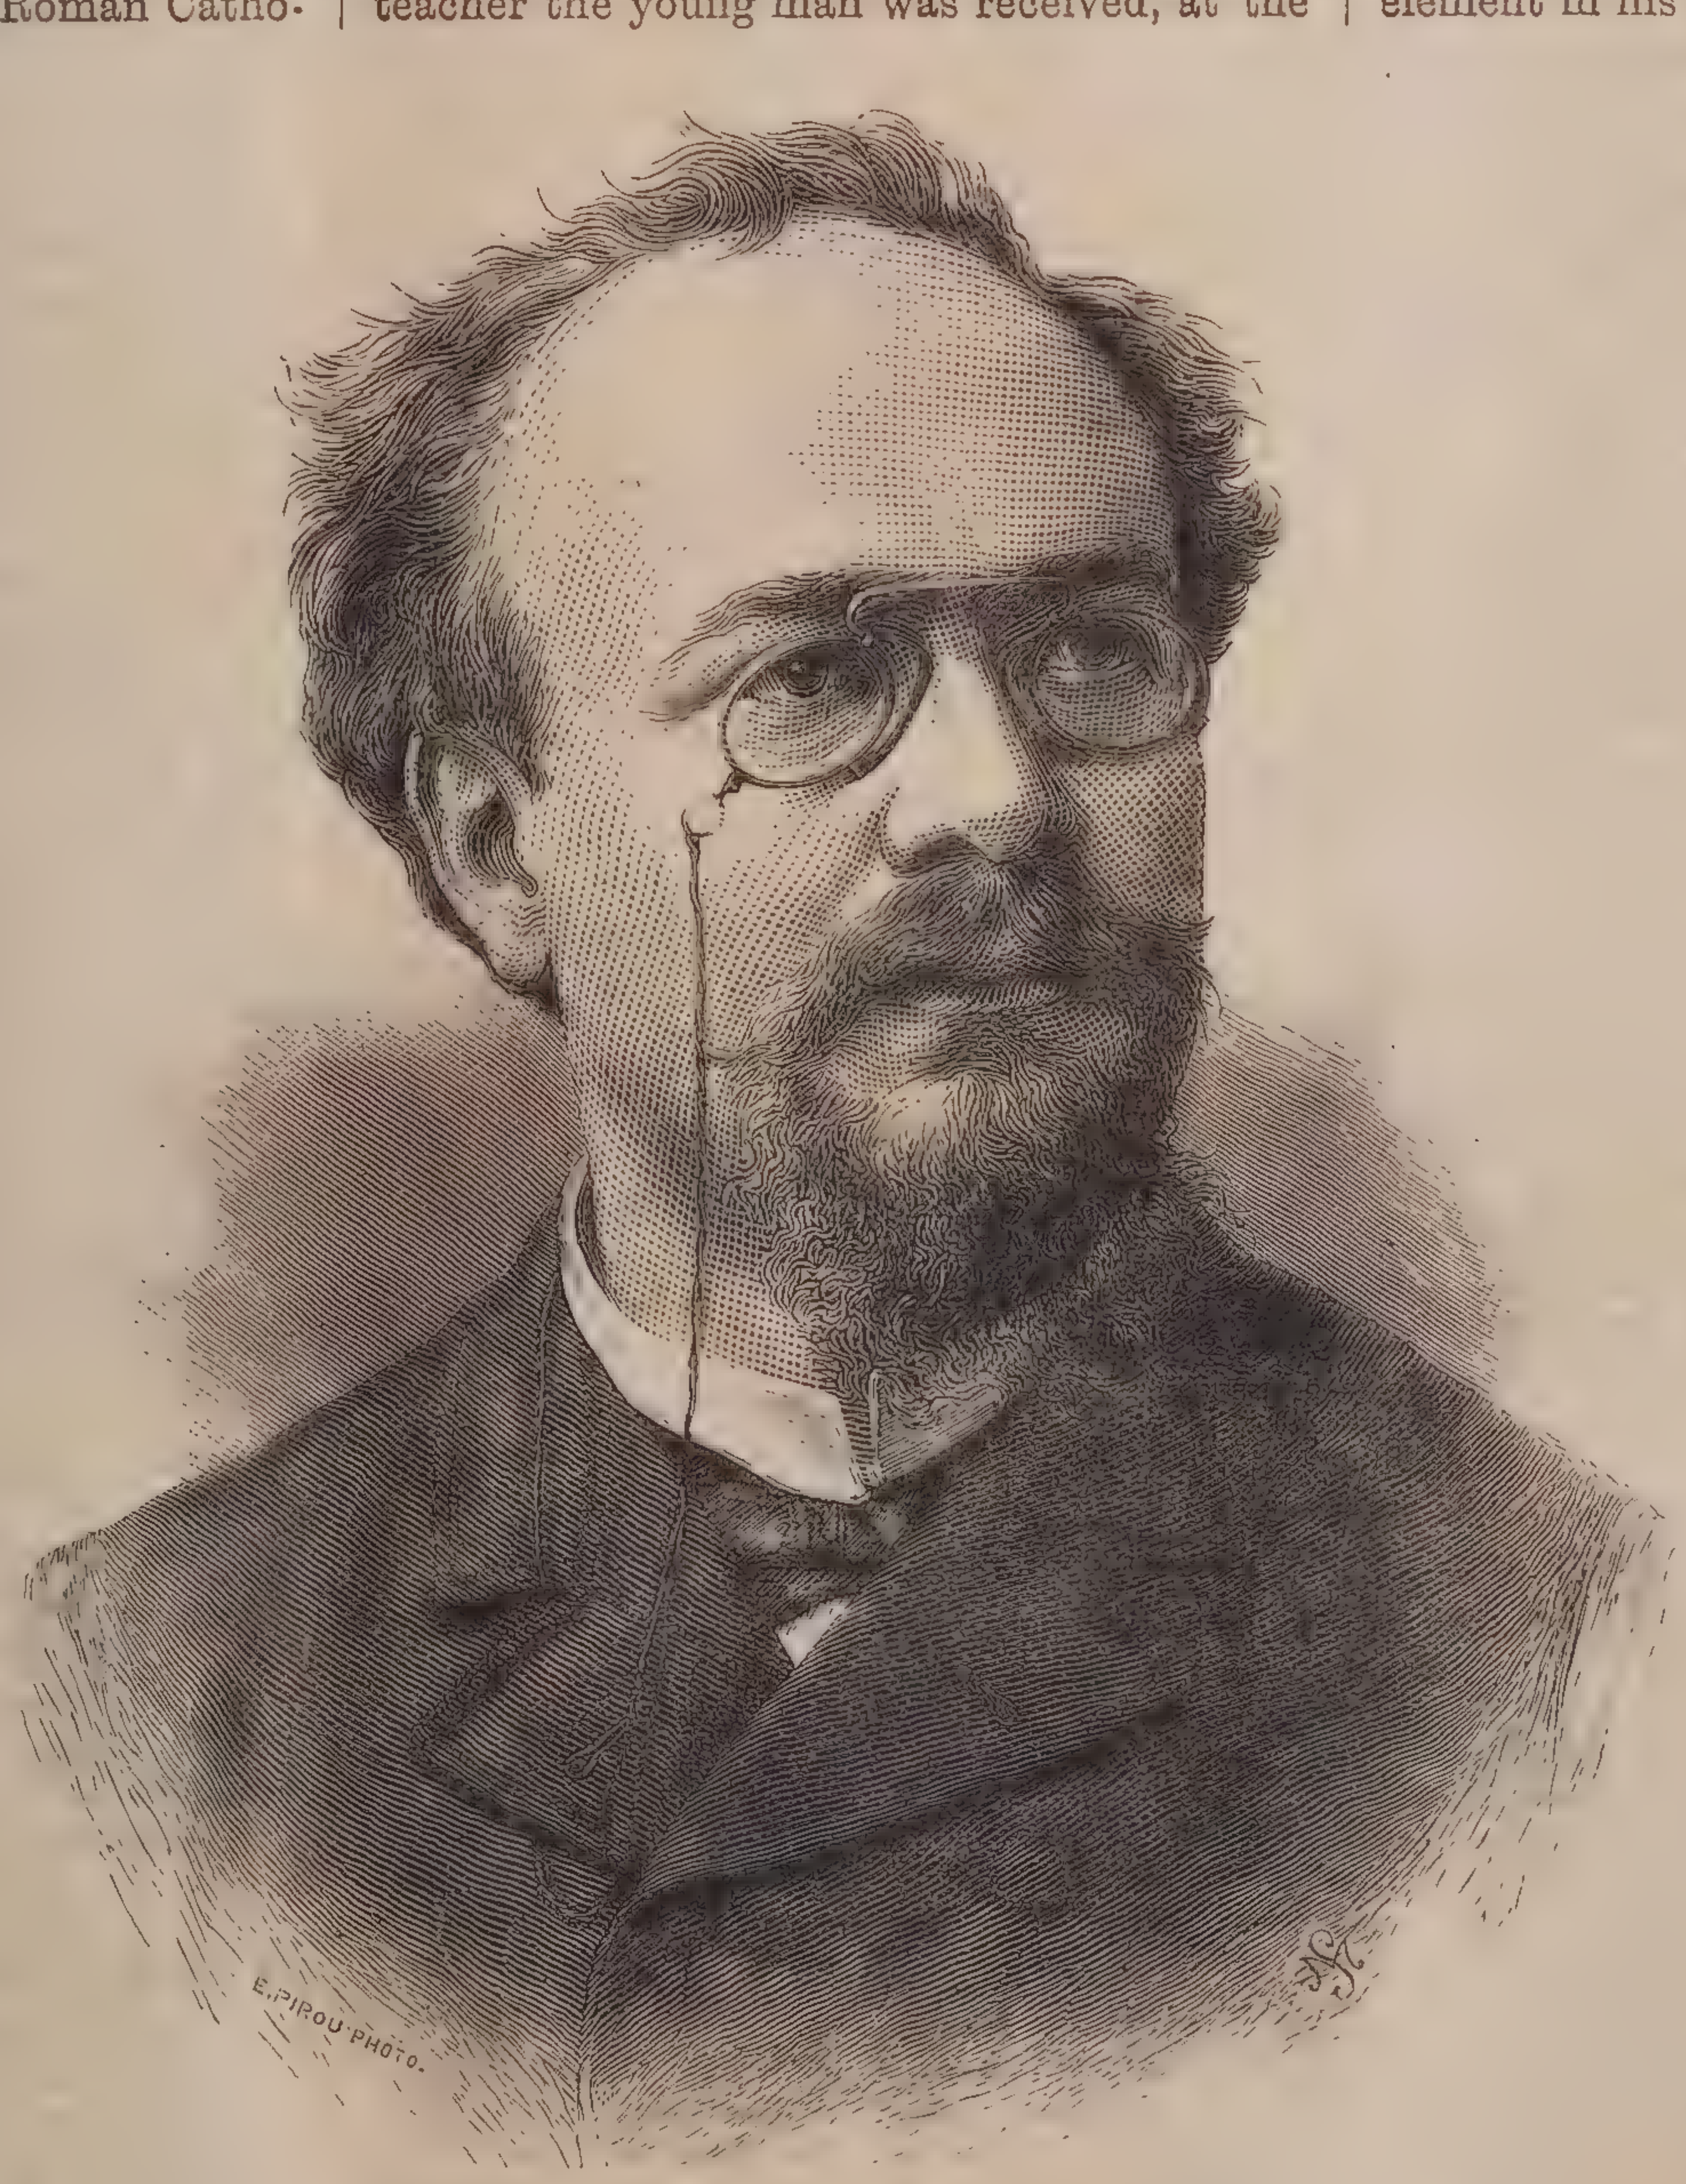
IN the summer of 1878, at a Protestant service held in a French provincial town, a young man rose and asked permission of the pastor to make a public testimony to the reality and power of the Spirit of God. This young man, born in the Roman Catholic Church, had early renounced its communion; but only to wander for years in the dreary wastes of scepticism. He was known as a man of rare mental gifts, and of high promise in his profession of advocate. On the memorable day in question he declared in simple but powerful words that God had visited him, and had filled him with the joy of his salvation.

Ten years ago the tidings that God had raised up this "new champion of the Gospel in France" caused the heart of many a Protestant Christian to beat high with hope. Looking back now, and noting what it has pleased God to accomplish by means of that champion, we are filled not only with thankfulness, but with renewed hope. This man, whom God has marvellously called to be the apostle of modern France, is the subject of our present sketch.

EUGÈNE MICHEL LUDOVIC RÉVEILLAUD was born in 1851 at St. Coutant, near La Rochelle, that classic ground of French Protestantism. Both his parents were teachers by profession. They were members of the Roman Catholic Church, the mother being a devout, earnest Romanist, the father a Romanist only in name, and at heart a Deist of the school of Rousseau.



E. PIROU PHOTO.

Destined for the priesthood by his mother's desire, the young Eugène was early sent to the seminary; but in his twelfth year he revolted against the teaching of the priests, and of his own accord left their school. He had previously written to his father that he could not become a priest. The elder Réveillaud was at first displeased, but he speedily forgave in his son a step which doubtless carried with it much of his personal sympathy. He made other arrangements for the education of the boy. A retired professor in a neighbouring town was engaged to instruct him in Latin and Greek. Through the influence of this teacher the young man was received, at the age of fourteen, at the Lycée Charlemagne, in Paris, with the promise of a bursary, on condition that he should carry off the annual general prize offered for competition to the lyceums and colleges of Paris. The prize was gained; many prizes, indeed—amongst others the notable one of first honours in French style and oratory. Henceforward the young man was able to continue his much-loved studies without charge to his parents.

Having completed his classical course, he proceeded to take his diploma of advocate at the University of Paris; but previously to this, and at a very early age, he had entered upon that career of journalism which now, in a new form, is one important element in his evangelistic work. From the age of twenty-one until he had reached his twenty-eighth year, he was chief editor of more than one provincial paper, as, for instance, the Indépendant, of Rheims, and the Avenir Républicain, of Troyes.

During all this time Eugène Réveillaud was a stranger to God. He had long cast off the Church of Rome, under the profound conviction that a religion which addressed itself to the senses rather than to the reason and the affections, and severed morality from religion, could not be true. Of evangelical Protestantism he had as yet no direct knowledge. He married, at the age of twenty-two, a lady of Romish family and educated in a convent; but, like himself, with no belief in the tenets of that Church. In order not to degrade their consciences by any act of outward submission to a Church in which they did not believe, Monsieur and Madame Réveillaud had their marriage celebrated only after the civil form before the magistrate. Subsequently, when they both had heartily embraced evangelical religion, they re-consecrated their happy union in the Reformed Church of France.

Eugène Réveillaud was twenty-five years of age before he turned his thoughts seriously to the search after God. The death of his first child was the means of awakening the deep spiritual want within him. He had learned to abhor Romanism and priestcraft, and, on the other hand, he had experienced the impotence of so-called free-thought to satisfy the higher instincts of humanity. But he did not yet know the truth. At this crisis the hand of God led him at Troyes, in Champagne, to the personal acquaintance of a Protestant pastor of deep piety—M. Berthe, who, with his not less devoted and admirable wife, exercised a profound influence upon the soul which was beginning to feel its need of God. In the home of M. and Mme. Berthe, M. Réveillaud recognised the excellence of evangelical teaching, and felt strongly attracted towards Protestantism. As yet, however, he knew Protestantism chiefly on its negative side, as a religion free from degrading superstition. He had not yet learned what he was soon to know in his own blessed experience—the inner peace—the mighty power and joy of a life filled with God.

At this juncture M. Réveillaud wrote a work which excited much interest, and which has now reached its eighth edition, "La Question Réligieuse et la Solution Protestante." Its opening words were significant:—

> This is a work of sincerity, but it is not a work of faith. The author is not a believer. He wishes to believe; but a man can no more command his reason than he can trifle with his conscience.

These touching words and the general interest of the book, led many Christians to pray with great earnestness that "the gift of God" might be speedily bestowed on one thus coming to the light. These prayers were abundantly answered. The seeker after God went on his way, conscious that there existed a Divine life which he had not attained, when suddenly—as suddenly as to Paul on the road to Damascus—a light, beyond the brightness of the sun, shone into his soul. In the night of July 13 and 14, 1878, he received a remarkable illumination—a baptism of the Holy Ghost—in which he became a new man, and from that hour a devoted servant of the Lord. The truth that took supreme possession of his mind was the power and presence of the Holy Ghost, the Revealer of the Father and the Son. In the strength of this he began his life anew. The spiritual destitution of his native land became to him the question of absorbing interest and solicitude. His life work is now summed up in one phrase—the evangelisation of France.

It was immediately after his remarkable conversion that M. Réveillaud made the public confession related in the beginning of this sketch. He was in his twenty-eighth year. He remained at Troyes until the end of the year 1878. Early in 1879 he removed to Versailles, his present home, chiefly at the desire of the late revered and beloved Madame André-Walther, who to the end of her life was his most faithful friend. Encouraged by her sympathy and support, Le Signal was commenced in April, 1879. This paper, which M. Réveillaud continues to edit and publish weekly, is of great and growing service to evangelical religion in France.

And, now, what shall be henceforward the manner of life of this man called of God? What means shall he employ for the attainment of his one absorbing aim—the evangelisation of France? As the indefatigable agent of the Mission Intérieure, he travels through the length and breadth of the land, spreading among his fellow-countrymen the knowledge of salvation. In the large towns, to crowded audiences, Catholic and Protestant, he lectures upon the vital truths of Christianity, or preaches in the halls of the McAll Mission. At times he visits the wilds of the Cévennes or the villages of the Hautes Alpes, always and everywhere sowing the seed of the Divine word. The gifts of oratory which had offered so brilliant a prospect to the young advocate, have been altogether consecrated to the supreme work of making known the Gospel of Christ. His pen has not been idle. In addition to the well-known "Question Réligieuse," we may cite the "Histoire du Canada," valuable tractates such as, "L'Evangile et la Liberté," "La Vie Eternelle," "Le Surnaturel dans le Christianisme."

The history and the religious condition of the French Canadians occupy much of M. Réveillaud's attention. He has recently edited an interesting work on the early colonisation of Canada, written by Père Sixte le Tac, and containing much curious information regarding the Jesuit intrigues in North America. In 1880 M. Réveillaud visited Canada and the United States, in company with his friend and fellow-worker, the late lamented Rev. Th. Dodds, of the McAll Mission. In the spring of 1887, being obliged by medical orders to leave France for a time, M. Réveillaud made an interesting tour in the Northern Sahara, particulars of which are given in his "Excursion au Sahara." Prefixed to M. Sanceau's fine translation of Professor Drummond's "Natural Law in the Spiritual World," is an essay of considerable length, by M. Réveillaud, marked by great originality and breadth of range. Of rich and varied scholarship, and of fine philosophic insight, M. Réveillaud is able to meet the boldest attempts of speculation; but never is he so at home, either in public or in private, as when he is unfolding the unsearchable riches of Christ the Saviour.

The present condition of France is a subject at once of absorbing interest and of Christian hope to all who desire the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom. In this land so favoured by nature, yet all but mortally smitten by Rome, there is at present a widespread unrest and dissatisfaction of soul. The French mind, so gay and brilliant on the surface, is conscious of deep recesses of spiritual want which none but God can satisfy. Christian men and women of England and of the world, come to the help of France! Send that which alone can allay the "mighty famine" of the Word of Life which is preying on the very heart of this generous nation.

CHRISTIAN WOMEN AND CHARITY.—The Queen is giving some very interesting notes of women's work for charity during 1888. In the last issue it speaks in very cordial terms of the work of Miss Robinson, Mrs. Spurgeon's Book Fund, Mrs. Meredith's Prison Mission, &c.

THE END OF THE YEAR.—1

By Rev. WILLIAM GUEST, F.G.S.

Again it is my privilege to address at the close of the year the numerous readers o this journal who, in a world of apostasy have fellowship in the faith of Jesus, the Deliverer of man from sin and Satan. It has been a year of alarms and apprehensions among nations. A year when everywhere peoples have been at unrest, for they have cast off the dominating law of righteousness, and have been blindly trying to live without a Supreme Ruler. It has unhappily among ourselves been a year of political and religious alienations. It was hoped that the grand historical commemorations of 1888 would have made all Englishmen one in their acknowledgment of the wonders God had in bygone times wrought in the land. But these are days when the nation no longer is invited to a united recognition of the God of our fathers, and when it suffers immensely from the loss of occasions of devout patriotism.

On the other hand, there has never been a year of more marked activity for the bringing in of the reign of God among men. Religious and missionary conferences have been pregnant with even grander results than their promoters intended. The movements of the Spirit are not with observation. Efforts purely seeking the glory of our ascended Saviour are made fruitful in blessing in ways and measure beyond our thoughts. Never before in the history of the Church have so many hundreds of young men in America and Great Britain offered themselves for service in the foreign mission field. Rarely can schemes of a wide and compassionate philanthropy have enlisted such magnificent zeal and liberality on the part of Christian men and women; and during a long life I have never known such readiness to listen to the pure Gospel of God on the part of the people.

Nevertheless, there are subtle and formidable counter-workings of the "adversary." It may be that the developments of error are being allowed to culminate for great Providential purposes. Any way we should be guiltily wrong if we ignored these counter-plottings of evil. Early in the year, was unveiled in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, in London. This was no isolated action. It was a national one; for the ecclesiastical structure which stands in the centre of the Metropolis of England is no church of a parish or city, but is the visible expression of our national Protestantism. The setting up of a huge altar crucifix and of an image of the Madonna was to all intents a repudiation of the most emphatic teaching of our English Reformation. The disinterment of the Scriptures; the recognition of their authority over all the decrees of councils and hierarchies; the emphatic assertion that the Bible and the Bible only is the religion of Protestants, are the very principles of the English Reformation. No one can pretend to plead the sanction of Scripture for the setting up of a life-size image of a fellow-creature in the central church of the nation, and, whatever may be pleaded about St. Paul's, no one who has travelled in Spain and Southern Italy can doubt that images of Mary in churches always mean the idolatrous worship of Mary.

AN IDOLATROUS IMAGE

This open apostasy from the spirit and intention of Protestantism is only one amidst other attempts to carnalise the thoughts of English worshippers. Altar crucifixes, such as appear under the image of the Virgin in St. Paul's, ritualistic performances, crosses, candles, bannerettes, bowings, promenadings, colours of dresses, and shapes of hats, in which it pleases thousands of the clergy to occupy themselves, are alienating the more intelligent part of the nation, not merely from churches, but in many cases from Christianity itself.

A SPURIOUS LIBERALISM

and a scoffing indifferentism make light of such matters. The "lazy tolerance and flabbiness of character" which a pleasure-seeking age induces cannot understand fidelity to the truth. But let us not be hindered. There was a time in the Roman Empire when the Epicureans sneered at the warnings against evils which were destroying the old Roman character and bringing ruin on the nation. To our English Epicureans, in like manner, distinctions between truth and error are nothing; but wiser and stronger men will not allow themselves to be unconcerned about these papistical revivals which exalt priests and prostrate the people. Protestantism, by the deepest struggles this great country has known, fought against services that present a false ideal of the power of the priesthood, instead of services that realise to conscience the authority of God.

No less has the ultimate issue of a Scriptural Protestantism demanded for the laity a co-operative voice in the institutions of worship; and he must be wilfully blind who does not see that it is against these rights of the laity that the efforts of our English ultra Ritualists are directed. The spiritual indolence of the people which priestism has always fostered, and the weakening of the sense of responsibility to God, have been the most serious barriers to the advance of the Gospel in the world. Clericalism has been followed by Atheism in more than one nation, and an impairing of the voice of a personal conscience has always been the forerunner of a destructive immorality. It may please the English hierarchy to ignore that movement of high ritualism which is most unhappily swallowing up all Church parties in a sacredotal one, but they surely cannot take account of the scepticism which is striking its roots into the heart of many of the most cultured men of the nation, and that menacing Socialism which honeycombs the working population; both of which find their strength in the Church's denial of the simplicities of Christianity, and the investing of a costumed officialism with priestly pretensions.

But elsewhere than in one ecclesiastical order has the year been marked by

DIVISIONS AND DIVERGENCIES.

Outside the Established Church, what was termed the "Down-Grade" controversy has been that of the year. The action taken was weakened by its lack of precision. It seemed indefinite, in not making clear whether the creed contended for was that which had grown up in the history of theological conflicts, or that of Scripture only. So far as it went, it was a powerful protest against a loose theology, and has continued courageously unflinching.

It is vain to ignore the assertion that loose theological opinions have been seriously spreading among occupants of pews as well as of pulpits. The fact can no longer be denied that wide divergencies of opinion are increasingly separating those who have hitherto been regarded as belonging to one theological school. The division is marked, and its import is ominous. A few of the divergencies may be noted. As to the Bible, the language now used by one party leaves a great difficulty in understanding how the Sacred Writings can any longer be received by them as a standard at all, or of any supreme authority. Others, however, adoringly maintain that the Scriptures are an inspired revelation of God's method of educating and saving the human race, and are a supreme directory of faith and practice.

As to the exercise of Reason, one party makes it a judge of the fitness of things spoken of in the Book; the other, recollecting the infinite distance between man and God, and the multitude of besetting difficulties which everywhere baffle reason, is willing to acquiesce in ignorance, and to accept incomprehensible revelations by the exercise of a childlike and trusting faith.

As to the Divine acceptance of a sinful man, the difference is vital. With one school, for a sinner to profess repentance and reformation, and a very vague and general belief in Christ suffices; the conversion of the man and reconciliation through the death of Jesus are minimised and explained away: with the other regeneration through the Spirit's grace and enduring faith in the great atonement and piacular sacrifice of the Son of God are held to be indispensable to present peace of conscience and ultimate salvation.

With the one, former customs of separation from the amusements, plays, dances, and ways of irreligious persons are held to be over scrupulous and morbid: while the other hold that separateness is demanded by the Scriptures, and that the precept is applicable to this age as it was to the apostolic—"Whosoever would be a friend of the world is an enemy of God."

Yea, the divergence goes into the great "afterwards." The one party appears to maintain that the condition of souls after death must be according to man's sense of the reasonable and equitable, and that no doctrine can be accepted which violates man's idea of the fitness of things. The other asserts that man is altogether incompetent to judge in such a matter; that there is a mystery as to the effects of evil, and of the sway over the world of malignant powers, which man cannot solve; and that in relation to the future of disembodied spirits that alone has been revealed which eminently serves purposes of probation, but does not gratify curiosity, and which ought to be accepted in a spirit of reverent faith.

THREE THEOLOGICAL PARTIES.

have now therefore appeared among those formerly considered Protestants.

Through the grace of the Divine Spirit, there are among those we call the people, also among the highest class, and pre-eminently among the highest stratum of the middle class, numbers of men and women, who, in the light of all modern inquiries are venturing their all for eternity upon an unreserved acceptance of the teaching of the Bible, and whose Christianity is that of an ingenuous belief in the New Testament as an inspired record. These believers are separated from Ritualists on the one hand and Rationalists on the other. They are either outside of churches, with certain disadvantages, or they are in them, but often in isolation. They are exceedingly numerous; far more numerous than is conceived. They comprise persons of rare piety, of abounding zeal for Christ's cause, and of noble benevolence for suffering men. A zeal and piety may indeed be found among them such as have not been equalled since apostolic times. What will be their action in coming days none can foresee. They are the care of the Eternal Spirit. They are Christ's witnesses. Their duty will be perplexing as error unfolds itself. Happily they are being drawn together, and in the hour of trial their course will be made manifest. It is not for the servant to inquire too curiously concerning the future, but to be faithful in fulfilling his Master's will for to-day.

The second party are the Romanisers in the national Church. This we know: they have no fixed ritual, no certain message. They cannot remain where they are. Their ritual is perpetually undergoing new papistical developments. English opinion is at present too hostile to allow the full flowering of their Sacramentarianism. They are biding their time to disclose ulterior designs. They cannot make manifest to the educated the logical nexus between their ghostly claims and the origin of the Reformed Church. For the present they are content to disparage Protestantism, which is a protest against Popery, and to substitute the sensuous and spectacular for Scriptural teaching.

The third party are those who, under the fine-sounding phrases of "higher thought," "liberal views," "intellectual conceptions," and "opinions demanded by the thought and science of the age," are floundering in their attempt to formulate their new Christian doctrine. They lead the young into quagmires of questionings and doubts, but they give to none the firm footing which man's fears and aspirations need. Teaching men to sit in judgment on the Bible, there is among them no longer any certainty. If every man's reason is the master, and the reasons have become as numerous as the men, there can be no authoritative voice at all. Their fundamental error is an obliviousness to the truth that the Bible does not aim to reveal the all of God, but reveals a God exactly suited to man's condition of sin, temptation, and lost condition, and this revelation they make void. In mercy to men, this new theology. Why the grave indictment against the modern pulpit in the letters that have lately appeared? Because preaching on the supremest matters has had no fixed and absolute message. Sermons must be, like political or other discourses, destitute of power, if the Christian preacher has not, as becomes his vocation, an intense and vehement belief. The themes of the pulpit are the most moving under heaven. No other men discourse on subjects of such tremendous and supernal import, and if the generation neither admires nor hates the preacher's message, but, because it lacks moving reality, treats it with an indifferent disdain, the cause is in the paralysed conviction of the man. If he has drunk the opiate of questioning the New Testament revelations, and of being swayed by current fashions of thought, or of accommodating his teachings to the prejudices of his hearers, he must bear a heavy penalty of losing the respect which is paid to efficiency.

TIME IS TESTING

And sceptical seatholders are beginning to reap a penalty of another kind. They have called themselves advocates of "advanced theology," and has not the time come when we may ask them in what have they advanced? You, my friend, who have prided yourself in being wiser than your godly father, have you his peace? If so, you would not be always on the defensive or so restless for perpetual excitement.

IN WHAT WAY ARE YOU ADVANCED

over devout evangelical men and women of your age? They are profoundly affected by the ineffable miseries of heathendom at home and abroad, and mainly through their missionary zeal nations are coming into the light, the ameliorations, and the salvation of Christianity. But you are so unconcerned that you never read a page of missionary intelligence, and know nothing of the vast changes going on in the lands of savageism and idolatry. This does not look like advancement. Once you prayed in your family, but the domestic altar is broken down. A home that has laid aside its recognition of God is not giving signs of an advanced piety. You cannot blind your eyes to the miseries, poverties, and ruin which follow a course of worldly dissipation and love of pleasure. But you who have your balls, and dances, and midnight return from theatres, and have levelled the barriers of what you term Puritanism, are not now giving an example of self-restraint that is wholesome to those who witness it. Brother, if a so-designated "advanced theology" is not leading to an advanced life, look to it, as the year closes, whether it be true.

Apocalyptic Interpretation.

IV.

If the opening of the seals is thus indicated by the vision of chapter v. as commencing immediately after the death and resurrection and glorification of the Lord Jesus, the vision connected with the first seal will naturally be what Victorinus, the earliest Apocalyptic commentator (A.D. 290), explains it to be, the first going forth of the Gospel with promise of its final victory.

No note of time is clearly intimated in any of the succeeding seal openings, until we come to the sixth seal, when we seem to be close to the end of the dispensation; for, though the exigencies of the continuous historical system lead Mr. Elliott (following Mede) to explain this of the politico-religious convulsions of the fourth century, the older and sounder school of expositors, who adopt the successive or recurring system of historical exposition, all refer the sixth seal to what its language naturally points to, "the signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars," which precede Christ's Second Coming: "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven shall be shaken" (Luke xxi. 26).

If we further adopt the view of the seventh seal advocated by the late Professor Birks and by Rev. E. Bickersteth, one of the most brilliant discoveries in Apocalyptic exposition—that the real vision connected with the seventh seal is postponed from chapter viii. 1 to chapter xix., whence it goes on to the end of the book—we at once see that the visions of the seals are spread over the whole dispensation, and thus constitute the structural framework of the Book of the Revelation.

As to what they signify: there are two explanations worthy of attention which seem to have the same relation to one another as the two explanations of the Epistles to the Seven Churches already referred to. The one, primary and literal; the other, secondary and mystical. The literal would take the second, third, fourth, and fifth seals as indicating literal wars, famines, pestilences, and persecutions, leading up to the great earthquake of the sixth seal, which, though the final one, might include and sum up all previous earthquakes of the dispensation. This literal view is well put by Godet: "How can we fail, as we study these six pictures (the first six seals) to be reminded of the words of Jesus in the prophecy of Matt. xxiv. 7: 'Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom (second seal): and there shall be famines (third seal), and pestilences (fourth seal), and earthquakes (sixth seal), in divers places'; words to which we must add (ver. 14): 'And this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations' (first seal)? Does not even the fifth seal rest upon these words: 'They shall deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you' (ver. 9)?"

This literal view is generally accepted by futurist expositors, who fully recognise the parallelism between the visions of the seals and our Lord's words in Matt. xxiv., but their system forces them to postpone the wars, famines, &c., to the very end of the dispensation, whereas from our Lord's words in Matt. xxiv., they would seem to be characteristic of the whole period between his First and Second Coming.

If this be the primary and literal view of the visions of the seals, the secondary and mystical view would, like the corresponding secondary and mystical view of the Epistles to the Seven Churches, present a succession of pictures of Church history, from the beginning to the end of the dispensation, and this is just what the older historical successional view of the seals (Vitringa, Cunninghame, Wodehouse) gives us.

The first seal would thus be a sketch of the comparative purity of the early Church for about four centuries. The second seal would give its sad degeneracy, as seen in the next four centuries, when Christians were engaged in the terrible fratricidal strife of the battle of the creeds, and where the sword of civil power was employed for the Church owing to the professed Christianity of its rulers. The third seal carries us on another period of about four centuries, distinguished by the characteristic vice of covetousness and money-making on the part of the Church, symbolised by the balances of the merchant, and also through the age of terrible spiritual darkness, as shown by the colour of the black horse, and by the words which point to a scarcity or famine of the Word of God. The fourth seal would, in its commencement (about A.D. 1200) synchronise with the infernal persecutions which broke out under the Inquisition, and which dealt death and destruction amongst Christ's disciples, and all who would not submit to Roman tyranny

This era of persecution lasted for three or four centuries. Next comes the Reformation, when indications appear of the cries of the martyred saints being heard; but a postponement for a time of final judgment on corrupt Christendom is announced, in the meanwhile they are justified before men ("white robes were given unto them"), raised from being accounted heretics to martyrs, and it is intimated that many other martyrs have yet to join their ranks.

The great earthquake which ushers in the sixth seal may already have given a premonitory shock (as Bickersteth and Birks think) in the horrors of the French Revolution, but that in the main it is future in its mystical as well as in its literal significance seems undeniable. Bickersteth says: "I view the seals as describing the whole Christian dispensation till our Lord's return; and I consider that we are now in the pause of judgment connected with the sixth seal from the withholding of the winds (Rev. vii.)... When the withholding of the winds ceases, it will probably pass to the literal description of visible events connected with the return of our Lord from heaven, as so often brought before us in reference to that event." Chapter vii. is a supplemental episode to the sixth seal, in time probably prior to it.

As to the seventh seal. Its appropriate vision postponed from viii. 1 appears chap. xix., or in the words of Edward Bickersteth: "The emblem of the white horse appears again. The series of the four horsemen as denoting the visible Church in successive stages, after being obscured for a time by its foul degeneracy, breaks forth anew in more than its original glory, when the armies in heaven are seen following the Word of God, clothed in fine linen, clean and white. This latter vision (chap. xix.) really belongs to the time of the seventh seal."

By thus combining the primary or literal with the secondary or mystical interpretation of the seals, we follow in the track already pointed out to us in the Epistles to the Seven Churches, and we avoid the controversy between the Historical and the Futurist Schools on this point, by owning both views as true and important in their own spheres. We only differ from the Futurists in regarding our Lord's prophecy (Matt. xxiv.; Luke xxi.) as descriptive of the characteristic features of the whole dispensation, rather than of a small period at or rather after its close.

These thoughts on Apocalyptic Interpretation are commended to those who, like the writer, believe that what we need at present is a careful consideration and harmonious arrangement of materials which we already possess, rather than a despairing abandonment of a mode of interpretation on which generations of spiritually minded Christians have laboured, and surely not in vain. Futurism is the result of despair at the supposed failure of the Historic system. Is it not better first to see if such despair is really justified? H. E. B.

SNOWDROP BAND.—Mrs. Watson, Southwold, Sheffield, sends to us a copy of a circular from which we gather that these bands are multiplying. Any friends wishing to form local bands can obtain all information from Mrs. Watson.

MARSEILLES.—The hopes of many years are realised; the Blue Star coffee-house, next door to the Seamen's Rest, is opened, and, though but a short time has elapsed, indications are not wanting to show that God is with us in this further effort to benefit some of the multitudes around us. The transformation from the low public-house, where so many of our sailors were constantly entrapped, is a great cause for thankfulness. When it is considered that on the same quay there are no less than sixty-three cafés, so-called, many of which are really drinking-saloons and resorts of abandoned women, the necessity for such a place is evident. Through the liberality of a few friends, the rent for the first year has been supplied, and owing to the kindness of an old and valued contributor a large portion of what was needed for necessary alterations, furnishing, &c., has also been received. £50 are still required to meet the current expenditure, and to cover the first year's salary of the caretaker, a Christian, and well fitted for the post, owing to his knowledge of several languages. Notes and Comments.

NEXT week we hope to give portrait and sketch of the late Mr. James Pascoe, of Mexico.

Mr. W. T. Stead's long-expected book, "The Truth about Russia," is about to be given to the public by Messrs. Cassell & Co. One chapter, entitled, "The Shadow on the Throne," dealing with the persecution of the evangelicals, is likely to cause a great stir in Russian ecclesiastical and Court circles. Our review of the book will follow.

We have received with great regret a tract entitled, "Church Clouds Cleared," by Rev. W. Carlile, of Kensington, founder and hon. secretary of the Church Army." The tract is prefaced by this insufficiently deprecatory note: "The Central Committee and Council of the Church Army will not hold themselves responsible for all the expressions in this pamphlet." Surely it is unwise, both for founder and committee, for the former to issue a document prefaced by a partial disclaimer by the latter.

On Sunday and Monday last Mr. Graham Wilmot Brooke, who has recently returned from his third journey into Africa, addressed meetings in Manchester, setting forth in terrible detail the great needs of the central part of the Dark Continent, and telling of the encouraging results of Christian effort among some of the savage tribes. Profound interest was awakened by some of Mr. Brooke's statements about the sixty million unevangelised negroes of the Soudan, and the millions of inhabitants on the Upper Congo. We have in type a comprehensive résumé by a special correspondent, but owing to pressure on our space we are compelled to hold it over till next week.

We would refer our readers to Mr. Logan's letter from the Australian Bush. The shocking incident he relates of his opium-smoking female fellow-traveller is an instance of the revenge which the Chinese-Australian colonist is taking upon our colonists and their children; corrupting and destroying them with the same accursed drug with which we are corrupting and are destroying his country.

As enemies of the opium traffic, we have more than once missed the flood-tide which would have carried us on to victory. Now a public opinion has to be created which will compel our Government to cast this demon out of our politics. May God raise up some Wilberforce or Clarkson, or both, to raise the conscience of the nation to the point of action.

Public opinion would appear to be gradually ripening as to the necessity of a well-conceived scheme of State-aided emigration as an outlet for our unemployed population. Several boards of guardians (including those of Manchester, Liverpool, and Leeds) have recently petitioned Parliament to set on foot some such system. Though much good work is being done in this direction by existing societies, yet the difficulty of finding funds sufficient to pay the emigrants' passages, and enable them to make a fair start in life when they have arrived, prevents the carrying out of such operations on an adequate scale. A comprehensive scheme of State colonisation would seem to be the true remedy, and it is hoped that success may attend the efforts of the Association of that name, which, under the presidency of Lord Meath, is seeking to secure the co-operation and pecuniary assistance of the Government. The colonies of Canada, West Australia, and Natal have agreed to the proposals of the Colonisation Committees. In New England alone there are said to be twenty thousand farms lying idle, to be had on reasonable terms. There is the land, here are the men. Cannot the State bring the two together?

We greatly regret to hear that a housekeeper in a clergyman's family has been discharged by him because she read, and refused to give up reading, THE CHRISTIAN. Such an intolerant spirit must disqualify anyone possessed by it for "the cure of souls." Many clergymen, of another spirit, are among our constant readers. We hope the faithful Christian housekeeper will soon find a more congenial home in a family able to appreciate her worth.

The publication of the life and letters of Dr. William Fleming Stevenson is an event in the Presbyterian world, and we have no doubt the volume will be very widely read. There is in the work one letter, written to his mother from college, which is singularly appropriate to the period of Christmas, ending, as it does, with a very fitting prayer. We are sure our readers will gladly ponder upon the thoughtful words:—

> I like the festival of Christmas far better than New Year's Day, which is always associated in my mind with gloomy and melancholy thoughts of duties neglected, time misspent and wasted, and such sad statistics as are, I suppose, the results of everyone's retrospect. Be that as it may, I had rather welcome in the birth of Christ than bid farewell to an old year. Dearest mother, you will join me in praying that He may be born in very many hearts during the year that is advancing, and born again in each of ours.

"Family life fell into shadow when the Christian faith was a vivid dynamic reality remoulding the world." This passage, which appears in a recent historico-metaphysical book, is an extraordinary inversion of the actual fact. One of the most fertile sources of the corruption which pervaded the social fabric of the Romans at the time of our Lord's appearance was the facility of divorce, the marriage compact being dissolved at the merest caprice, and from the slightest motive. Christianity lifted all the social and domestic relationships of life into a higher and purer atmosphere, and the marriage tie acquired a significance and a solemnity which were totally unknown throughout the whole range of Paganism.

> Our nomads are in the mud, and our legislature will keep them there unless public opinion goads it to action in the autumn session.

So wrote Mr. George Smith, of Coalville, nearly four months ago. Yet another year of legislation is almost at a close, and Parliament has done nothing to improve the condition of the 30,000 gipsy, van, and other travelling children, for whom Mr. Smith has so long been earnestly pleading and working. His proposed measures are easy and simple: they have the approval of the parents, and schoolmasters and sanitary officers are well disposed towards them. How much longer is this blot to remain upon the escutcheon of a professedly Christian Parliament?

The result of the division in the House of Commons on Friday evening last on English Sunday Closing, though not all that temperance advocates could wish, was as satisfactory, perhaps, as could have been expected. A bare majority of seven in favour of the existing system, indicates a remarkable progress of sentiment throughout the country in favour of making a clean sweep of the deadly traffic, at least on one day of the week. However much we may desire such a consummation, experience proves that Sunday closing, to be successful in our large cities, must be backed up by a prevailing popular agreement in its favour, and it remains for the friends of temperance to proceed still further in the work of educating public opinion so as to turn the scale in securing this greatly needed reform.

The substantial majority in the Commons in favour of Local Option ought to nerve temperance electors in the endeavour to place good and true men and women on the new County Councils. Unfortunately, the licensing question is only one of many, and there is a danger lest it should be shelved by others, less important but more persistently pressed to the front. In our judgment the licensing question will never be satisfactorily dealt with until it is referred for settlement to the popular vote specially taken, either in well-defined localities or over the country at large. We are glad to see that the advocates of national prohibition are bestirring themselves with a view to aggressive action. While pressing their own view, we trust they will not make the fatal mistake of condemning other plans of fighting the trade less drastic than their own.

Another encouraging item in the week's bill of temperance fare, is the unanimous decision on Saturday by the Court of Appeal that a publican's licence only extends, legally, from year to year, and that the licensing authority have unrestricted discretion in the matter of renewals. This decision completely dissipates into thin air the claim of "vested interests" recently raised; it also creates an effectual barrier, we should think, against any further attempt on the part of any British Government to give compensation to the disestablished drinkseller. The year that is closing has thus marked a distinct advance in the solution of this all-pervasive drink problem.

Mr. William Livesey, who appears to be following in his honoured father's footsteps, has recently been expressing an opinion that Ireland cannot well be anything but poor with a drink bill such as she is at present voluntarily contracting and paying. We heartily and sorrowfully agree with him. The Irish drink bill for 1887, according to Mr. Livesey, was considerably in excess of that of 1886, being £11,041,588, as against £10,497,048. Making allowance for the fact that the population in 1887 was 148,797 less than in the previous, these figures are painful to contemplate, pointing as they do to a terrible Irish social question underlying the difficult political one.

After we had gone to press last week we received a telegram from Mr. Dyer, Bombay, asserting that Sir John Gorst's statement in Parliament, with reference to the Patna case, was incorrect, and that he was sending particulars by mail. Seeing that this, and so many other instances of moral outrage on

Let us therefore watch carefully against heart-hardening.—The hardest hearts were soft once, and the softest may get hard. The chalk which now holds the fossil shells was once moist ooze. The hard palm of toil was once full of soft dimples. The murderer once shuddered as he crushed a worm. Judas once was a tender, thoughtful, impressible lad. Take care lest your heart get hard.

Hearts harden gradually, as the freezing of a pond in a frosty night. The process at first can only be detected by the practised eye; then it is a thin film of ice, so slender that a needle or pin would fall through. At length it will sustain a pebble, and if winter still holds unbroken sway, a child, a man, a crowd, a cart may follow. We get hard through the steps of an almost unperceived process.

Hearts harden through the deceitfulness of sin. Are you harbouring sin; anything which is not of faith; anything which others may permit, but about which you constantly feel condemned; some secret habit; some unhallowed friendship; some forbidden pleasure? No apparent hurt has come from it. You have not lost caste in the church. You still lead an active life of philanthropy or Christian endeavour. You argue that you may do with impunity what would ruin others. But, beneath all, you are being hardened. The process of ossification has commenced. It may take years ere the disease will show itself, but ultimately the cancer will spread up into your face, and eat out the sinews of your faith, and you will be driven out into the desert.

Unbare your heart to God. Ask Him to search you, and see if there be any wicked way in you. Open all the secrets of your life to the electric ray of his inspection. Entreat Him to run his ploughshare through any cake of hardness which may have commenced to form on the surface or in the secrets of your soul. And when all known evil is determinedly and prayerfully put away, when the will is entirely surrendered to the will of God, when no part of the nature is shut off from his gracious operation, then unbelief will shrivel and die, and it will become easy to believe.

And, when once faith has begun to return, feed it on promise, nurture it by the light and air of holy fellowship with God, hand over to Him instantly every worry as soon as it impinges on the soul, and receive from Him abundantly grace upon grace; so shall the desert be left for ever, and that rest entered of which we speak more at length in our next.

PRISONERS IN MANCHESTER.

An earnest work of rescue and reclamation is carried on in connection with the Manchester Prison-gate Mission. Miss Macgregor, hon. superintendent of the Yew-tree Cottage, Sale, one of the two Homes for the shelter of weak and depraved women, recently passed away. It seems that the eighth annual report, now before us, left her hands while she was on her death-bed, and her last effort was an appeal for more Homes and more workers. Miss Watson is the hon. superintendent of the Mission House, Manchester.

Some of the careers briefly sketched in the report are sad in the extreme. It would indeed have been a miracle if many of the young people referred to had turned out otherwise than criminals. Born in shame, brought up in wickedness, and inheriting a craving for strong drink, they become social pests and burdens almost from sheer misfortune. Each of the Homes provides accommodation for fourteen women, and both have been more than full during the year. The address of the Mission is 39, Higher Cambridge-steet, Manchester.

THE PRINCESS CHRISTIAN hopes to commence her free dinners for the children of Windsor poor early in the New Year.

DR. GUINNESS IN EDINBURGH.

We have enjoyed a season of blessing here in connection with the visit of Dr. H. Grattan Guinness. The mission had been the subject of much prayer, and was awaited by many with great interest. Dr. Guinness directed himself more specially to men, although the majority of his meetings were open to both sexes. Nearly all were held within the hallowed precincts of the Free Assembly Hall. It is impossible to give any adequate idea of results, but for what we have seen and heard we have indeed reason to praise God. The hearty co-operation and prayerful sympathy of the great majority of Christian workers in Edinburgh, especially those connected with the Y.M.C.A.; the Carrubber's Close Mission, and kindred agencies was secured from the outset.

The first meeting was a "Medical Talk" to men only, when the spacious hall was filled. There could be but one opinion as to the powerful way in which the speaker handled his subject; pressing home the stern reality of the Scripture warning, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." The evangelistic services that followed have each and all been fraught with streams of blessing to thirsty souls. The names and addresses were taken of over two hundred, who professed to have found Christ, or, at least, to have been deeply impressed. Many workers were kept busy till after ten o'clock every night. The Sabbath evenings were truly marked by "showers of blessing."

At the second "Medical Talk," the hall was more than overcrowded. The previous lecture had already been discussed widely, and had caused a stir of heart and conscience, which in many cases has resulted in true conversion to God. The second lecture assuredly confirmed and deepened the impressions already made in others. By his impassioned, fearless, and yet loving way of dealing with God's message, Dr. Guinness has ingratiated himself with all who heard him.

On Tuesday evening, last week, the Moncrieff Hall was filled with those who had gathered by invitation to meet the evangelist over a cup of tea. All present professed to have received blessing, and many interesting testimonies were given to the reality of the blessing bestowed. The last evening of the mission was devoted to a missionary address, when Dr. Guinness told of his father's work in East London, and of the five hundred men and women who have gone forth from the East London Institute to the ever-deepening fields of Central Africa and other parts of the world.

JEWS IN THE HOLY LAND.—Representative Hebrews in England, France, and Germany have founded a "Palestine Aid Society" for the promotion of industry and self-dependence in the Holy Land. From an appeal they have issued, appropriately headed, "For Zion's Sake," it appears that the movement is eminently practical in character, its definite object being to help needy Jews to help themselves. Frankfort-on-the-Maine is the centre of operations of the Society, of which Dr. Hildesheimer is the president.

INDIAN HOME MISSION TO THE SANTHALS.—During the past year the many earnest workers of this Mission had occasions for sorrow as well as for rejoicing. There has been marked progress in many directions, in the Assam colony as well as among the Santhals themselves. The twenty-first annual report, just published, contains many interesting details. Incidentally there is a reference to the liberality of the Santhal Christians. Even the children of the Mission school lay by some rice daily, in order to be able to contribute to the collection on Sundays. To assist these warm-hearted people is simply to help those who help themselves. Mr. W. L. Watson, 7, Wetherby-gardens, South Kensington, S.W., is the treasurer for the London committee.

FAITH, HOPE, LOVE.

Three pearls of priceless value once were sent,
A gift from heaven. [for this
Wilt thou not take and keep them? 'Twas
That they were given.
Hide thou the first pearl, Faith, within thy
For trust should be [heart,
Not seen alone, but lived—a link between
Thy God and thee.
And let the second, Hope, adorn thy brow;
So that its light
May shine afar, to guide some traveller on
Through a dark night.
The pearl of Love; oh! keep it in thy hand,
'Twas meant for use.
And then for lack of generous gifts thou wilt
Have no excuse;
Open thy hand and let its lustre shine
In kindly deeds;
This pearl will larger grow as it is used
For others' needs.

EVANGELISING IN THE KAUKASUS.

I have just returned from a three weeks' expedition in the Kaukasus, having spent a week at Baku, then at Schemachah, and lastly at Schuschah, chiefly with the Armenians, who in these places have free churches, and who labour with much zeal and acceptance, both among Armenians and Tatars. The Lord has indeed been very gracious to us, granting special journeying mercies, and giving an entrance in power to his word. The fellowship with the few sheep in the desert places is very precious. The Lord gives springs of living water in the solitary, neglected parts of the earth, even as in the most desert and desolate portion of Transkaukasia there are springs of oil gushing forth.

The work in the prisons is sad and sorrowful, yet it is a great privilege to be permitted in the name of the Lord to preach "liberty to the captives," and to place within hands that are chained the word of life and liberty. In the places which I have lately visited the prisons are mostly filled by Tatars, of whom very few are able to read, and who are kept without occupation of any kind. Yet they have ears to hear, and they eagerly listen to the word spoken, even though it has to be conveyed by interpreters. Many of the governors of the prisons are very kind and most helpful, and altogether the work is encouraging. I would lay claim to the prayers of the Lord's servants at home that the seed sown may be made fruitful.

I hope to visit Kars, Alexandropol, Eriwan, Kutaïs, Batoum shortly, and after that I may once more go to Baku before I leave Transkaukasia. My address will be for some weeks yet, Hotel London, Tiflis, Transkaukasia.

COUNT CAMPELLO'S MISSION.—The Ladies' Italian Church Reform Association, in aid of Count Campello's mission work in Umbria and other parts of Italy, has issued its first annual report, with which are stitched some interesting "Words on Catholic Reform in Italy." Under God's blessing much has been already done, and the plans for extending the work seem to be very well devised. Copies of the report may be obtained from Miss Mayor, 20, Manor-place, Paddington-green, London, W.

HOMES FOR LITTLE BOYS.—A circular has been issued on behalf of the well-known institutions at Farningham and Swanley, stating that a special Christmas fund has been opened, not only to meet pressing claims, but to make it possible to re-open two of the houses at Farningham which are now closed for want of funds. With these houses re-opened, many pitiful cases could be admitted. The committee have made themselves responsible for five hundred orphan lads, who are being brought up in the fear of God. The secretary is Mr. B. Clarke, Bank-buildings, Ludgate-circus, E.C.

ORPHANS AT BAGSHOT.

An Earnest Appeal is made on behalf of the 220 DESTITUTE ORPHAN CHILDREN who are now being Clothed, Fed, and Educated at the ROYAL ALBERT ORPHAN ASYLUM at BAGSHOT. The Institution is conducted on strictly non-canvassing principles, so that only the most needy and deserving are admitted. In addition to a simple religious and secular education, the children are trained as Carpenters, Tailors, Shoemakers, Bakers, Gardeners, Farm Servants, Domestic Servants, Laundry Maids, Needlewomen, &c.; so that boys and girls are alike fitted, on leaving the Institution, immediately to earn their own living.

The Committee of Management make a MOST EARNEST APPEAL to the readers of "THE CHRISTIAN" to help them in this very practical work of charity. They feel assured that it is one of the few working examples showing how the poorer classes of orphan children at the present day can be brought up, both morally and physically, so as to fight the battle of life, and become good members of society. An article appeared in "The Christian" of Nov. 30 describing in detail the working of the Institution.

Donations, but especially Annual Subscriptions, are much wanted, and any amounts forwarded to the Secretary, Mr. Richard Witherby, 62, King William-street, London, E.C., or to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, will be thankfully received.

THE SICK, SUFFERING & DESTITUTE POOR.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY is in URGENT NEED of DONATIONS for AID to the POOR by TICKETS for Coal, Bread, Lodgings, &c., which are available all over London and Suburbs; also for its Convalescent Homes at Bournemouth and Sandgate.

The following few testimonies freely accorded in

from workers, will indicate in some degree the nature and extent of this department of the work :—

"The Bishop of Bedford (How) begs me to convey to you his warmest thanks for the most liberal grant of coal and bread tickets which he has received from the London Samaritan Society."

"We have received your valuable gift of tickets, with cordial gratitude on behalf of the poor of this parish.—Sincerely yours, A. B."

"I am very much obliged for the generous gift of tickets, which will relieve me of some perplexity under the constant applications for help.—Yours very truly, F. R. B."

"A thousand thanks for your most kind and generous gift of tickets for our thousands of poor. I am deeply obliged to you on their behalf. Wishing you much success and blessing in your good work, very truly yours, W. N. L.

"I have to thank you very much for the tickets for coal and bread which you have been kind enough to send me for our people. They will be most useful, as we have great need.—Yours faithfully, W.M.C."

"I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kindness in sending us some of your tickets; they will be much valued by our poor. With kind regards and many thanks, faithfully yours, F. H. A. H.

"Mrs. P. desires me to send her very warm thanks for the tickets you have so kindly sent her. They are most acceptable, for the distress amongst the deserving poor is great, as you know, and the Deaconesses meet with multitudes of sad cases amongst the thousands of people who are under their care."

Donations for the General Relief Work of the Society, by means of Tickets for Coal, Bread, Grocery, Provisions, Cocoa and Bread, Lodgings, &c., will be thankfully received by the Director—

young women in India of tender age, are the direct outcome of the system of child-marriage, we read with pleasure in The Times' Calcutta correspondence, of Monday last, that that system, "the root of most of the miseries in Hindoo social life, is severely condemned by a large section of the Hindoo community." We trust that "condemnation" will speedily be followed by abolition.

> The prevailing craze for cheapness is undoubtedly the source of sweating in every possible form.

So Mr. Lakeman, one of the Metropolitan Factory Inspectors, tells the Select Committee. These words, coming from so practical an authority, show that not a little of the responsibility for the present sad state of things in the East-end workshops rests with those who, either in thoughtlessness or in ignorance of the sad hardship and misery to others which may result from their action, are so eager in the pursuit of "bargains."

The general tenour of Mr. Lakeman's evidence goes to show that a remedy for some of the present evils is to be sought in the direction often indicated in these columns, viz., that the number and powers of the inspectors require to be largely increased and extended, and that the workrooms in private dwellings should be brought within the scope of the Factory Acts. He also emphatically condemns the practice of overtime, which he attributes, in part, to the very late hours kept by the London girls, who, consequently, do not commence work until ten o'clock in the morning. Much credit is also stated to be due to the Jewish Board of Guardians for having checked the influx of foreign pauper emigrants.

Many of the guardians who met at Exeter Hall the other day from all parts of the country to discuss the kindred questions of thrift and Poor Law administration, appear to have been strongly opposed to out-door relief, and to have insisted upon "the house" being the proper remedy for pauperism. Medical and clerical opinion, however, went in favour of a wise application of both indoor and outdoor relief, and it is difficult to see why there should be objection to either on the part of guardians. It is evident from the strong repugnance which respectable people overtaken by poverty evince towards the shelter of the workhouse that the place is not regarded as a refuge, but as a prison or penitentiary. If there is to be an agitation against the giving of outdoor relief, as would seem to be foreshadowed, Christian ratepayers should see to it that the proposed form of relief deserves the name of charity, and that it has not in it elements of punishment for what, in most cases, is misfortune, and not guilt.

The Catholic Household, in taking exception to our recent comments with regard to the publication by a Roman Catholic firm of a large edition of the New Testament, asserts that our statements are "utterly false." It adds that "no permission, written or otherwise, is required for a Catholic Bible to be in any Catholic household; and the remark about our 'not receiving absolution' is sheer childish nonsense."

If such be the case, we are glad to learn it; but we should like to draw attention to the fourth rule of the Index, which says that, "as it is manifest from experience that, if the Holy Bible, translated into the vulgar tongue, be indiscriminately allowed to everyone, the temerity of men will cause more evil than good to arise from it," permission to read it shall only be given "to those persons whose faith and piety...will be augmented, and not injured by it. In these cases the permission must be in writing." The rule goes on to lay down that, if anyone shall "have the presumption" to read or possess it without such permission, he shall not receive absolution "until he shall have first delivered up the Bible to the ordinary."

When, a few years ago, one of the Roman Catholic Synods expressed an opinion that learned men should be entrusted with the task of providing a new version of the Holy Scriptures, they ordered that care should be taken "to observe the rules of the Index as to the permission and approbation for its perusal." That decree was given in "The Synods in English," published in 1886, under the imprimatur of Bishop Hedley, of Newport, and if it has been recanted we shall be glad if our contemporary will inform us when and where.

An excellent paper on Patience appeared lately in The Spectator, wherein it was said that this grace involves faith, hope, and humility, and transforms silent endurance into a power of a new life to the character. The Greeks would have been unfitted to be the nation from whom Christ came. They had no genius for patience: there has, however, never been a higher kind of patience than that which breathes through the sacred literature of the Jews. Let us recall these facts at this Christmas time. The Jews waited for a Messiah, whose glorious reign filled their thoughts, and illuminated their whole history. And yet Isaiah taught that before He became a deliverer He would come as a sufferer. The blighting of their expectation was to be the prelude of their brightest hope.

This time of the First Advent should teach us Gentiles the same lesson of enduring, hopeful patience. The more our complete expectation is delayed, the more should our self-will die, the more should we reverence the Divine wisdom in its evolving purposes, and the brighter should be our expectation of the glory to be revealed at the Second Advent. Jesus said to his disciples concerning the prolongation of their time of waiting, and of suffering, "In your patience ye shall win your souls" (R.V.). Your patience will be the grace that "makes your true selves," and will go to form the sanctified character that will be your preparation for the coming songs of joy.

The particulars that come to us of the Durbar, at Calcutta, when the Marchioness of Dufferin held a reception of seven hundred native ladies of the Indian capital, marks an epoch of progress. That these jealously guarded ladies should have come out of their seclusion for the purpose of expressing their interest in the system the Marchioness has done so much to develop, on behalf of medical help for the women and girls of India, may surely be held to be an evidence of the influence of Zenana work, and of the first open manifestation, spite of the exclusion of men from the scene, of the desire of native ladies to take the place our Christian religion claims for them, and to help forward the amelioration of the women of their country.

Some of Canon Liddon's utterances on missions in St. Paul's Cathedral, last Sunday, were very timely and practical. He showed the need of servants of the Lord Jesus Christ, and especially of missionaries, learning both "to labour and to wait." Pointing to the absence of haste in all truly great and lasting works of man, he argued that the present-day, feverish impatience, which insists upon the commercial principle of so many converts for a certain outlay in a given time, is quite contrary to the mind and Word of the Great Head of the Church. The Canon also instanced the slow progress (from a human point of view) of the Redeemer's kingdom during the past centuries, and emphasised the much-needed exhortation at this juncture of "patient continuance in well-doing."

MR. SANKEY IN THE MIDLANDS.

ONE can scarcely say that the mantle of Mr. Moody has fallen upon Mr. Sankey, for that might seem to imply that Mr. Moody was retiring from work; but while he is carrying the Gospel into British Columbia, and upon the Pacific Coast of America, where there are no buildings of sufficient size for them to be working together, Mr. Sankey is embracing the opportunity of a tour in this country, of which many towns and cities are gladly taking advantage.

An immense concourse of people gathered in the Drill Hall at Hemel Hempstead, on Tuesday evening of last week, the meeting having been arranged by Mr. Dudley H. Ryder. The vicar, Rev. Dr. Robbins, presided. He had heard Mr. Sankey sing and Mr. Moody preach many years ago at the Agricultural Hall in London, and he thought, when asked to preside on this occasion, "Since God has been pleased to acknowledge Mr. Sankey's work in bringing souls to Himself, who am I, that I should resist God?"

Mr. Sankey spent last Sunday and Monday at Nottingham, speaking and singing on Sunday morning at the Tabernacle (Rev. H. E. Stone), and in the afternoon and evening at the Albert Hall. In addition to this, there was a large meeting for women in the afternoon, and a still larger overflow meeting at night. Altogether he took part in six services, and on Monday evening conducted a large united service at the Tabernacle.

The remark at the head of this letter is made in view of the power and unction which were evidenced on all these occasions. Mr. Sankey's years of experience with Mr. Moody have afforded him a great store of anecdote and incident, with which he enforces the truths of the Gospel. I have seldom been at meetings marked by more fervour without excitement, and solemnity without sensation. Numbers of men and women on each occasion rose for prayer. In the afternoon, while this was going on, in a meeting composed almost entirely of men, a voice broke out in earnest prayer, from which we learned that a patriarch of eighty-eight years was pouring out his heart to God, declaring His goodness, and his own readiness to be with Him whenever he was called. It had an evident influence for good on the assembly.

Many incidents of a deeply interesting character have occurred, which are too personal to be detailed in print; thus reports of all such meetings only show the external results, the inmost life of them cannot be recorded.

The Pleasant Sunday Afternoons at the Albert Hall, the chief labour of which falls on Mr. Robert Mellors, is a movement of great interest, to which we have already referred, and of which more remains to be said.

R. C. MORGAN.

The Epistle to the Hebrews.

By Rev. F. B. MEYER, B.A., Regent's Park Chapel.

IX.—THE WILDERNESS OF UNBELIEF.

Hebrews iii.

The contrast between the third and fourth chapters of this Epistle is very marked. The former is like a drear November day, when everything is drenched in rain, and the rotting leaves fall in showers to find a grave upon the damp and muddy soil. The latter is like a still, clear day in midsummer, when nature revels in reposeful bliss beneath the unstinted caresses of the sun.

But each chapter represents an experience of the inner Christian life. Perhaps the majority of Christians live and die in the third chapter, to their infinite loss; comparatively few pass over into the fourth. Yet why, reader, should you not pass the boundary line to-day, and leave behind for ever the bitter, unsatisfying experiences which have become the normal rule of your existence? Come up out of the wilderness, leaning upon your Beloved. The wilderness is the result, not of God's appointment, or of your untoward circumstances, but of your unbelief. God is able, but you refuse to trust Him.

I. The Wilderness.—Never did a nation occupy a prouder position than the children of Israel on the morning when they stood victorious on the shores of the Red Sea. The power of the tyrant had been broken by a series of marvellous miracles. The chivalry of Egypt had sunk as lead in the mighty waters of death. And as the sun rose behind the mountains of Edom and struck a flashing pathway across the burnished mirror of the sea, it revealed long rows of corpses lining the water-edge. Behind, Egypt left for ever. Above, the fleecy cloud, chariot of God, symbol of his presence. Before, the land of promise. Many a man was already dreaming of vineyards, and oliveyards, and homes, within two or three months' easy march.

But of those 600,000 men, flushed with victory and hope, two only were destined to see the land flowing with milk and honey; and these not until forty weary years had slowly passed away. And what became of all the rest? Alas! their carcases fell in the wilderness. Instead of lying in some family burying-place, their bodies were taken up one by one and laid in some nameless grave, on the desert expanse of sand. It took forty years for them all to die; and even then there must have been many deaths and funerals a day. How dreary that heavy death-rate! How sad those constant sounds of Oriental grief ringing through the camp! What wonder that Ps. xc., written among such scenes, is so inexpressibly sad!

And yet the counterpart is to be found all around us. How few Christians seem really satisfied. How many are the victims of murmuring and discontent; or are bitten by the fiery scorpions of jealousy and passion, of hatred and ill-will. The almost universal experience is of broken vows and blighted hopes; of purposeless wanderings; of a monotony of failure. The tent is often struck only to be pitched again in much the same spot. The horizon of the desert waste is never broken by glimpses of the hills, and vales, and verdant plains. Life passes away amid fret, and chafing disappointment, and weariness of existence.

Very little things are in some cases not less the cause than greater ones. Annoyances from domestic servants and business employés; the irritable temper of some invalid or relative with whom we are obliged to live; the worry of the details of daily business; the flitting, buzzing swarm of minute anxieties; all these, when we have not learnt God's secret, will keep us on the weary tramp over sands as arid and exhausting as those trodden by the hosts of Israel. Come, now, will you not confess that this is an unexaggerated picture of your own life?

II. The Cause.—"An evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God." The first outbreak was in the wilderness of Sin (Exod. xvi.). There was no bread. The provisions hastily brought from Egypt were consumed. There was no organised commissariat. To the eye of sense, no doubt, the matter was desperate, and the murmurings of the people filled the air, as they loudly cried for the full flesh-pots of Egypt.

The second outbreak was at Rephidim (Exod. xvii.).—There was no water. The scanty desert brooks were heaps of scorching stones, and not a leaf of vegetation trembled in the burning sunshine. And again the sullen sounds of discontent were heard, as the people muttered their belief that they had been brought out of Egypt to perish there.

But the most serious outbreak occurred shortly after they left Sinai (Num. xiii.).—The green hills of Palestine at last appeared in view, and spies were sent forward to search the land. When they returned, the effect of the luscious fruit they brought was annulled by the serious reports of the warlike character of the people. "The people be strong that dwell in the land, and the cities are walled and very great." "And all the congregation lifted up their voice, and cried: and the people wept that night. And all the children of Israel murmured against Moses and against Aaron, and said, Would God we had died in the land of Egypt" (See also Ps. cvi. 12, &c.). And these murmurings were the evidence and outcome of their unbelief. They tempted and proved God (ver. 9). They grieved Him, erred in their heart, and refused to know his ways (ver. 10). There was in them an evil heart of unbelief, which made them depart from the living God (ver. 12). This was the root of the mischief, and brought on them their unutterable woes. They looked at God through the haze of difficulty, instead of looking at difficulty through the transforming light of God. They forgot the reiterated promise of God to give them the land of Canaan—a promise which clearly pledged Him to bear all the responsibility of bringing them there. They did not deny the miracles of the past, but they failed to see that each of these only more clearly and distinctly bound Him to bear them, as on eagle's wings, to their appointed abiding-place. "Behold, He smote the rock that the waters gushed out, and the streams overflowed. Can He give bread also? Can He provide flesh for his people? Therefore the Lord was wroth, because they believed not in God, and trusted not in his salvation."

Some people gather strong confidence in God as they recall the history of his past dealings with them. Faith grows strong as she tells the narrative of the wondrous past. Did He not help in six troubles, and will He desert in the seventh? Did He heal the body from some sore disease, and will He not clothe and feed it? Has He commenced, and can He not accomplish? If He gave his Son, will He withhold aught that is good? If, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, shall we not now be saved by his life?

Each sweet Ebenezer we have in review,
Confirms his good pleasure to help us quite through.

Others fail to reason thus. They do not use the key of promise to unlock the wards of daily difficulty and care. They have short memories of the past. Present difficulty blinds them to the help received in many an hour of need. They put circumstances between them and God; instead of God between them and circumstances. They dare to trust Christ to save them from hell, but not from daily besetting sin. They believe in Him, but do not know what it is to keep handing over to Him each worry, fret, and anxiety, as it arises—passing them into his wise and watchful care, assured that He will deal with them, whilst the soul lodges in his goodness (Ps. xxv. 13, margin), and drinks deep draughts of the river of his pleasures.

You were happy in childhood; there is a bright background to your life; fed, clothed, loved, cradled in all comfort. But dear ones have passed away. You are face to face with stern realities, and your heart fails for fear as possibilities of evil loom, weird and indistinct, in the future. Are you not in the wilderness of the soul?

You have stepped forth on some new enterprise, at the manifest bidding of God, and now suddenly the fury of a storm has broken about you, and threatens you with utter destruction, You are beginning to lose head and heart. Forgetful of all the marvellous past, regardless of the evident Providence which has forced you forward, considering only the difficulties and dangers of your path, you have almost relinquished prayer. Are you not in the wilderness of the soul?

Unbelief departs from God.—It severs the gracious connection between the child and its Father. It chokes the channel of supply between the creature and the Creator. It forsakes the fountain of living water, and hews out for itself a cistern, which can hold none. It resorts to its own plannings and strivings, instead of rolling its burden on the Lord. Ah, bitter, bitter is the lot of those who wander throughout the best years of their lives in the waterless, trackless waste, and all because of unbelief. "We see that they could not enter in because of unbelief" (ver. 19).

III. The Cure for Unbelief.—We must trace it to its source, and we shall find that it is not in the head but in the heart. "An evil heart of unbelief." More scepticism may be traced to a neglected prayer-closet, than to all the halls of infidels or secularists. First, men depart from God, then they disbelieve Him. Sometimes, no doubt, it becomes us to remove intellectual difficulties, which, like the stone on the grave of Lazarus, obstruct the resurrection of the soul. But for the most part unbelief does not yield to clever sermons on the evidences of Christianity, but to home-thrusts that pierce through the joints of the harness to the soul within. "Men do not like to retain God in their knowledge." The mischief is in the will. A hard heart is an unbelieving heart. "Harden not your hearts" (ver. 15).

Let us therefore watch carefully against heart-hardening.—The hardest hearts were soft once, and the softest may get hard. The chalk which now holds the fossil shells was once moist ooze. The hard palm of toil was once full of soft dimples. The murderer once shuddered as he crushed a worm. Judas once was a tender, thoughtful, impressible lad. Take care lest your heart get hard.

Hearts harden gradually, as the freezing of a pond in a frosty night. The process at first can only be detected by the practised eye; then it is a thin film of ice, so slender that a needle or pin would fall through. At length it will sustain a pebble, and if winter still holds unbroken sway, a child, a man, a crowd, a cart may follow. We get hard through the steps of an almost unperceived process.

Hearts harden through the deceitfulness of sin. Are you harbouring sin; anything which is not of faith; anything which others may permit, but about which you constantly feel condemned; some secret habit; some unhallowed friendship; some forbidden pleasure? No apparent hurt has come from it. You have not lost caste in the church. You still lead an active life of philanthropy or Christian endeavour. You argue that you may do with impunity what would ruin others. But, beneath all, you are being hardened. The process of ossification has commenced. It may take years ere the disease will show itself, but ultimately the cancer will spread up into your face, and eat out the sinews of your faith, and you will be driven out into the desert.

Unbare your heart to God. Ask Him to search you, and see if there be any wicked way in you. Open all the secrets of your life to the electric ray of his inspection. Entreat Him to run his ploughshare through any cake of hardness which may have commenced to form on the surface or in the secrets of your soul. And when all known evil is determinedly and prayerfully put away, when the will is entirely surrendered to the will of God, when no part of the nature is shut off from his gracious operation, then unbelief will shrivel and die, and it will become easy to believe.

And, when once faith has begun to return, feed it on promise, nurture it by the light and air of holy fellowship with God, hand over to Him instantly every worry as soon as it impinges on the soul, and receive from Him abundantly grace upon grace; so shall the desert be left for ever, and that rest entered of which we speak more at length in our next.

PRISONERS IN MANCHESTER.

An earnest work of rescue and reclamation is carried on in connection with the Manchester Prison-gate Mission. Miss Macgregor, hon. superintendent of the Yew-tree Cottage, Sale, one of the two Homes for the shelter of weak and depraved women, recently passed away. It seems that the eighth annual report, now before us, left her hands while she was on her death-bed, and her last effort was an appeal for more Homes and more workers. Miss Watson is the hon. superintendent of the Mission House, Manchester.

Some of the careers briefly sketched in the report are sad in the extreme. It would indeed have been a miracle if many of the young people referred to had turned out otherwise than criminals. Born in shame, brought up in wickedness, and inheriting a craving for strong drink, they become social pests and burdens almost from sheer misfortune. Each of the Homes provides accommodation for fourteen women, and both have been more than full during the year. The address of the Mission is 39, Higher Cambridge-steet, Manchester.

THE PRINCESS CHRISTIAN hopes to commence her free dinners for the children of Windsor poor early in the New Year.

DR. GUINNESS IN EDINBURGH.

We have enjoyed a season of blessing here in connection with the visit of Dr. H. Grattan Guinness. The mission had been the subject of much prayer, and was awaited by many with great interest. Dr. Guinness directed himself more specially to men, although the majority of his meetings were open to both sexes. Nearly all were held within the hallowed precincts of the Free Assembly Hall. It is impossible to give any adequate idea of results, but for what we have seen and heard we have indeed reason to praise God. The hearty co-operation and prayerful sympathy of the great majority of Christian workers in Edinburgh, especially those connected with the Y.M.C.A.; the Carrubber's Close Mission, and kindred agencies was secured from the outset.

The first meeting was a "Medical Talk" to men only, when the spacious hall was filled. There could be but one opinion as to the powerful way in which the speaker handled his subject; pressing home the stern reality of the Scripture warning, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." The evangelistic services that followed have each and all been fraught with streams of blessing to thirsty souls. The names and addresses were taken of over two hundred, who professed to have found Christ, or, at least, to have been deeply impressed. Many workers were kept busy till after ten o'clock every night. The Sabbath evenings were truly marked by "showers of blessing."

At the second "Medical Talk," the hall was more than overcrowded. The previous lecture had already been discussed widely, and had caused a stir of heart and conscience, which in many cases has resulted in true conversion to God. The second lecture assuredly confirmed and deepened the impressions already made in others. By his impassioned, fearless, and yet loving way of dealing with God's message, Dr. Guinness has ingratiated himself with all who heard him.

On Tuesday evening, last week, the Moncrieff Hall was filled with those who had gathered by invitation to meet the evangelist over a cup of tea. All present professed to have received blessing, and many interesting testimonies were given to the reality of the blessing bestowed. The last evening of the mission was devoted to a missionary address, when Dr. Guinness told of his father's work in East London, and of the five hundred men and women who have gone forth from the East London Institute to the ever-deepening fields of Central Africa and other parts of the world.

Convener of Sub-Committee.
A. J. Copplestone, Superintendent.

JEWS IN THE HOLY LAND.—Representative Hebrews in England, France, and Germany have founded a "Palestine Aid Society" for the promotion of industry and self-dependence in the Holy Land. From an appeal they have issued, appropriately headed, "For Zion's Sake," it appears that the movement is eminently practical in character, its definite object being to help needy Jews to help themselves. Frankfort-on-the-Maine is the centre of operations of the Society, of which Dr. Hildesheimer is the president.

INDIAN HOME MISSION TO THE SANTHALS.—During the past year the many earnest workers of this Mission had occasions for sorrow as well as for rejoicing. There has been marked progress in many directions, in the Assam colony as well as among the Santhals themselves. The twenty-first annual report, just published, contains many interesting details. Incidentally there is a reference to the liberality of the Santhal Christians. Even the children of the Mission school lay by some rice daily, in order to be able to contribute to the collection on Sundays. To assist these warm-hearted people is simply to help those who help themselves. Mr. W. L. Watson, 7, Wetherby-gardens, South Kensington, S.W., is the treasurer for the London committee.

FAITH, HOPE, LOVE.

Three pearls of priceless value once were sent,
A gift from heaven. [for this
Wilt thou not take and keep them? 'Twas
That they were given.
Hide thou the first pearl, Faith, within thy
For trust should be [heart,
Not seen alone, but lived—a link between
Thy God and thee.
And let the second, Hope, adorn thy brow;
So that its light
May shine afar, to guide some traveller on
Through a dark night.
The pearl of Love; oh! keep it in thy hand,
'Twas meant for use.
And then for lack of generous gifts thou wilt
Have no excuse;
Open thy hand and let its lustre shine
In kindly deeds;
This pearl will larger grow as it is used
For others' needs.

EVANGELISING IN THE KAUKASUS.

I have just returned from a three weeks' expedition in the Kaukasus, having spent a week at Baku, then at Schemachah, and lastly at Schuschah, chiefly with the Armenians, who in these places have free churches, and who labour with much zeal and acceptance, both among Armenians and Tatars. The Lord has indeed been very gracious to us, granting special journeying mercies, and giving an entrance in power to his word. The fellowship with the few sheep in the desert places is very precious. The Lord gives springs of living water in the solitary, neglected parts of the earth, even as in the most desert and desolate portion of Transkaukasia there are springs of oil gushing forth.

The work in the prisons is sad and sorrowful, yet it is a great privilege to be permitted in the name of the Lord to preach "liberty to the captives," and to place within hands that are chained the word of life and liberty. In the places which I have lately visited the prisons are mostly filled by Tatars, of whom very few are able to read, and who are kept without occupation of any kind. Yet they have ears to hear, and they eagerly listen to the word spoken, even though it has to be conveyed by interpreters. Many of the governors of the prisons are very kind and most helpful, and altogether the work is encouraging. I would lay claim to the prayers of the Lord's servants at home that the seed sown may be made fruitful.

I hope to visit Kars, Alexandropol, Eriwan, Kutaïs, Batoum shortly, and after that I may once more go to Baku before I leave Transkaukasia. My address will be for some weeks yet, Hotel London, Tiflis, Transkaukasia.

COUNT CAMPELLO'S MISSION.—The Ladies' Italian Church Reform Association, in aid of Count Campello's mission work in Umbria and other parts of Italy, has issued its first annual report, with which are stitched some interesting "Words on Catholic Reform in Italy." Under God's blessing much has been already done, and the plans for extending the work seem to be very well devised. Copies of the report may be obtained from Miss Mayor, 20, Manor-place, Paddington-green, London, W.

HOMES FOR LITTLE BOYS.—A circular has been issued on behalf of the well-known institutions at Farningham and Swanley, stating that a special Christmas fund has been opened, not only to meet pressing claims, but to make it possible to re-open two of the houses at Farningham which are now closed for want of funds. With these houses re-opened, many pitiful cases could be admitted. The committee have made themselves responsible for five hundred orphan lads, who are being brought up in the fear of God. The secretary is Mr. B. Clarke, Bank-buildings, Ludgate-circus, E.C.

ORPHANS AT BAGSHOT.

An Earnest Appeal is made on behalf of the 220 DESTITUTE ORPHAN CHILDREN who are now being Clothed, Fed, and Educated at the ROYAL ALBERT ORPHAN ASYLUM at BAGSHOT. The Institution is conducted on strictly non-canvassing principles, so that only the most needy and deserving are admitted. In addition to a simple religious and secular education, the children are trained as Carpenters, Tailors, Shoemakers, Bakers, Gardeners, Farm Servants, Domestic Servants, Laundry Maids, Needlewomen, &c.; so that boys and girls are alike fitted, on leaving the Institution, immediately to earn their own living.

The Committee of Management make a MOST EARNEST APPEAL to the readers of "THE CHRISTIAN" to help them in this very practical work of charity. They feel assured that it is one of the few working examples showing how the poorer classes of orphan children at the present day can be brought up, both morally and physically, so as to fight the battle of life, and become good members of society. An article appeared in "The Christian" of Nov. 30 describing in detail the working of the Institution.

Donations, but especially Annual Subscriptions, are much wanted, and any amounts forwarded to the Secretary, Mr. Richard Witherby, 62, King William-street, London, E.C., or to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, will be thankfully received.

THE SICK, SUFFERING & DESTITUTE POOR.

THE LONDON SAMARITAN SOCIETY is in URGENT NEED of DONATIONS for AID to the POOR by TICKETS for Coal, Bread, Lodgings, &c., which are available all over London and Suburbs; also for its Convalescent Homes at Bournemouth and Sandgate.

The following few testimonies freely accorded in

from workers, will indicate in some degree the nature and extent of this department of the work:—

"The Bishop of Bedford (How) begs me to convey to you his warmest thanks for the most liberal grant of coal and bread tickets which he has received from the London Samaritan Society."

"We have received your valuable gift of tickets, with cordial gratitude on behalf of the poor of this parish.—Sincerely yours, A. B."

"I am very much obliged for the generous gift of tickets, which will relieve me of some perplexity under the constant applications for help.—Yours very truly, F. R. B."

"A thousand thanks for your most kind and generous gift of tickets for our thousands of poor. I am deeply obliged to you on their behalf. Wishing you much success and blessing in your good work, very truly yours, W. N. L.

"I have to thank you very much for the tickets for coal and bread which you have been kind enough to send me for our people. They will be most useful, as we have great need.—Yours faithfully, W.M.C."

"I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kindness in sending us some of your tickets; they will be much valued by our poor. With kind regards and many thanks, faithfully yours, F. H. A. H.

"Mrs. P. desires me to send her very warm thanks for the tickets you have so kindly sent her. They are most acceptable, for the distress amongst the deserving poor is great, as you know, and the Deaconesses meet with multitudes of sad cases amongst the thousands of people who are under their care."

Donations for the General Relief Work of the Society, by means of Tickets for Coal, Bread, Grocery, Provisions, Cocoa and Bread, Lodgings, &c., will be thankfully received by the Director—

ALL-NIGHT RESCUE WORK.

ALREADY 20,000 poor Homeless and Starving Men have been gathered from the streets in the dead of night, Sheltered, Fed, and otherwise assisted, with most gratifying results.

This season has commenced with more than usual severity. Hundreds of poor men have been gathered in, and their need supplied, while scores have been turned away, for want of room, in the most destitute condition.

The continuance of this much-needed work must depend upon the liberality of those having the means to support it. Contributions will be gratefully received by the SECRETARY; or Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or by the EDITORS of "THE CHRISTIAN."

Never before in the history of the Mission has so much been accomplished. To God be all the glory!

The work has been, and they hope it will ever be, essentially a quiet work, but they venture to believe it has been none the less real. "Jesus only" is the keynote of every effort of the Thames Church Mission.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.

CASE of a YOUNG LADY in the UNITED STATES—Miss M. E. MORGAN.

Two years exactly from the time I write (Nov., 1888) I received a letter from Mrs. Robert Alexander, of 4, Mandeville-street, Utica, New York State, U.S.A., relative to a young lady under her care (Miss M. E. Morgan). This letter requested me to send out at once a large case of medicine, with such instructions and advice as I might think needed.

Consumption had been very fatal in the family, her mother, sister, and brother having perished with that fell disease.

For years she had had a cough, with tenderness of the chest and expectoration, which had resisted every means, and now had much increased, with evident signs of positive mischief to the lungs. Much pain was now felt in the region of the heart. Hectic fever had set in. Secretions were all wrong. Loss of flesh was now well marked in the chest and shoulders. Both allopathic and homœopathic doctors in the States had at times despaired of her life. Such was the account of her that I then received.

In the spring of last year I heard from Mrs. Alexander that the patient, after one month of my treatment, began to improve. She persevered, and got thoroughly well. (I had sent her medicine sufficient to last her for six months.)

I have recently had a letter from Mrs. Alexander, writing for another patient, and dated Oct. 27, 1888, in which she says, "Your patient's recovery has been most satisfactory. Her health has been entirely restored. She has married since, and is expecting an early accouchement. Her name is Mrs. Pridmore. The great success of your treatment, with my earnest recommendation, has induced another sufferer to send to you, notwithstanding the enormous duties charged here on all imported medicines."

NOTE. — Days of Consultation. — TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

"This is a brief but touching story of a daughter who passed away at the early age of twenty-two, leaving behind her a bright Christian testimony. Thousands of Fishermen are engaged all the year round in providing OUR TABLES with fish These men, who FOR US hazard their lives and toil through furious blasts and sleety storm (not only cut off from the comforts of home, but at two days' distance from medical or surgical aid), may rightly claim some small share in the privileges we so richly enjoy. THIS THEY CAN ONLY HAVE THROUGH THE PRESENCE OF THE MISSION VESSELS, carrying to the Fishermen the message of Divine mercy and love, affording relief in sickness, and cheering dull lives by their presence.

HELP WANTED FOR THE TOILERS OF THE DEEP.

NINE Mission Vessels now cruise with the Trawling Fleets, each being at once a CHURCH, DISPENSARY, LIBRARY, and CLUB. Funds are required to provide a Mission Vessel for EVERY FLEET, and for the maintenance of the HOSPITAL MISSION SHIPS Queen Victoria and Albert. The urgent necessity of these floating Hospitals is shown by the fact that during last year nearly 4,000 cases of accident and sickness were successfully treated on board the Dispensary of the Mission Vessels. WHO WILL HELP? Large or small Offerings will be thankfully acknowledged.

EMIGRANTS' HOME, BLACKWALL.

THIS truly admirable institution was the scene of deeply interesting farewell gatherings on the evenings of Monday and Tuesday last week. The ss. Merkara was to have left on Tuesday, carrying upwards of 500 emigrants for Queensland. These had been arriving at the Home for several days previously. The usual evangelistic meetings each evening had been well attended, and with much appearance of blessing. On Monday evening there was an attendance of over 200 emigrants, for the most part young men and young women, and all of the working class. Lord Radstock and Mr. E. Trotter were the speakers, and their earnest and telling addresses were listened to with very marked attention, as also the short but emphatic testimony of one speaker after another from amongst the audience, who rose to bear witness to the joy and peace received on acceptance of Christ as a Saviour. Very few, however, were found in the inquiry-rooms after the meeting.

It is a custom to hold a prayer-meeting at 7.30 a.m., before breakfast, on the morning of the departure of the emigrants. On the morning of Tuesday upwards of one hundred of both sexes were present at it, and seemed to appreciate the opportunity of once more meeting for prayer and praise before leaving their native land. The fog was so dense on the river that morning that the departure of the Merkara was postponed until the following day, which gave the opportunity for another farewell meeting on Tuesday evening, when there was an attendance of about three hundred—the majority were men. Most faithful were the addresses of Mr. Trotter and Mr. Wilké. There was a very marked seriousness upon all faces when the meeting was closed, after an invitation to the anxious to go into the inquiry-room.

Within a few minutes one room was crowded with young men, every one of whom fell on his knees, confessing his sins, and crying for mercy. Most of them were in tears, some sobbing, while Mr. Trotter and other friends spoke to one and another, pointing to the Lamb of God, and entreating them to accept salvation. The scene was very impressive and touching. Eventually, of those who had entered the room there was not one who did not appear to have found peace in believing. One after another openly confessed their thankful acceptance of forgiveness—the voices of several broken with emotion. It was interesting to hear one after another thanking God for the fog, owing to which they had been delayed for another day, and had received such a blessing. Very cordial were their thanks to Mr. Trotter and his friends on parting from them. Meanwhile, in the inquiry-room for women a very similar scene had taken place. With them, as amongst the men, thankfulness was expressed by several for the delay. The Lord be praised for such tokens of his presence, and for seals such as these upon the labours of his servants.

R. S. M.

ORPHANS AT BAGSHOT.—In our recent sketch of the Royal Albert Orphan Asylum it was stated that the late Mr. Samuel Morley was a generous helper of the work. It should have been Mr. William Morley.

PORTSMOUTH AND GOSPORT SEAMEN'S MISSION.—At the thirty-fifth anniversary, held a few days ago, friends from Folkestone bore testimony to the good work done there through the visits of the ship Bethel. The accounts of the work at home and abroad were very cheering. The schooner Mystery is now at Trouville, where the Word of God has been preached in simplicity, and received with joy by many. Captain Mountifield, of the ship Herald, writes: "If the Christian public of England could see what I have seen in France, the people of Trouville would not, I am sure, be without a place of worship, or a teacher to tell them more about Jesus." The address of Mr. Henry Cook, the faithful director of the Mission, is Stoke-road, Gosport.

OUTRAGES IN KURDISTAN.

THE recently reported rising of hostile Kurds against the Christians of the Julamerk division of the province of Van, in Turkey, has been described in detail by Mr. Athelstan Riley, who has just returned from that part of the Asiatic territory of the Porte. It seems that the sheep of the chief village of the tribe of Tiari were being fed, in the usual way, in a district within easy reach of reputedly friendly Kurdish tribes, some three hundred women and two men being in charge of the flocks. Suddenly a large body of Kurds pounced upon the defenceless company, killing both the men and some of the women; moreover, the women generally were fearfully outraged, and otherwise made the victims of atrocious cruelty. The injured tribe at once prepared to retaliate, but through measures taken by the clergy of the Archbishop of Canterbury's Assyrian Mission to bring the matter under the notice of the Turkish Government, this additional step was not taken.

Mr. Riley says that atrocities of one kind or another are common in that region, it being the apparent object of the Porte altogether to sweep away the Assyrian Christians. To this end lawless Mohammedan tribes are allowed to have their wicked way. Mr. Riley declares the condition of the Christian subjects of the Porte to be a stain upon English honour. The integrity of the Turkish Empire has, he points out, been considered necessary to the best interests of the British Empire, and he contends that the maintenance of that policy carries with it responsibilies which should not be shirked.

PHILIP PHILLIPS IN LONDON.

WHAT an exquisite treat is in store for those who can hear Philip Phillips, "the Singing Pilgrim," in his new character as descriptive lecturer! I had this privilege the other evening at the Metropolitan Tabernacle, and reckon it one of the most interesting evenings of my life, He still sings with singular sweetness: but spends three-fourths of the time in describing his tour "Around the World in a Chariot of Song," for which purpose his voice is stronger than I expected. His old-time tendencies still remain; but there were also rousing passages occasionally which had a strong effect upon the audience. His dissolving-view illustrations are simply superb, and the clever and effective way in which his artist manages them produces wonderful and striking effects. It is one continued transformation scene from beginning to end. Even while Mr. Phillips is singing "Nearer, my God, to Thee," "Father, take my Hand," &c., the scenes are enacted on the screen by these limelight effects.

It takes him three nights to complete his "tour." The other evening he began at New York, and took us across the American continent, then to the Sandwich Islands, the Australian colonies and India; giving most useful and interesting information as he went along. The last public appearance of the late Mr. Pennefather was at a service of song by Mr. Phillips at the Mildmay Conference Hall more than fifteen years ago, when everybody noticed the Johanine spirit they possessed in common; and it is this spirit of love which, by the grace of God, our good brother still maintains.

GAWIN KIRKHAM.

MIDDLESEX SOUP AND DINNER KITCHEN.—This institution is in its twentieth year, and its usefulness is recognised by all who know of its work. Relief is given in the shape of tickets, which entitle receivers to substantial free meals. During the past twelve months over 16,000 dinners have been served in exchange for tickets, and many others given without tickets. The office is 12, Windmill-street, Tottenham Court-road, W., and the superintendent Mr. M. Kirschner.

FINSBURY PARK Y.M.C.A.

To epitomise the work that is producing blessed results in this Association, so as to present an idea of its extent and influence, would require more space than you can afford. The Open-air Mission had its annual meeting a few nights ago, and was full of intense interest.

Mr. HENRY BIRD led off. He was converted at the age of 52, and is a striking instance of the power of God's grace. His testimony has been blessed to hundreds. Every Sunday morning at the Manor House, and in the evening in St. Thomas's-road, crowds gather to hear, and many are the slain of the Lord.

Mr. R. C. MORGAN, who presided, remarked that such characters as Mr. Bird's, turned upside down, and inside out, proclaiming the Gospel, ought to convince the most hardened sceptic of the truth and power of the Gospel.

One instance amongst many brought in at the Manor House station is worth recording. A young fellow "on the spree" one Sunday morning heard singing and was attracted. Mr. Bird, in his own earnest way, was telling the story of the Prodigal Son. The word came home. Deep conviction resulted, and W—— cried out in bitter agony, "O God, if there is a prodigal in London, that's me." Friends gathered round him, and soon light streamed into his dark soul. A fortnight after, he stood upon the same stand from which the message came to him, and proclaimed with great power the story of God's love to him. God owned the testimony, and many have reason to bless God for that young fellow's conversion. Ever since June 10, "that blessed Sunday morning," he has been unwearied in preaching the Gospel.

Possessing great talent, it is hoped that he has before him a career of great usefulness. The year before his conversion he obtained and lost over twenty situations through drink. Clothed and in his right mind, he has recently received an appointment in Liverpool of some influence. God is using him there. On a recent Sunday night, whilst he was speaking, four souls were led by the Spirit into the light.

Mr. Snell's work is another remarkable agency connected with Finsbury Park Hall. He was a waif and stray himself, having slept many weary nights on London Bridge. He was taken on board a training ship, where his right eye was blinded by an accident. He shortly afterwards found Christ, and his sympathies were strongly drawn towards street boys. He knows all about them. He can get at their affections in a very remarkable way. A room has been taken for him off the Seven Sisters-road, where he gathers them in to tell them about Christ. Numbers have been saved through his instrumentality.

A Schoolboys' Christian Association has been started by Mr. Leigh Holme, and promises to be a most successful work as a feeder to the Y.M.C.A. It numbers about fifty members, many of whom are converted characters. The first transfer to the Y.M.C.A. was lately made. A Young Men's reception was held in the parlour, the host being Mr. Huntington Stone, of Woolwich. About twenty-six young men were introduced as members and associates.

Some of these were the result of the week's mission conducted in the hall in November by Mr. W. R. Lane. About twelve came out for Christ, whilst the members were stirred up and encouraged. The Sunday night evangelistic service continues to be much blessed. The congregation is a remarkable one, numbering 700 to 900, a great proportion being young men and women. The sight strikes many of the speakers as quite unique—so many fresh, young faces. Large numbers who wander into the hall, almost without an object, are won for Christ; scarcely a service passes without conversions, some of a very remarkable character. Whole families have been saved. To God be all the glory.

MISSIONARIES FOR NORTH AFRICA.

At the central noon prayer-meeting on Friday last, addresses were given by Mr. Cuthbert Nairn and Miss Jessie Nairn, who sailed on the following day to join Rev. E. F. Baldwin in Morocco. Mr. John Anderson, of Ardrossan, editor of The Reaper, in introducing the missionaries, said that in January last he was visiting Tangier in search of rest. There he was brought into contact with the natives, and his heart was stirred as he saw the great need of the Gospel in Morocco. This led to the resolve that he would do all in his power to send help to these poor Arabs. On his return to Scotland, one friend was laid upon his heart as a suitable man for the work. This friend began to communicate with him regarding missionary work, and after a time wrote saying God had laid the needs of Morocco as a burden upon him. This Mr. Anderson felt to be Divine leading. It was at first intended that Mr. Nairn, who was a farmer, should procure a piece of land, and become a self-supporting missionary; but, on further consideration, it was thought well to postpone this step until the language had been acquired. Should it appear later to be desirable to carry out the original plan, Mr. Nairn hopes to be able in this way to maintain not only himself, but several other workers.

Miss Nairn then communicated her wish to go to Morocco; and, as Mrs. Baldwin was praying for another lady missionary, it was resolved that Miss Nairn should accompany her brother.

Mr. Anderson mentioned one encouraging incident which came under his notice. An old man walked 250 miles to see the missionary. The first day he defended the Koran; the second day he was anxious about his soul; the third day he accepted Jesus, and set forth on his return journey to preach the Gospel amongst his neighbours.

Mr. and Miss Nairn briefly told how the Lord had led them to take up this work, and much earnest prayer was offered for a rich blessing upon their labours.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION.

Last year a number of advanced temperance reformers, inaugurated a National Prohibition party, and issued a manifesto giving reasons for the step. During the first year the movement had to encounter many difficulties. Nevertheless, the first annual conference, recently held in Tolmer's-square Church was marked by much enthusiasm and a spirit of devotion. Self-denial in behalf of the cause was evident by the hearty manner in which all contributed towards the prosecution of the work.

It was decided to inaugurate a "Speaker's Bureau," to furnish speakers on Prohibition; to appoint an agent for the advocacy of its aims; and to hold a special May meeting for bringing the question of Prohibition prominently before the Christian public. The secretary of the movement is Rev. W. Durban, 73, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

MENTONE.—Visitors are much more numerous than last year, and the best hotels and pensions are fairly full. Rev. I. Hodgson is the chaplain at Christ Church, and Canon Sidebottom, who is at St. John's, may be considered as a permanent resident. Rev. J. E. Somerville, son of the well-known venerable Dr. Somerville, is in charge of the Presbyterian service at the Villa les Grottes; these services from the first have been well attended, and a Bible-reading, which Mr. Somerville has conducted, had a full company to assist in it. These signs of spiritual life are most refreshing; indeed, it has been many a season since so much of religious life has been seen. Professor Franck, who is chaplain at the German Church, and several other ministers took part in the Bible-reading. Mr. Spurgeon is making capital progress.

PRAYER FOR MISSIONS.

There have been in existence for some time several sectional Prayer Unions in connection with Foreign Missions; but it has been suggested that the formation of a world-wide, all-embracing Missionary Prayer Union would afford ampler scope for united prayer on behalf of the great work of evangelising the world. At the invitation of three well-known Christian gentlemen, a number of friends deeply interested in missions met at 186, Aldersgate-street, last week, to confer on the subject. Mr. George Williams presided.

In the course of an explanatory statement, Rev. F. B. Meyer said he thought that if a common bond of sympathy and oneness could be formed between missionaries all over the world, and others specially interested in their work, it would prove a source of much comfort and strength to many lonely, discouraged toilers in heathen lands. Such a bond is to be found in united petition at the throne of grace. There cannot be perfect union in matters of ecclesiastical arrangement or Church order, but all may be agreed in making prayer to God daily for one another, and such united prayer may result in universal quickening and the hastening of the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Many appropriate and suggestive remarks were contributed by those in the meeting. The Chairman considered that the suggested Prayer Union was certainly from the Lord, and every Christian must rejoice in the privilege of sharing in such a glorious concert of prayer. Mr. J. E. Mathieson referred to the growing practical interest in missions, and the deepening personal consecration among Christians; these results he attributed to united prayer. As to missionary methods, he remarked on the fact that the great and older societies are taking a lesson from the China Inland Mission, and are preparing to relax their arrangements as to the length and the nature of preparatory studies for missionaries. Among those who subsequently spoke were Miss Robinson, late of Mauritius, Mr. Schriemer, Mr. H. Soltau, Dr. Eccles, Dr. Gauld, Mr. R. Burn, and Mr. McAll. The last-named gentleman formally proposed the formation of a Foreign Missionary Prayer Union, the membership of which should be open to all missionaries and others interested in missions. The members are expected to undertake as far as possible to pray for missions every day. A committee, of which Mr. George Williams is chairman, will settle details. In his address Mr. Meyer briefly explained the work of the Missionary Bureau at 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C., the work of which is to be carried on in unison with the Prayer Union. Mr. Pamment, the secretary of the Bureau, will also act as secretary of the Union.

We understand the Prayer Union is about to issue a letter to missionaries all over the world.

Y.W.C.A., BRIGHTON.—On Thursday last week a new hall in Old Steyne, capable of seating about 200, was opened in connection with this institution Dedication meetings were held afternoon and evening, and earnest addresses were delivered by Rev. Dr. Bennett, Mrs. Hatt Noble, Mr. Spencer Walton, and other local gentlemen.

SWEDEN.—Mrs. de Ramsay writes from Jönköping on December 10:—I am this year printing Christmas letters for Sweden, one of them specially for sailors, one for general use, one for the sick, others for sick children, for Sunday-schools, for soldiers, and young women. This last year has been given up to local work in Jönköping. The Y.W.C.A. has developed considerably; we have meetings every night, and the young ladies in the town help with classes for music, &c., while I take the Bible-readings most of the evenings. A Sunday-school for children who never attended any before is gathered from among the mill-workers' families. I have got a great ambition to set agoing a juvenile branch of the Y.W.C.A. for girls between twelve and fifteen.

A GOOD SAMARITAN.

The following incident supplies the answer to the question often asked, "Is it of any use talking to a man under the influence of drink?" A few days since a Christian saw a man the worse for drink; he spoke a kind word to him, and invited him to have a cup of tea. After this he took him to the noon prayer-meeting in Aldersgate-street. At the close of the meeting the poor man broke into tears, prayed the publican's prayer, and professed to receive Christ as his Saviour. He also signed the temperance pledge.

A week later he wrote to a friend who was present:—"You will be glad to know that my faith in the Lord Jesus is not shaken; He has ever since been a strong tower to me, and by his wonderful power has kept that which I committed to his charge last Friday. In his strength I have kept the pledge. He holds me up. I shall never forget the kindness of the gentleman who spoke to me, and shall for ever bless God that he led me into the noonday prayer-meeting. There I was led to see my lost condition. Never until that day did I feel how weak and helpless I am by myself, but I now find in all my temptations the Lord makes a way of escape."

Several lessons to be learnt from this incident:—The Lord puts his seal upon human kindness; we should never despair of the greatest sinners; we should never limit the mercies of God in Christ, who is able to save to the uttermost all who come to Him. H. P.

MISS LEIGH IN EDINBURGH.

Miss Leigh's work in Paris has been well advocated during the past few days. Mrs. Alexander Balfour, of Liverpool, whose late husband was a warm friend of this work from its earliest days, gathered some of her friends in Edinburgh at 40, Drumsheugh-gardens, under the presidency of Dr. Alexander Whyte. After an opening prayer, in which the need of workers and of means was laid before God, Dr. Whyte said that when Miss Leigh came to ask his help he felt he could not refuse her. He had had the pleasure of visiting Miss Leigh's Home, and had seen how admirable the arrangements were, and could therefore commend it. He trusted Miss Leigh would find all she needed in Edinburgh.

Principal Sir William Muir presided at a public meeting at Free St. Andrew's. He spoke of the need of such a work as Miss Leigh's, even at home; how much more, then, in Paris! After Miss Leigh's statement, in which she set forth the present position of the work, and the need of special help during the exhibition year for young women, many of whom were Scotch, who were already coming out to serve in so-called tea-rooms, Professor Blaikie said that, besides the different Homes for young women which Miss Leigh had founded, Paris was indebted to her for the Children's Home and Orphanage at Neuilly. Mr. J. P. Coldstream, W.S., spoke of the pleasure it had given him to visit Miss Leigh's Homes, by means of which a very comprehensive work is done, as eight hundred of our country people, chiefly young women and children, were touched each week by it; he was sorry to see that there was a deficit of over £2000 which it was hoped might speedily be covered. Several other friends warmly commended the work.

The Bishop of Edinburgh presided at a meeting in St. Paul's Church-room, and spoke on behalf of the Mission.

THE PACIFIC GARDEN MISSION, Chicago—started, supported, and served by one earnest man, who never misses an evening service—reveals the power which a single life has to serve God and man; over thirty thousand souls have professed conversion in this Mission during the past ten years.

"BABY MINE;"

OR,

A CHRISTMAS EVE PARABLE.

By Eva Travers Evered Poole.

A Happy Christmas! A Happy Christmas! How cheerily it sounds! How it passes from lip to lip, everywhere accompanied by smiles and joy, and good feeling, and kindly wishes. But there is no answering echo in some hearts to-day. There are mothers who have known the deep sweetness overbrimming heart and soul when little pure helpless ones lay cradled in their arms, whose joy has been suddenly stilled; whose empty hearts quiver and ache, whose craving arms hold no dear burden, and who this Christmastide are faithless and despairing, and at variance with God. The Christmas air may sparkle with radiancy, but the light is deep shadowed to them, there is nothing but sorrow in the season, nothing but bitter, bitter memories, and endless heart-aching.

One never-to-be-forgotten Christmas Eve, a mother was hushing her child to sleep. The little dimpled face lay on her bosom, and the roguish eyes looked sleepless enough; the dancing light in their blue depths answering back to the love that beamed down upon them from mother's loving face. The little hands made many futile attempts to grasp the stray teasing curls that would fall over mother's forehead, and between play and love baby and sleep seemed far, far from each other. Close beside mother sat Aunt Elsie, quietly amused as she watched the pretty pair, wondering whether Maiden Mary had not looked with just such lovely mother-pride at the Baby Jesus of long ago, and whether the tender, innocent eyes of the Jewish maiden had not held in just such sweet thrall the first upward gaze of the new-born Christ.

Presently the loud knock of the City postman startled the two, and the baby, more wide-awake than ever, tried to sit up. "Naughty darling!" chided the mother lips, as she held up her finger to the little one, and sealed the chiding with a kiss.

"What is it, Elsie?"

"Just a parcel addressed to baby: Miss Kathleen Winter. How strange it sounds! Some Christmas present, I fancy. May I open it?"

"Do;" and the string cut, and seals broken, out of a small wooden box and its nest of soft pink wool came a lovely jewel. A jewel, quaint and fair, rich with strange carvings and lustrous with pearls, attached to a ribbon for baby's neck.

"How lovely!" came in twin breaths from mother's and Elsie's lips, while Baby Kathleen cooed and kicked, stretching out eager hands towards the glittering toy.

"Who sent it?" questioned the mother.

Elsie turned over the box and its wrappings. "It has come by the mail," she answered, "and one could see it was Indian at once. See"—she held out a slip of paper—"'For my godchild, Kathleen Winter, with a Christmas kiss, and earnest hope and prayer. It is wrapped all round with love for the tiny mite, and mother must take the jewel into keeping until baby can understand some of the love that it bears with it.'"

"How kind!" cried mother, more pleased at a love-token for the little one than for gifts for herself.

Baby Kathleen stretched out a little hand as Aunt Elsie passed the jewel over for mother's inspection, and grasped it tightly. For a minute mother leaves the bauble in the tiny fingers, when baby suddenly dashes it to the ground, with a shout of glee, as babies will.

"Oh! naughty girl!" scolds mother, frowning. "I hope it is not broken?"

"No; but as baby does not know how to take care of this lovely thing, would it not be better to put it safely away?" prudently suggested Aunt Elsie.

So up on the chimney-piece the costly golden treasure was put, beyond baby's reach, mother talking all the time in loving fashion:

"Don't cry, childie! Don't you know your little baby-hold is too weak and careless for pearls and gold? You are not strong enough, little darling, to hold such precious treasures yet. By and by, when your hands have grown big and strong, you shall have it for your very, very own, my sweet. Don't cry, pet, don't cry!" as the baby-face puckered, and the eyes filled up with tears. "Your tears hurt mother so. Can't you see, I only do it for the best, baby mine?"

But baby cried, and baby clutched, and grieved for the unreachable—as babies always do.

Another Christmas Eve. Beside an empty cot the mother stands with a breaking heart. Only a brief warning, a few hours' illness, a gasp or two, and the little flickering earth-life had ended, and the great unending heaven-life began for "Baby Mine." That very day had seen the little still form shrined in its coffin and covered with flowers, carried out to the cemetery. There, cradled amongst the snowflakes, and crooned over by the robins, baby slept.

With moan and cry, the mother stood that evening by the empty cot. Her heart reached out with a bitter craving that would not be stilled or satisfied for her lost jewel. Sister Elsie stands beside her watching her anxiously, pityingly. Oh how she prays God to give her some word of comfort for that tried and sorrowful mother-heart. Some word that will take the hard rebellion out of her soul, and soften the set lines of her pale, worn face.

"Darling," whispered sister Elsie, laying her hand tenderly on the mother's arm, "Do you remember last Christmas Eve?"

"Oh, yes," said the poor mother, with quivering lips. "I was just thinking of it. Only a year ago!"

"Do you remember our baby's jewel?"

"Yes," came again, dejectedly, as she suffered herself to be led to a seat by the nursery fire.

"Darling, perhaps God means you and me to learn a lesson this Christmas, from that Christmas Eve last year. Little Kathleen was your treasure; a beautiful jewel sent from the far-off land, to gladden our eyes a little while. Only ours to hold for a little, little while. She came, wrapped all round in that love which our Father meant us to understand more perfectly through his beautiful love-gift.

"Perhaps, darling, it might be so, you know. God is dealing with you as you dealt with 'Baby Mine,' only a year ago. Perhaps He saw your mother-hold was too weak for such a precious treasure. You and I are not strong of faith or spirit, sister dear. Perhaps God would not let us keep his precious child-jewel, and has taken it from our loose hold, that, by and by, when we have grown strong and able to understand, He may give it back again. Yes, sister, once more you shall have your 'Baby Mine' for your very, very own. Don't fret, darling; remember what you said to baby last Christmas Eve. The jewel is only in God's safe keeping till by and by. Won't you trust Him? Don't you see how you are grieving Him. Oh! sister dear, can't you SEE?"

Then the welcome tears came to the hot, weary eyes, and the poor strained mother-heart wept out all its sorrow at the feet of Jesus. One Christmas Eve had been a parable of the other.

Often, as the mother takes the quaint Indian jewel out of its sandal-wood case, and gazes at it, the thought of her own jewel, the dainty "Heaven Pearl"—"Baby Mine"—comes flooding her heart, and she knows God has it in safe, sweet keeping. Ah! to some tired hearts, this Christmas-time will bring sorrowful memories, an empty chair, a familiar face lacking, the longing

...for the touch of a vanished hand,
And the sound of a voice that is still.

The very Christmas chimes that ring out so cheerily in other ears, echo with hollow sound if they strike on an empty heart.

But let God give you his own message of love to-day. He has your treasure in safe keeping. That dear daughter taken away so suddenly, that sister cut off in the bloom of her fair, fresh life, that sweet baby-child, with its blossom face and winsome ways, whom God has taken from the grasp of your earthly love into his own care, shall be yours again some time—some time.

When faith is stronger grown, and you are face to face with Jesus, you may be trusted with your treasures. Can you wait till then, sure that "He hath done all things well"?

BULGARIA'S NEED.

In a village some distance from Philippopolis a teacher obtained a Bible and began to read it in the presence of his family. He and several friends embraced the truth as set forth in the Scriptures. This brought upon them the disapprobation of the whole place. The deacon of the Protestant Church in Philippopolis, who is also a colporteur, soon after this went to that village for the double purpose of selling Bibles and visiting the teacher and his family. He was met by a crowd upon his entrance to prevent his coming into the village. The crowd consented to let him stay overnight, but did not allow him to visit the teacher. God overruled this for the furtherance of the Gospel; many came from all the regions round about to question him in regard to his heresy, and he had the best opportunity to preach Christ to them. This continued the most of the night.

Subsequently the teacher mentioned wrote to the colporteur that the two girls were being severely persecuted, but they were fully consecrated to Christ, and wished to enter a Christian school where they could obtain the necessary qualifications to enable them to do Christian work. The colporteur informed Mrs. Mumford of the facts, and she received them to train for the Lord. Mrs. Mumford has had the offer of all the paying pupils she can accommodate, if she will permit a Greek catechist to come weekly to instruct them; but this she cannot conscientiously do.

Mrs. Mumford writes that the marriage of her adopted daughter to Capt. Nicoloff was a very pleasant and profitable occasion. Her husband is the young officer who was severely wounded in the Servian-Bulgarian war three years ago, and raised up in answer to prayer; he continues to be on the Lord's side. In this marriage, instead of losing a daughter, Mrs. Mumford gains a son and faithful helper for the work of the Lord. They will continue as before to help her, and her son-in-law will be quite a protection to the school in many ways.

TENT WORK IN THE BORDER COUNTIES.—The fourth annual report of this organised effort to reach people in the Border towns and villages is a simple record of good work. Ministers have cooperated with much heartiness in some places, and farmers have willingly lent carts and men to remove the tent, when required, from one village to another. The evangelists have seen much to cheer them; but yet on all hands there remain evidences of the great need of the Gospel. Mr. W. G. Turnbull, Spittal-on-Rule, Jedburgh, is the secretary of the work.

TENT MISSIONS OF THE EVANGELISATION SOCIETY.—During the past summer evangelists worked in fifty-seven tents, pitched in 196 places. The missions have been of varying length, according to circumstances. Only nineteen of the tents belonged to the Society, the remainder being the property of individuals or associations who depended on the Society to supply mission preachers. There has been abundant evidence that the labour of the evangelists has not been in vain. In Scotland the work proceeds all the year round, and the services of the Society's agents are every year more valued by Christian workers. Copies of the annual report, just published, may be had from the hon. secretary, Captain W. E. Smith, 21, Surrey street,, Strand, W.C.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR:—FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Situation surveyed, Defects disclosed, and the Church recalled to her Lord's Instructions.

IV.—The Lost Element in Consecration.

We cannot expect that the unwelcome message we are now about to deliver will find acceptance with the bulk of professed Christians. Our hope, however, is from those advanced hosts of the people of God of whom we have spoken, who are thirsting after God, and seeking to know and to do his will at any cost. Yet to many, even of them, we fear our words will come as "a hard saying." But "the axe is laid at the root of the tree," and "the time is come that judgment must begin at the house of God." The dumb soul-agony of seven hundred and fifty millions yet untouched by the Church demands it. The colossal task of overtaking the sloth of half a hundred generations of Christians requires that we deal unsparingly with ourselves.

We have seen that the main hope of this quickened missionary movement lies with those consecrated ones whose prayers and efforts have largely contributed towards arousing it, and from whose ranks the effective workers for the field must come. As these go forth, the character and measure of their consecration will be determined by that which obtains at home; in the same way that a draught of water from a spring is affected by the purity and sweetness of its waters. As the colonies of old Rome were bits of the imperial city transplanted to barbarian soil, representing truly its glory or its shame, so are missionaries in relation to the home churches.

We have now a searching question to ask. May the Lord give us all grace to face the light! It is: Do THE RANKS OF EVEN THE MOST ADVANCED BELIEVERS EXHIBIT IN SPIRITUAL INTELLIGENCE AND CONSECRATION REAL SYMMETRICAL APOSTOLIC CHRISTIANITY? It seems hard to reply, No. Can such be the answer, as we recall the gathered hosts of Mildmay and Keswick, of Perth and Manchester? But let us not compare ourselves among ourselves, or our attainments with those of others about us, or of those who preceded us, or with any adventitious standard insensibly adopted among ourselves. "To the law, and to the testimony."

There is a double class of precepts exhorting us to a life of conformity to God's will. One class relates to the inward spirit and graces we are to cultivate. Faith, hope, love, gentleness, patience, and much else are pressed upon us. The other class relates to the outward life of simplicity, self-denial, and suffering, which embody and interpret these inner graces. THE ROOT DEFECT OF THIS AGE IS THAT, ALTHOUGH THE FORMER CLASS IS HONOURED, THE LATTER IS FORGOTTEN. These were both united in their perfection in the earthly life of our blessed Lord. They both shine brightly in the lives of Apostolic Christians. They continued long to mark the believers of the earlier centuries. But when the Church, in Constantine's time, slept upon the lap of Delilah, and had been shorn of her strength, little is seen of either the inward life of faith and love, or the outward life of unworldly simplicity and self-denial. Both disappeared.

After a time the letter of Christ's command was laid hold of by many, who saw that Christianity was not to be clad in soft raiment, and repose in kings' houses. In caves and convents, upon pillars, in winter's cold and summer's heat, by pilgrimages and austerities, a travesty of the severities of Christ's outward life was rigorously lived. But in this age, what do we behold? Neither the pleasing and heavenly picture of an outward life of Christlike simplicity joined to the inner life of spiritual beauty; nor, on the other hand, as in the dark ages, the external, if profitless, exhibition, because devoid of an inward spring and power. We look upon thousands of God's dear children who have reversed the order of the monkish ascetic, who possess and manifest much of spiritual grace, but fail in exhibiting the corresponding outward life. They seem blind to one class of Christ's commands, and to one half of his example, and have tacitly agreed among themselves to remand to the limbo of impossible if not unreasonable requirements, many of his plainest precepts. They are living, as to outward circumstances, lives of the greatest comfort, and even luxury, and there are comparatively few who do not live in about the same style as the world's people of similar rank and means.

I speak in all this, not of the camp-followers of the Church, the mixed multitude who, as they have never tasted of Christ's soul-satisfying love, must needs lust after Egypt's leeks and garlick; but of those in the van, spiritually, of the army of the Lord. Alas, as to the question of worldly conformity in these directions being allowable or expedient, the mixed multitude and the faithful few are at one. Beloved, this ought not so to be. We have not so learned Christ. There has been a putting asunder of that which God has joined together. A life of professed or real inward spirituality linked with the form or fashion of this poor and passing world, savours of spiritual adultery. Can Goliath-slayers be born from such an alliance? The consecrated remnant must again marry the life of faith and joy and love in which they so exult, to the outward seeming that belongs to it, and by which alone it can be interpreted to the dull eyes of men at home and abroad; then from the fruit of this heaven-ordained union shall again go forth to the ends of the earth, other Pauls and Stephens.

The state of the church in Laodicea supplies the genius of the professed church of Christ in this age looked at as a whole. "Rich and increased in goods," self-satisfaction, self-sufficiency, and lukewarmness, are its chief marks. Do these dark hues play upon the more consecrated hosts as well? They do, in part at least. We beg our beloved brethren who are given up to God, to bear with us while we say there is much yet lacking with them as to this. They, too, find their prototype in the New Testament. Their genius is the church at Corinth. They, like that church, are characterised by worldly wealth and position, large gifts, much grace; "in everything enriched by Him in all utterance and in all knowledge," and "waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." But the Lord has somewhat, yea much, against them. Paul speaks of coming to them with a rod. We do not speak of the sectarianism nor the darker lines of gross evil that called for dealing in that church. The parallelism is between the large proportion of men and women of position therein, and their eminent gifts and graces, and the snare that came upon them from continuing, after their conversion, to "reign as kings," and the corresponding state of things

"The lessons to be learnt from the life of this prophet are well drawn out and emphasized in the pages before us. . . . Mr. Meyer's language is clear, forcible, descriptive, and interesting; his doctrine is always pure and elevating."

From The Presbyterian Messenger:—

"This is a most stimulating book. It sparkles with heavenly light, and glows with heavenly fire from beginning to end. We honestly and heartily recommend it."

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

A SKETCH OF THE CHARACTER, WRITINGS, THEOLOGY AND INFLUENCE OF THE BELOVED DISCIPLE.

With two Chromo-lithographic Views.

Presentation Edition:

Cloth, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

REV. C. H. SPURGEON says: "Preachers abound; but divines are few. The printing press pours forth a mass of matter; but a real book is a phenomenon. We count ourselves happy, for we have met with a divine in Dr. James Culross; and in his work entitled 'JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED,' we have found a book. One of the excellences of Dr. Culross is the freshness of his thought. The dew is on his branch; he is no withered bough of the autumn forest. His mind allows young flowers to break through its soil after their own fashion, and to blossom in their own sweet way."

"It is altogether without reserve that we commend the work before us. It is not a bottle of milk for babes, but a portion of meat for men. A half-dozen readings will only make it more interesting to those who meditate upon what they read."

Presentation Edition:

Cloth, bevelled boards, 2s. 6d.

"The glow, as from a golden sunset, which the imagination sheds over the author's style, gives it a great charm."

The British Messenger.

"We do not know higher-toned or healthier devotional literature, of the evangelical type, than is represented by this and Dr. Culross' previous works. This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly; these latter adjectives we find it impossible to use concerning many of the devotional books produced in our day. Because we may honestly use them in this case, we heartily commend this book for the refreshment of our busy teachers."

The Sunday School Chronicle.

Cheap Edition: Tinted covers, 1s. 6d.

"BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR, AND KNOCK."

CHRIST'S MESSAGE TO THE CHURCH AT LAODICEA.

With Chromo-lithographic Frontispiece.

Presentation Edition: Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

"Two evils are obvious enough among us—Ritualism and Rationalism. But there is a third, more terrible and more insidious than either of these—the Laodicean spirit, with its blended lukewarmness and pride. It is this spirit that Dr. Culross examines, describes, and rebukes. All who admire the author's insight, his delicacy of perception, his felicity of language, his broad and tender sympathies, his grasp of great truths, will welcome this volume."—The Freeman.

"Another 'gem of purest ray serene' from the deep waters of our brother's teeming mind. He possesses a ripeness of thought and a beauty of expression which, in our judgment, are scarcely equalled, and in one instance surpassed, by those of any other living teacher known to us."

With Introductions by Rev. Joseph Cook & Rev. J. H. Vincent, D.D.

Presentation Edition: Cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

"No one can read this almost unique volume without being stimulated to a more diligent study of The Book. It is not, strictly speaking, evidential; yet the key to valuable Scripture evidence is to be found within. It is not exegetical; but the careful reader will be taught thereby a sound method of exposition. It is not homiletical; although the seed-corn for dozens of addresses are contained in its brief compass. Buy it, we can say to all; read it with your Bible open and a common-place book to hand, ready to catch up and store away the many precious things so lavishly scattered throughout its pages."—Night and Day.

"A powerful and brilliant work. Dr. Pentecost is not only a man of marked ability and scholarship: he is also a pulpit orator of the highest order. He at once arrests the attention, penetrates the heart, moves the affections, fires the imagination, bends the will, and directs the conduct. There is no escaping the spell of his voice, the charm of his style, and the power of his utterances. Anything from his pen may be bought with eagerness. He is equally at home in addressing saint and sinner, as this volume amply proves."—Oldham Chronicle.

in England and elsewhere to-day among advanced Christians.

Time fails to quote the many commands of Christ, to lay not up treasure on earth; to sell that we have and give alms; to follow Him who had not where to lay his head; to have the same mind which was in Him who became of no reputation, and though rich, yet for our sakes became poor. What did Christ mean by these behests? When did He rescind them? Have we obeyed them; or do we retain our social position and fortunes and easy surroundings? Have we broken these (not the "least") of Christ's commandments, and taught men so? What wonder then if we are little in the kingdom, and devoid of spiritual power!

Say not that these things are not to be taken too literally. Are we not called to imitate Christ? But how? In his inward disposition only? Nay, verily, but in his outward life as well. Have Christ's words and example even brought us to choose an outward life of absolute simplicity and self-denial? Did not Christ require at least this? Did not the first disciples also understand it? Perhaps you reply, "They did so, and Christ so commanded, because of the impending destruction of Jerusalem, in which their possessions would inevitably perish." But do not you believe that a more awful judgment is hastening on, and even now imminent? Did not Madame Guyon so act when she left the glare of the French Court to live as a missionary in a cottage in a remote and obscure province? And thousands are yet blessed through her.

Did not George Bowen, of Bombay, do so when he left position, family, wealth, refined surroundings, and scientific studies, to live on a few rupees a month in the native bazaar, and clad as a native? To-day, his "Meditations" are drawing men everywhere heavenward. Is not God speaking to us through the Salvationists, who, with much less spiritual intelligence, and some admixture of questionable practices, give up all for Christ, and live lives which the world despises as mean? Yet they are reaping tens of thousands. We blame certain expositors for spiritualising the prophecies, but do not we spiritualise the vital and practical precepts? Did not Paul literally conform to Christ's example and teaching as to these things? He exhorts us to follow him as he followed Christ, and to us he says, too truly, as to the Corinthians:—

> Now are ye full, now are ye rich, ye have reigned as kings without us: and I would to God ye did reign, that we also might reign with you. For I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men. We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honourable, but we are despised. Even unto this present hour we both hunger and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no certain dwellingplace; and labour, working with our own hands: being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it: being defamed, we intreat: we are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day. I write not these things to shame you, but as my beloved sons I warn you.

Those who stand well with their fellows, who are rich in what the carnal mind values, have too much at stake to "follow fully"; too much in common with the world to break with it completely; are too laden to run with alacrity; and are, generally, too headstrong to be commanded by the Lord, and so must be "counselled." Behold the secret of Paul's power and of our weakness. Does not his fine irony exhibit the true position of multitudes of the best believers of this day? As to them, in this respect at least, Christ still stands without and knocks—his characteristic attitude even toward the true in this Laodicean age. As to this, at least, his trumpet-call applies: "Be zealous, therefore, and repent"—his characteristic word to his own even now. "Therefore, as ye abound in everything, in faith and utterance and knowledge and all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also" (this grace of outward conformity to the commands of Christ), and thus "prove the sincerity of your love."

We will next endeavour to show the evils of this separation of the inward life from its proper outward expression.

A Missionary.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

During Tuesday and Wednesday, last week, all-day meetings in connection with the Salvation Army were held in Exeter Hall. General Booth presided, and the gatherings were very large; at the evening meetings many people who presented themselves could not so much as enter the crowded hall. The proceedings were partly devotional and partly practical.

The addresses were more or less related to the announced subject: "The true Religion of Humanity." At the final meeting, the leaders and others set their hearts upon seeing some results of the many warnings and exhortations that had been uttered. "Heroes" of faith were spoken about, and the assembly was asked to produce some. The General delivered an address on Christ cursing the fig-tree, and pointed out that a lifeless profession is not only vain, but insulting to the Saviour. Those branches that bring forth no fruit must at the last be taken off and cast aside. He called upon his hearers to decide to be out-and-out followers of Christ. Major Musa Bhai, from Ceylon, followed, telling his experiences in the Christian life, and asking for soldiers to fight sin and darkness in India.

Mr. Bramwell Booth made a pointed speech, and songs were afterwards sung. Searching words from the General on the watchword, "For God and Humanity," closed the meeting. As a parting request, General Booth desired prayers for his invalid wife, that she may have recovery in due time in God's own way.

THE CHURCH ASSOCIATION.

During the past three months frequent afternoon prayer-meetings have been held, alternately at Burlington Hall, Savile-row; Mayfair; and Cannon-street Hotel. They were arranged by the Council of the Church Association, in order to beseech the outpouring of God's blessing upon the Church of England. Eighteen in number, they were attended by a number of earnest Christians, and in great measure the petitions were for a general revival of spiritual religion in England, and the spread of truth throughout the world.

The final meeting was held on Friday last. Mr. J. W. Janson presided, and delivered a hearty and helpful address. He indicated with much clearness the point of Christian teaching which specially needs emphasising to-day. Men fail to recognise the priesthood of the Lord Jesus Christ, and so it comes about that they put their confidence in such of their fellows as claim to occupy the position of mediators between God and man. Taking up the Epistle to the Hebrews, Mr. Janson beautifully exhibited the perfections of Him who ever liveth to make intercession for his people. Mortals cannot be invested with the attributes of Jesus, and true religion would be helped by making that fact widely known, and placing Christ before the world as the one name given under heaven whereby men can be saved.

The attendance of evangelical Christians at the meetings has not been what the Council expected. If, however, requests, in encouraging numbers, should reach the secretary, Mr. H. Miller, 14, Buckingham-street, Strand, another series of similar meetings will be arranged for the beginning of the year.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS IN WALES.

"A reader" draws our attention to the Sunday-school system in Wales. The elder children are taken out of the children's classes according to proficiency in reading and repeating Scripture, and are drafted into Bible-classes best suited to their age and acquirements. The Bible-classes (men and women separately) have generally men teachers who read a chapter, verse by verse, with the class, giving his, and calling upon them for their exposition of the text.

The Bible-classes are held in the same room, and at the same time as the children's classes, the catechising of the children being a means of instructing the backward elders. All ages who attend the services in church or chapel attend the Sunday-school—in fact, never leave school from childhood to old age; and should they move to a new neighbourhood would join a Bible-class in the Sunday-school as a matter of course.

AGED PILGRIMS' SOCIETY.—Mr. J. T. Morton, of Caterham Valley, has enabled the committee to send to the Society's pensioners blankets, flannel, coals, groceries, &c., a kindness which they have very gratefully appreciated. The secretary is Mr. J. E. Hazelton, 83, Finsbury-pavement, and both he and the committee would be very glad to find friends ready to follow so good an example.

Dr. Saphir on the Bible.—7.

ON Thursday morning last, in St. John's Presbyterian Church, Allen-street, Kensington, Rev. Dr. Saphir delivered the last of his present series of addresses on the Bible. The particular aspect of the subject dwelt upon was, "The Relation of the Church of Christ to the Old and New Testaments." At the outset attention was directed to the misleading character of the oft-repeated statement that the Church originated without the Scriptures, and for some time continued to exist without them. The statement, he said, is not true, as the preaching of Christ and the Apostles continually had reference to the Old Testament. The Church owed its origin not merely to the preaching of Him who was the Word, but to preaching which was in explanation of the Word which had been previously written. And not merely was this the case as concerning the Church which was founded among Israel, but even unto those who had been idolaters the Apostles opened the Scriptures, proving from the Old Testament every doctrine He presented for acceptance.

After some remarks on the wealth of the Old Testament, the speaker called attention to the simple grandeur of the New. In the latter, God is revealed as Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. The reason for the frequent occurrence of the expression "before the foundation of the world," is that the New Testament differs from the Old in the fact that it goes back into the eternal counsels of God, and shows us what was in the depths of the Godhead when, in Christ Jesus, as the Lamb slain, He chose the Church to show forth his glory and praise. At some length the human homeliness of the New Testament books was pointed out. Not, as in the Old Testament, was the Spirit of God outside the preachers, so that they had to "search diligently what the spirit which was in them did signify," but it was indwelling, according to Christ's promise, that if He went away the Comforter would come; and in the most subjective manner the various writers bore their personal testimony, their individuality being ever allowed the freest scope.

Having examined the New Testament as to its contents, and maintained that for exposition of the Old, and the proper exposure of heresy, it is perfectly adequate, Dr. Saphir spoke of the essential oneness of the entire Book. The Holy Ghost brought to the remembrance of the Apostles the things which Jesus had said unto them, and so those who listened to them heard the words of Christ. "He that heareth you, heareth Me." In the course of further observations with regard to the early Church, the speaker remarked that the reading in meetings of Christians was chiefly from the Old Testament. Tradition, however, soon obscured the truth, and, as the Jews came to hold Divine revelation in form only, their hearts not realising it, so the Church rapidly declined from the pure teaching of the Gospel. Therefore, antiquity in itself is no authority as regards matters of faith.

These points having been carefully elaborated, it was shown that along the centuries succeeding the Apostolic age, down to the Reformation, there were occasional glimpses of light in the prevailing darkness. The Spirit of God worked mightily in the hearts, consciences, and minds of many faithful men, who earnestly inquired as to the certainty of salvation, and the means of communion with God. Through regarding the Scriptures with the guidance of the Holy Ghost, the Reformers saw that Jesus was the Author of perfect salvation to all who believed. Christ and the Bible in their true relation were apparently realised at the same time.

The first thing the Reformers did was to declare the authority of Scripture, because it is the only Word of God. Next, they showed that Scripture has a centre, and that is Christ. Once you understand the centre, you understand everything. The third point they established was that salvation is assured by faith in Christ, according to the Scriptures. The Church of Rome has never held out any such certainty. Again, the Reformers maintained that Scripture is its own authority. To those who honestly go to it, the Book is plain on all essential points of teaching. At the same time, it is very obscure to those who wish to find in it what is not there, and to those who do not wish to find what they know is there. If we are willing to find what is in the Book, all is simple and easy.

Dr. Saphir went on to speak of the doctrine of justification by faith as the key to open Holy Scripture: "Christ died for our sins and rose again for our justification." This, and the sufficiency of Scripture, as well as the need for the Holy Ghost, stood out boldly in the testimony of the Reformers, and require emphatic statement to-day.

On February 7, in the same building, Dr. Saphir hopes to begin another series of addresses on "The Analysis of the Old Testament."

From the Australian Bush.

WE are still living in our Bush home. 1887 was a magnificent season, and proved what might be done in this land were we sure of regular rains. This year again sees the country in a sad plight through drought, the winter having been excessively dry, and no steady heavy rainfall having occurred for months. Many sheep and horses have already perished in the back blocks, and even in these parts grass is very short, and the crops are so far behind that grave fears are entertained of a sad failure this season. We get many practical lessons of trust in the living God.

THE CHRISTIAN reaches us regularly, and is a source of great cheer as well as of information to us and to those to whom we pass it on. There are several now in this neighbourhood who get your paper either weekly or in the monthly parts. Its influence is most healthy, and its thoroughness most suitable to the colonial mind, especially to those who are untrammelled by sectarian bonds, and can look at matters in a broad Christian spirit.

A Y.W.C.A. is about to be started at Forbes, a town about thirty miles from this, where Mrs. Stewart (wife of Rev. William Stewart, Wesleyan minister), who was engaged in Christian work for some years in Liverpool, Lancs., is taking an active part in the movement.

Temperance work progresses in this district, and quite a number of all classes have now become abstainers; but, better still, every now and then someone is definitely coming out on the Lord's side. Indeed, there is quite a spirit of inquiry after the truth contained in God's Word, and I have been privileged to have very many cheering conversations, both at home and when travelling about the country, on the all-important subjects contained in the Bible. Curiously enough, since beginning this paragraph, an inquirer's letter has been delivered to me. This seems to be my present work for the Lord, corresponding with anxious souls and with those who are seeking for more light. I feel much impressed with the belief that truly "the day of the Lord is at hand"; "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh"; "the time is short," and we have need to work while it is yet the day of salvation.

Mr. Henry Varley has drawn the attention of the Christian public to what he has witnessed of the flaunting vice of Melbourne, and also to the degradation of colonial girls by Chinamen. Travelling some time ago through Victoria in a second-class railway carriage, I met with a sad specimen of this horrible infatuation. At one of the stations a young woman, about nineteen years of age, came into the carriage. Not long after, uncapping a brandy bottle, she offered nobblers to her travelling companions. I said if she would give me the bottle I would throw it out of the window, as I was sorry to see her indulging in intoxicating spirits. She said it was too late for her to stop it. I told her there was One who would help her if she would really give it up. Lowering her voice she whispered, "I know who you mean—Jesus." Then she sadly added, "But I'm too far gone." We travelled for hours together, during which time some men in the compartment helped her to finish the contents of her brandy bottle.

One man spoke impudently to her, when she sprang upon him like a tigress, and battered his face terribly for a minute or two, when I interfered as he was going to fly at her. At the next station I had him removed from the compartment, and she afterwards thanked me; and, though considerably under the influence of liquor, she produced a purse with a small parcel in it, which she showed me contained opium, which she used constantly, and couldn't live without. She told me she had been well brought up; mentioned the Sunday-school where she was taught about Jesus and his love, after which she described her downward course. Somehow, a Chinaman enticed her with sweetmeats, got her to his den, and persuaded her to try a smoke—of opium. "After that," she said, "it was all up with me, and I can't tear myself away now."

She continued: "The drink's bad enough; but, oh! you don't know the craving that's here—here"; and she clawed away at her bosom as if there were a demon there she would fain tear away and slay, but felt powerless. She was terribly excited, so I sang her one of Sankey's hymns. She then got my hymn-book, and searched till she found, "What a friend we have in Jesus," which we sang together. Some passengers who had come in meanwhile seemed to think themselves defiled by sitting near us. This is only one sample of the many poor creatures decoyed in the same awful way. If we, as a nation, have forced opium on the Chinese, thus sapping their social life, it seems we are suffering but a righteous retribution in having our own social purity defiled. I trust the writings of Mr. Broomhall, and the efforts of many other Christian men and women, will result in our nation shaking off for ever this accursed abomination, which is one of our shameful iniquities.

Brethren, pray for us in the Bush of Australia. I often think the preacher's work in the interior of Australia is as real a mission work as going to the heathen abroad. It is difficult to get hold of a population so much scattered as ours is, and the Bush missionary is doing a noble work, as he drives or rides about, visiting the ones and the twos in the out-of-the-way corners of the colonies. It is grand to hear of the numbers now moved to offer themselves to God in the mission field.

PIRÆUS.—Miss Liebhamer is carrying on a truly interesting work here. She moves among people of several nationalities, and year by year her operations expand. Greek children are taught, almshouses and hospitals visited, and the glad tidings are told out to the poor and others who will give attention. There is a hearing ear, and, although there are difficulties, encouragements are numerous. Outcast young women have been sought, and the sick have been told of the Great Physician. During the year some thousands of tracts, and many New Testaments and Gospels, have been distributed among the sailors. Miss Liebhamer is entirely without fellowship in the Gospel, and she says she would find some of Mr. Spurgeon's sermons helpful. Bible Union cards, in English, French, and German, and almanacks with Scripture texts, in the same three languages, would also be very serviceable. Communications may be addressed Miss L. Liebhamer, Piræus.

EASTBOURNE CONFERENCE.

The second annual Missionary Conference was held on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, Dec. 3 to 5, in the Town Hall, and was very largely attended; the beautiful hall was crowded during the evening meetings.

The subjects for Conference were: The love of God in the gift of Christ Jesus; the world the object of that love; the believer's heart its home; the Church its temple; entire surrender its secret, and missions its work. All the meetings were fruitful in abundant blessing. Three were held each day, preceded by a prayer-meeting at ten o'clock.

The addresses during the three days were delivered by Dr. Morgan, vicar of St. Mary's, Leamington, Dr. Asa Mahan, Rev. C. G. Moore, of China Inland Mission, Messrs. Reginald Radcliffe, W. Spencer Walton, Reader Harris, W. T. Float, of North Africa Mission, Musa Bhai, of the Salvation Army in India, Dr. Cronin, Mr. John M. McAuliffe, Mrs. H. Whitall Smith, and Miss M. Leitch, of Ceylon.

The afternoons were occupied by accounts of mission work at home and abroad; that by waysides in England, by Mr. J. M. McAuliffe; in South Africa, by Mr. Spencer Walton; in North Africa, by Mr. Float; in China, by Rev. C. G. Moore; in Ceylon, by Miss Leitch, and the cause of Dr. Barnardo's Homes was pleaded by Mr. J. B. Wookey. We cannot doubt that the outcome of this happy and enthusiastic Conference, when so many souls were brought into liberty and joy, will be a deeper, fuller consecration of heart, and an intense interest in the absorbing themes under consideration during these three happy days. Hundreds left at the close deeply thankful for the help they had received.

As a practical outcome of the Conference some fifty believers gave in their names as being willing to go forth into the mission field if the Lord Himself opened the way; upwards of £300 was given to the foreign mission field; at least a hundred pounds' worth of jewellery was sent in as free-will offerings. Surely this is pleasing to our Lord Jesus Christ.

On Thursday a prayer-meeting was held; interesting cases of conversion of sinners, of wanderers restored, of believers quickened and cleansed, were mentioned to the praise of God, and very many rose up to repeat a promise or exhortation, or to offer prayer and praise. Further meetings were held in Longstone Hall where blessing still followed, and addresses were given there by Dr. Cronin, Mr. W. Spencer Walton, and Mr. John M. McAuliffe.

THE TABEETHA MISSION, JAFFA.—The twenty-fifth anniversary of this excellent institution was celebrated in the spring of the present year, when Christians, Jews, and Moslems joined in affectionate recognition of the untiring efforts of Miss Walker-Arnott. Many women in the region who are now mothers of families were educated in the Mission school, and, by the medical agency much good has from time to time been done among the people. The last report states that the schools remain in a prosperous condition. Their interests are certainly very near the hearts of many friends of missions in Great Britain. Miss E. Walker-Arnott, 24, St. Bernard's-crescent, Edinburgh, is hon. secretary of the committee.

EVANGELICAL CONTINENTAL SOCIETY.—The thirty-ninth report of this Society is a record of encouraging progress from many important centres. In France the Gospel has made inroads into Roman Catholic strongholds, and the priests have in some places taken alarm. Unfortunately there is a lack of workers to persistently follow up these efforts to counteract Popery, and disperse its superstitions. From Belgium, Austria, Spain, and Italy intensely interesting accounts have come of testimony borne to Christ in varying circumstances. Among the humble and unknown of the populations, triumphs which are none the less real because they do not strike the eye of casual observers are constantly being achieved. The office of the Society is 13, Blomfield-street, London Wall, E.C.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS.

Dear Sir,—The Committee of the Children's Special Service Mission will be glad to arrange, as far as possible, during the Christmas holidays, for special drawing-room meetings and magic lantern lectures. Will any of your readers who desire information forward to me a stamped addressed envelope?

All details as to magic lantern arrangements have now been printed, and I shall be pleased to forward a printed copy to any applicant. Early application is very desirable.—Yours faithfully,

H. Hutchinson, Organising Sec.

CHRISTMAS CRIES AND CHEER.

In the current number of Woman's Work there are some touching stories appealing for sympathy and help; the details of need are taken from notes supplied by the Mildmay Deaconesses, who patiently visit the poor in some of the most desolate parts of London, in their own homes, and by whom, with the most thrifty care, any relief is administered that friends lovingly send. The object of the special relief asked is to cheer the lot of the most needy during the worst weeks of winter, with necessary food, firing, and clothing, and to add to the slender pittance of the aged and sick and overworked, a small weekly allowance. The following is a specimen of the cases mentioned:—

"SOMETHING TO EAT YESTERDAY."

"I have been buying a penn'orth of coals, Miss, with a penny I borrowed from my landlady," was the apologetic greeting I received in the street one raw cold autumn evening this year, as the speaker opened her bag to show me the "penn'orth." She is no stranger to me. I know her, as her landlady has described her, as a respectable, energetic, industrious woman, a widow verging on sixty. However, the "penn'orth" is hard to forget. At my next call I pressed her closely as to her circumstances. In brief this is what I learned. She goes to two different houses as charwoman: she has worked there for years, and she receives at each 2s. 6d. a day. But as they do not need her every week, her earnings weekly amount to 2s. 6d. exactly; so does her rent. "But how do you live, Mrs. F.?" "I don't know, my dear; it has been very bad lately. The week before last I hadn't anything from Tuesday till Friday, and then they gave me a cup of tea and some food where I work." "And this week?" I had to press the question—the answer came reluctantly: "I had a cup of tea and something to eat yesterday." "And nothing since?" "No; but I had something yesterday." The tears sprang to my eyes. "The 'house' would be better," I suggested as gently as I could. "Yes; when I am too old to work, I should think it my duty to go, and no disgrace; but, you see, I can work now, if only I could get it to do; and as long as I can pay the rent of my little home I like to keep it." I looked round "the little home," a tiny back room, clean and neat, and thought how easily the rent could be paid for her, or even what a boon a shilling a week would be to her if only her story could reach someone with pity enough and money enough to give it.

Mrs. Codner, Conference Hall Office, Mildmay Park, London, N., receives contributions for relief in connection with the Mildmay Missions.

THAMES CHURCH MISSION.—An interesting testimony to the value of the work of this Society has recently been received from South America. Mr. W. S. Lawrence, a catechist of the South American Missionary Society at Mossel Bay, wrote to the secretary that amongst some effects landed from the wreck of the Rosebud schooner was a canvas bag of books bearing the stamp of the Mission. The books, of which there were about two dozen, being of no intrinsic value, the Customs officer allowed Mr. Lawrence to distribute them among the members of the Rocket Brigade, who had assisted in saving the lives of the shipwrecked crew, as mementoes of the wreck. Mr. Lawrence adds:—"I should like also to bear testimony to the far-spread influence and blessings of your work on emigrant ships. There is an emigrant here who finds daily comfort in a small Testament given him by one of your missionaries on leaving the Thames some years ago."

RE-UNITED.

A fair youth stood at his mother's side,
Her heart was heavy and sad;
For he was her only joy and pride,
This blue-eyed sailor lad.
And he must go forth from his home once more
To battle with stormy seas,
Which had made her a widow a year before;
And her mind was ill at ease.

But she heard a whisper low and sweet:
"Though earthly hopes be blighted,
There's a home above where in peace and love
Fond hearts are RE-UNITED."

The brave lad strove to be bright and gay,
Though his spirit was overcast;
For something told him that sad day
This voyage would be his last.
But duty called, and he must obey
With a heart devoid of fear,
And aboard of his ship he sailed away
From all that he held most dear.

And he sang as he kept his midnight watch:
"Though earthly hopes be blighted,
There's a home above where in peace and love
Fond hearts are RE-UNITED."

The lonely mother wept and prayed:
"Oh, Father, thy will be done
On Thee my faith and trust are stayed
To guard and protect my son."
But tidings came the ship was lost,
By tempest torn and riven;
And the mother the shadowy border crossed
To her husband and child in heaven.

For 'tis ever true of those who trust,
"Though earthly hopes be blighted,
There's a home above where in peace and love
Fond hearts are RE-UNITED."

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HOME.

The Inverness abstainers have just celebrated the jubilee of their society.

The offices of the National Temperance League have been removed to 33, Paternoster-row, E.C.

The liquor organisations are actively endeavouring to secure the election of their friends on County Councils.

In the counties of Brecon and Radnor every Calvinistic Methodist minister, preacher, and student, and nearly two-thirds of the deacons, are total abstainers.

The Travellers' National Total Abstinence Union in eight years has administered the total abstinence pledge to 6050 persons, the great majority of whom, it is believed, have stood firm.

The Manx Legislative Council has passed a Bill to increase licence fees, practically to abolish grocers' licences and also the "bonâ fide" traveller, and to give objectors to the issue of licences right of appeal.

The Committee for the Protection of Native Races against the liquor curse have memorialised Lord Salisbury to urge the German Government to join with Britain in opposing the evil, as Britain has joined with Germany against the slave trade.

Upwards of £8000 has been promised towards the sum of £10,000 which the United Kingdom Band of Hope Union is raising for the purpose of promoting temperance teaching in day schools and other educational institutions. Further promises are being solicited, amounts to be payable in five yearly instalments. The offices of the Union are 4, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

FOREIGN.

A drunkards' retreat is to be opened this month at Eilikon-sur-le-Thour, Switzerland.

The temperance awakening in Denmark has called forth active enthusiasm. The last general meeting of the Denmark Temperance Society received reports from 408 local societies, comprising a membership of 17,500. The general meeting for 1889 will be held at Veile, the birthplace of the Danish temperance movement.

Mr. W. S. Caine, M.P., has had a very cordial reception at Bombay. In a recent address there he said that his resolution in Parliament on the liquor traffic in India created the largest division on record on any Indian question; that the Abkari reports prove that drunkenness is making fearful progress; and that it is only a question of forty or fifty years until India will be as drunken as England.

EVANGELISTIC NOTES.

Mr. William Bradlaugh has commenced Gospel meetings in the Town Hall, Macduff, N.B.

Mr. Alex. Bell, of Glasgow, is holding evangelistic meetings at Fraserburgh; they are well attended.

Rev. George C. Grubb conducted evangelistic services in St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Belfast, last week, and it is believed much good was done.

Mr. C. G. Roger is conducting Gospel meetings in connection with the Hamilton Y.M.C.A. A very interesting and successful conference was held on Saturday.

Rev. R. C. Johnson has closed a fortnight's Gospel meetings in the Methodist Church, Banbridge. The services were well attended, and accompanied with blessing.

Evangelistic meetings are being held in the Argyle Hall, Cambuslang, in connection with the Baptist Church. The Gospel is faithfully preached and sung by Mr. Richard Murphy.

Evangelistic Mission.—The work around Banbury continues to give much encouragement. At one village, where a week's special services have just been concluded, twenty or more professed to have found Christ, and are rejoicing in Him.

A twelve days' mission has been concluded by Mr. and Mrs. Alexander, of London, at the Elevator Hall, Bank-road, Bootle, Liverpool. At nearly every meeting inquirers were brought to decision, and during the mission a goodly number professed to receive definite blessing.

Rev. Edward Clarke, of Spezia, writes to a friend in England of an awakening among Italian soldiers there:—"A remarkable work is advancing among the soldiers, and all has sprung from the blessing of God on a conversation with one corporal, who afterwards came to the Italian service. There have been as many as thirty-two corporals at our morning service lately; and, after the usual service, I hold another short service with them, by their special desire. God is, indeed, working in our midst."

Pemberton, near Wigan.—We have passed through a wonderful visitation of God's Spirit, during the visit of Gipsy Smith's sister and her husband, Mr. George Evens, of Frizinghall, at the Methodist Free Church here. There were crowded meetings nightly. On the last Sunday overflow meetings had to be held; the chapel and large schoolroom were crowded. Many, from the ages of seventeen to seventy, have professed to find Christ. Some of the worst men, mostly colliers, have given their hearts to Christ. J.P.

Sutterton, Lincolnshire.—A mission has been conducted in this village by Messrs. Brown and Neech, of the Evangelisation Society, and the Gospel was preached and its invitations pressed home in a most faithful and loving way. Some, it is believed, have been made willing in the day of God's power, and have received the forgiveness of sins. On December 3, a tea was provided, followed by an enthusiastic meeting, at which upwards of 200 persons were present. Addresses were given on praise and Christian stedfastness. A substantial thankoffering was sent to the Evangelisation Society.

Messrs. Middleton and Hogben have conducted a mission at Sandgate and at Cheriton during the past month. Owing to the removal of a number of the soldiers from Shorncliffe, and other causes, the attendance of the military was not equal to their desires. Some of the soldiers yielded their hearts to the Lord, and also a goodly number of civilians. Many Christians were brought into the possession of more abundant life, and others are seeking deliverance from the bondage of sin. On January 5, Messrs. Middleton and Hogben commence a mission at Dudley.

Bible Christians in China.—The news from missionaries in Yunnan Foo, China, is most encouraging. Revs. T. G. Vanstone and S. Pollard, with the agents of the C.I.M., have held a seventeen days' mission. It was preceded by a week of special prayer and a day of fasting. The people attended the two halls in crowds. Several professed openly a desire to serve Jesus Christ. It is calculated that from 8000 to 10,000 visits were paid to the two places. On September 16, three native converts were baptized, who gave open testimony that they were Christ's. A medical missionary is much needed for his part of the mission field.

Mr. Steedman, of Edinburgh, has finished a series of Gospel meetings in Fountainbridge Free Church (New Hall). Several decided for Christ.

Mr. George Clarke is to visit Ireland early in the New Year, and to hold united evangelistic meetings in Belfast, Derry, and various other centres.

Rev. E. P. Hammond writes from Jackson, Mich., U.S.A.:—Dec. 4. A good work has begun here. The pastors are earnestly united in the meetings.

Lisburn.—About 200 persons have professed to have decided for Christ in evangelistic services recently held in the Methodist Church here by Rev. Mr. Johnson and others.

Rev. James Kirkwood, assisted by Mr. Yewdall, has closed a series of Gospel meetings in the Methodist Church, Roscrea, at which many professed to have found the Saviour.

Sydenham.—A good work has been done in a fourteen days' mission at the Gospel hall, in Well's-road, by Mr. J. S. Brunning, of the Evangelisation Society. The evangelist is now labouring in Lincolnshire.

Bonhill Institute, N.B.—Miss Tyson, of New York, has held meetings during the past fortnight, chiefly for children, but largely attended by parents. The interest deepened, until at the close the meetings were crowded out. Many professed faith in Christ.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Harrison, from Australia, have conducted evangelistic services at Salem Chapel, Romford. Mr. Harrison has a most effective and impressive style of address. Mrs. Harrison serves the Master effectively by her sweet and expressive singing of the Songs of Zion. Many have professed conversion. J. M. S.

Methodist missions have been held at Great Bridgwater-street, Manchester; at Meanwood-road, Leeds; Victoria-road, Darlington; Wolstanton, Staffordshire; Etherley, Bishop Auckland; Castletown, Isle of Man; Tiverton, Somerset, and other towns. In each case there has been signal blessing, large numbers having yielded themselves to Christ.

Elgin, N.B.—A very successful fortnight's mission has been held here by Mr. J. A. Smith, of Aberdeen. The meetings were under the auspices of the Free High Church Young Men's Association, and a number of the members entered heartily into the work. The results of the mission are encouraging, quite a number having professed to receive salvation. Mr. Smith preaches with great power.

Major Whittle in Ireland.—This evangelist, aided by his son, has had a most successful term of Gospel effort at Ballymena. The people came in crowds from the surrounding districts. Many professed to accept Christ, some of the conversions being of a very striking kind. Three churches were in use for the closing night, and the meeting began an hour before the advertised time. The evangelist proceeded next to Coleraine, where there were also crowded gatherings, and much interest awakened. From Coleraine Major Whittle goes to Limerick, where the services will be in the theatre.

Y.M.C.A., Chelmsford.—A wave of blessing has been passing over Chelmsford. A most successful mission has been held in the Mechanics' Institute, conducted by Mr. Newton Jones, formerly a commercial traveller, but who has now devoted his life to evangelistic work, especially amongst young men. Sunday's services crowned the series. At the closing meeting the place was densely packed. Bible-readings and noon-day prayer-meetings have been conducted by the missioner daily. Christian friends, pray that the blessing we have experienced may prove lasting.
J. H.

Women Evangelists.—Mr. George Clegg, founder and director of the Halifax Training Home for Female Evangelists, has now eleven women evangelists at work under his direction. These young women are doing good service, especially in domiciliary visitation, and they are labouring in the Gospel with the ministers as those women did of whom the Apostle Paul makes grateful mention in his Epistle to the Philippians. The Church of Rome has known how to employ the peculiar gifts of devoted women for many generations. Now Methodism is beginning to do the same, and, while avoiding what is unscriptural as well as unnatural, we are endeavouring—both in the London West Central Mission and by means of Mr. Clegg's institution—to utilise the invaluable services of our daughters.—Methodist Times.

Manchester.—A special mission was commenced in Rev. Dr. Macfadyen's church, Chorlton-road, on Sunday week. The services were being conducted by Rev. R. F. Horton, of London, and Dr. Macfadyen.

Blyth.—A series of united special evangelistic services have been conducted in two Presbyterian churches of this town. This united effort to reclaim the lost has been largely blessed by God, not only in converting sinners, but in deepening, quickening, and strengthening the spiritual life of the two congregations, the members of which have been roused to further efforts to bring in the unsaved people of the town.

Ipswich.—A most successful parochial mission has been brought to a conclusion in the parish of Holy Trinity, Ipswich, Suffolk. The missioner was Rev. F. S. Webster. In conjunction with the Vicar (Rev. W. H. Williamson) some of the worst parts of the parish were visited, the two singing in the streets, and inviting the people to the church. Large numbers of men and women attended the services, and great blessing, it is felt, has resnlted.

Mr. J. Crofton Rainey's labours in the Gospel have of late been much blessed. After holding missions in various parts of the country he returned home to Paignton, South Devon, where he has conducted a series of special evangelistic services, at which all the Christian communions of the town have been represented. Not a few who attended the meetings have mixed with faith the Word of God, thereby securing salvation, and in consequence there has been great rejoicing. The entire mission, says a correspondent, has been a glorious triumph of Christ's Gospel.

The members of the Stormont-road Christian Mission will be pleased to render assistance in speaking at mission-rooms, halls, &c.; communications to Mr. W. Riley, of 39, Marney-road, Clapham Common, S.W.

MR. SPURGEON.—The latest accounts show that the reverend gentleman's health is improving, though slowly. His sojourn at Mentone, South France, will, it is understood, extend to the middle of next month.

WATER-STREET, NEW YORK.—The sixteenth anniversary of McAuley Water-street Mission, was lately held. The year's work under the superintendence of Mr. S. H. Hadley, has borne good fruit. Christ Jesus has been presented as the Saviour of the lost, many of whom have here heard the Gospel for the first time in their lives. Services are held every night of the week and every Sunday afternoon also. One of the converts of this Mission is Colonel Hadley, now in charge of the Avenue, a Mission of St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church. His brother, the superintendent at Water-street, attributes his own conversion to the influence of Jerry McAuley and the services at the Cremorne Mission on West Thirty-second-street.

RACE PREJUDICE.—At the recent Christian Convention, at Detroit, Mich., says the New York Evangelist, one brother, a noble representative of the coloured race, came as a delegate from the Pacific coast. His genial humour and earnest Christian spirit won him many friends, despite the fact that the hotel at which he stopped refused him admittance to the general dining-room; whereupon he quietly walked into the servants' hall and took his seat, followed by two well-known Christian gentlemen (white) whose names and labours are honoured in all the churches, and who, during the remainder of the sessions, shared the table with him. This event, as remarked by one of the helpers in the house, produced by its Christian courtesy the most salutary religious impression which that hotel had ever known.

MISSION WORK IN TIERRA DEL FUEGO.—Mr. E. C. Aspinall, of the South American Missionary Society, is in England, accompanied by one of the Christian aborigines from Tierra del Fuego. A few days ago Mr. Aspinall delivered an address on his work at the noon prayer-meeting, at 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C. During two years' residence among native tribes on the shores of the Straits of Magellan, he has seen much to cheer him. The people had no idea of religion when the missionaries first visited them; now they call God the strongest one, that is, the Almighty, and there are many earnest Christians among them. The Argentines, who are natives of Spanish origin, practise great cruelty towards the aboriginal tribes, and spread sad havoc among them by paying them in drink, instead of otherwise. As yet only a few tribes have been reached, but others are quite willing to listen to the missionary.

Two Books by Dr. Doudney.

Yet two more additions to the long list of books from the pen of Rev. D. A. Doudney, D.D., are before us. Each of these is of experimental value. Sympathy (1s. 6d.) is a second series of "Words for the Weak and Weary." The object of Something Secret (1s.) is to point out the way of life in vigorous "walks and talks." Throughout these works much wholesome teaching is set forth in gracious and sound words. (J. & A. Mack, 28, Paternoster-row.)

Bible Notes for Daily Readings.

For some years past Major Whittle has prepared notes on the International Sunday-school Lessons, and they have been issued monthly by Mr. Revell, of Chicago. These notes can now be had from Messrs. Partridge & Co., 9, Paternoster-row. The expositions are highly experimental and practical, as well as clear and vigorous. Major Whittle frequently introduces with effect some of the quaint and suggestive comments of Trapp, the Puritan writer, and also some of Mr. Moody's pointed and pithy sayings. For young converts and Bible students generally, these notes are highly to be commended. The monthly sets can be had at 1s. 6d. per year, post free.

Rev. A. Murray's New Book.

The Spirit of Christ. By Rev. Andrew Murray. Nisbet & Co. For the cultivation of a devout and practical piety the Church of the present day owes much to Mr. Murray. This book promises to be as helpful as those which have preceded it. There can be no doubt that many believers are sadly ignorant of the place the Spirit of Christ should occupy in their spiritual life. Failures, frequent and distressing, result from this ignorance. Here is a book for the help of such. In his his own quiet, clear, thoughful style, Mr. Murray seeks to press home the truth that the believer is "a temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwells in him." To all who desire practical help on this subject we heartily commend the prayerful reading of these daily portions.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Hebrew Mother's Mourning. By Sigma. Chas. Burnet & Co. A neatly bound little book, in four chapters, designed for the comfort of bereaved parents. The contents are simple, perhaps commonplace; but these are not defects in a book designed for such a purpose.

From Adam to Abraham, or Lessons in Genesis. By Rev. J. Gurney Hoare, M.A. Nisbet & Co. Forty-eight Bible lessons, covering only fourteen chapters of Genesis. Teachers of Bible-classes will find them useful. They are full of Gospel, and often exceedingly suggestive. The "word to the teacher" at the commencement of the book contains much valuable counsel.

Theological Review, and Free Church Quarterly. Hodder & Stoughton. This review contains three articles, thoughtful and good, on "Some Recent Books on Ecclesiastes"; "The Visions of Paul"; and "Creed Revision." The critical notices are valuable, though they sometimes go out of their way in order to express dissent from the most generally received view of the Atonement.

The Baptism of the Spirit, and other Sermons. By Rev. Charles New. Nisbet & Co. A volume of most helpful discourses—evangelical in sentiment, of a deeply spiritual and practical character. It will be found a valuable aid to the cultivation of a devout life. The author has the power of orderly and clear thinking, and can express his thoughts in simple and easy style. We heartily commend the book.

Bishop Cranworth. By Emma Marshall. 5s. Shaw & Co. Amongst the many story books of the higher order which press themselves upon public notice at this season, this will occupy a fairly high position. Readers who may be familiar with the narrative, from its appearance in The Fireside, will be glad to have it in this form, and others will be glad to make its acquaintance The story is well written, and the characters ably portrayed.

Uncle Steve's Locker. By Brenda. 5s. Shaw & Co. A very pretty story indeed. Little Dorothy is a dear!

A Line of Light in the days of King Arthur. By Ellis H. Weaver. 3s. 6d. Marshall Bros. The reader who expects in this book a pretty prose rendering of the Idylls of the King will be disappointed. The "Line of Light" is the "unbroken succession of Bishops and Archbishops in the land"—a fable of equal authority with the other legends recorded.

From Generation to Generation. By Emily Foster. 3s. 6d. National Temperance Depôt. This interesting volume is written under three titles—viz., Temperance Unknown, Temperance Rising, and Temperance Risen. It traces the history of a family (the Ashtons) from generation to generation, showing the ruin and unhappiness wrought in that home through the use of intoxicating liquors.

Our Little Dots (2s. 6d.) and Talkative Friends (2s.) in Field, Farm, and Forest, are two very pleasing books of pictures and stories for the little ones, and being externally artistic form attractive gift-books. The Child's Companion volume (2s. 6d.) still maintains its character as one of the best of children's annuals. The Cottager and Artisan (1s. 6d.) and The Tract Magazine (1s. 6d.), yearly volumes, are replete with really first-class matter for instruction, profit, and entertainment. In the former, the fine portraits of leading men form an important feature, and we must call attention to a little poem entitled "The Coming Man" (in the number for January, 1888), which is one of the prettiest pieces in the book.

The Gospel according to St. Paul. By Rev. J. Oswald Dykes, M.A., D.D. Nisbet & Co. The aim of this book, as stated in the author's preface, is "to restate in plain language, the course of the argument and the development of thought" through the first eight chapters of the Epistle to the Romans. It is sufficient commendation to say that his work is admirably done. Dr. Dykes writes like one who has not only understood, but has felt the power of the Apostle's teaching; and, in the earnest spirit of the Apostle, seeks to make his readers feel it too. His argument is clear and cogent; his doctrine healthy and evangelical; his language simple and forcible; his spirit practical and devout. Lovers of evangelical truth will find it a helpful and inspiring book.

Bible Truths and Church Errors. By William Urwick, M.A. T. Fisher Unwin. The Church Errors with which this author deals include Human Official Priesthood, Episcopal Succession, Baptismal Regeneration, Confession and Absolution, and the Sacrifice of the Mass. The snbjects are dealt with in a number of lectures, in which the Bible Truth is put in contrast with the Church Error. It is a good, and useful, and timely book. The author's style is clear and interesting; his quotations from Scripture are wisely made; and he succeeds in exposing the folly and danger of the errors he attacks. The chapter on "John Bunyan not a Baptist" will be convincing to some readers; though we cannot help the conviction that every quotation of the great allegorist on the subject of Baptism is open to a different inference from that which this author draws.

THE NORFOLK COUNTY INDUSTRIAL TRAINING SCHOOL, and Orphanage for Girls, Fakenham, has again passed a satisfactory Government inspection. During the past year nineteen girls have been sent out to service and five have migrated to Canada. This leaves 59 in the institution, 28 of whom are under orders of detention. Subscribers are invited to visit the institution, and judge for themselves whether it is not a privilege to help in carrying on the good work. A Nurse's Home is also carried on with much advantage to the public, under the superintendence of Miss S. Hamond. There is a staff of forty nurses, and through their intelligent and attentive care, many lives have been saved.

THE RED HOUSE HOME for Destitute Boys, at Musselburgh, is an institution which we should like to see multiplied in many centres of the United Kingdom. It is devoted to the shelter and training of destitute children, and for some years its operations have been carried on with very encouraging results. Their is a desire on the part of its friends to add to its agencies, and further develop its resources. "All about" the Home is pleasantly told by Mr. J. Forbes Moncrieff, secretary, 15, Hill-street, Edinburgh. In Scotland the "Red House" has many cordial supporters, but at present others are being sought, so that the institution may be freed from a burden of debt.

A Y.M.C.A. "AT HOME."

Our good friends of the Y.M.C.A., in catering for the needs of their special clients, are sometimes apt to overlook the social element that is so powerful in moulding the expanding life of youth. If the Y.M.C.A. is effectually to supply a "home" to those away from home, this feature of its work will have to be attended to.

The officials at Aldersgate-street are evidently alive to this. On Wednesday evening, last week, their rooms were thrown open for a pleasant gathering of the members and their lady friends. Refreshments were served, and the large reading-room was beautifully garnished with flowers. The programme of the evening included plenty of song. Some of the post-office officials very kindly brought their instruments, and gave working illustrations of the wonders of telegraphy. A workman from Messrs. Doulton's Lambeth establishment was there with his potter's wheel; under his skilful touch, rude lumps of clay were fashioned as if by magic into articles of beauty and utility. Everything was done by Mr. Burn and his helpers to give the young friends a time of real social entertainment.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—The following are the portions for the ensuing week:—Sun., Dec. 23, James v. 1—11; Mon., Dec. 24, James v. 12—20; Tues., Dec. 25, Luke ii. 1—20; Wed., Dec. 26, Psalm xcv. 1—11; Thurs., Dec. 27, Psalm xcvi. 1—13; Fri., Dec. 27, Psalm xcvii. 1—12; Sat., Dec. 29, Psalm xcviii. 1—9.

AMONGST THE LEPERS.—Mr. Edward Clifford, of whom it was recently stated that he was about to join Father Damien in his work amongst the lepers of Molokai, one of the islands of the Hawaiian group, has gone to Molokai only to visit the leper colony and Father Damien, and with no intention of remaining more than a few weeks. His purpose in going is not only to express sympathy, but to obtain additional information as to the treatment of leprosy. In notifying this, his sister, Miss Mary Clifford, brings to remembrance that the conduct of some of the Moravian missionaries closely resembled that of Father Damien. They too, she says, cut themselves off from the rest of the world, and devoted themselves to the service of lepers. The Moravian Leper Hospital at Jerusalem, we may mention, is a well-known and admirable institution.

BISHOP WILLIAM TAYLOR, who is now in his 68th year, left New York for a second four years' sojourn in Africa, on December 1. Notwithstanding his age, says an American contemporary, with unabated vigour he plunges into the wilds of Africa, to accomplish a work sufficient to tax the physical energies of the strongest men, thirty years his junior. Fevers, which frighten thousands from the African coast; perils from the blood-thirsty character of the natives; life under a burning equatorial sun—these have no terrors for him. He is "moving out on the high lines of human impossibilities," he says, "trusting alone in Him with whom all things are possible," and he is strong in faith for the conversion to Christ of the heathen millions of the "Dark Continent." Bishop Taylor will preside over the annual Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, which is to be held at Greenville, Liberia, on January 10.

REFORMATORY EMPLOYMENT OF WOMEN.—Colonel Howard Vincent, M.P., presided over a meeting held a few days ago at the Conference Hall, Clapham-road, S.W., at which this important subject was considered. The laundry carried on close to the Hall is one of the ten institutions devoted to the reformation and employment of discharged prisoners, founded by Mrs. Meredith, and the Chairman made special reference to the excellence of its arrangements and the enormous advantages it offers to a class who would otherwise have great difficulty in obtaining employment. Mrs. Meredith explained that during the year 901 women have been employed at the laundry. The institution requires considerable extension, and she suggested that a syndicate of gentlemen might be formed to take the matter up. Mr. Gainsford Bruce, Q.C., M.P., in the course of some appropriate remarks, said that more such institutions are sadly needed in the country.

THE HUSBANDMEN:—DEFIANT BUT DESTROYED.

LUKE XX. 9—18.

THE parable of the Wicked Husbandmen was spoken to the "chief priests, and scribes, and elders," at Jerusalem (comp. Mark xi. 27, and xii. 1); and they were made to know that it was spoken "against them" (ver. 12).

(1) NOTE THE PRIVILEGES OF THE HUSBANDMEN (ver. 9).—They were appointed to take charge of a vineyard in the capacity of tenants. Observe (a) That the vineyard had been duly planted.—Balaam spoke of the condition of Israel in Canaan as being like trees which the Lord had planted (Num. xxiv. 6). Asaph, referring to the settlement of Israel in Canaan, said, "Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt; Thou hast cast out the heathen and planted it" (Ps. lxxx. 8). (b) That it was carefully separated.—"An hedge" (Mark xii. 2). See this idea of separation, in Eden (Gen. iii. 24); in Jerusalem (Ps. cxxv. 2); and in the new Jerusalem (Rev. xxi. 12, 14). So was it with the whole of Israel's inheritance. There was a geographical separation. There was also a separation arising out of the Divine presence and favour (called "a wall of fire," Zech. ii. 5). The artificial barrier was but a symbol of the Divine. (c) That it was well furnished.—"Wine fat" (Mark xii. 2). This was the principal furniture of a vineyard, and was necessary for the operations of the vintage. The Lord provided all that was needful for the perfect cultivation of godliness, and does so still (2 Pet. i. 3). (d) That it was properly guarded.—"Built a tower" (Mark xii. 2). The tower in a vineyard was used by watchers (Isa. v. 2), who, from their elevated position, could see the approach of thieves or wild animals, and use means to drive them away. So Israel was guarded by the Lord Himself (Ps. cxxi. 3, 4). (e) That it was let to the husbandmen.—Their position was one which gave them an interest in the produce. All they were required to do for the owner was to give him a certain proportion of the vintage.

(2) NOTE THE RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE HUSBANDMEN.—They were but tenants ("let it forth," ver. 9); and as such they were responsible to the owner of the land. They were responsible for (a) The cultivation of the vineyard.—Nothing is said here of the neglect of this duty; for the parable was not intended to deal with this. Yet the Jewish leaders were guilty in this matter. (b) Rendering a proportion of the produce to the owner.—They had a right to their own share; but they were bound by their agreement to hand over to the owner his share.

(3) NOTE THE SINS OF THE HUSBANDMEN (vv. 3—8).—Observe (a) Their cruelty to the servants.—See this in their treatment of the servants (vv. 10—12). See here a representation of the treatment accorded to the long succession of Jewish prophets. Comp. Jer. xliv. 4; Neh. ix. 26; and Heb. xi. 37. (b) Their indifference to the long-suffering of the owner.—The owner might have done at first what he did in the end (ver. 16); but instead of that he kept sending one messenger after another. See here the marvellous patience of our God (1 Peter iii. 20). (c) Their dishonesty (vv. 3, 7). Comp. "empty," ver. 10, and "ours," ver. 14. They sent no part of the vintage to the owner, but devoted all their efforts to the accumulation of personal gain. (d) Their treatment of the son (vv. 13, 14).—This was their crowning sin—the culmination of their iniquity—the climax of their villainy. Yet this was what some who heard the parable were soon to do (ver. 12).

(4) NOTE THE PUNISHMENT OF THE HUSBANDMEN (ver. 16).—According to Matthew (xxi. 40, 41), the question of the 15th verse was answered by those standing by Christ compelling them to condemn themselves out of their own mouths, as Isaiah had done before (Isa. v. 3). See here (a) Destruction.—The reluctance of the owner to destroy the wicked husbandmen is seen in the frequent messages sent, and reveals the long-suffering of God. Comp. Luke xiii. 8, and 2 Pet. iii. 9. But the day of grace ended (Luke xix. 42), as it will for all rejectors of salvation (2 Cor. vi. 2). See Jer. viii. 20; Matt. xxv. 10; Rev. xiv. 19. For the priests and scribes and elders, destruction came with the overthrow of Jerusalem (Matt. xxiv. 27, 28). (b) Deprivation.—"The vineyard unto others." The kingdom of God was no longer to be a Jewish institution. What of the rejected son? Read carefully ver. 17. It is a quotation from Psalm cxviii., in which the people had found the ascriptions of praise which they uttered on the day of the entry into Jerusalem (Mark xi. 9, 10). The Rejected was to be the Exalted. The stone cast away was to be the head of the corner. Jesus, the crucified, was to be the Foundation of the great temple which God is building now.

International S. S. Lesson.

Sunday Afternoon, December 30.

HEEDLESS YOUTH MAKES CHEERLESS AGE.

ECCLES. xii. 1—8; GOLDEN TEXT, MARK viii. 36.

To those who are not prepared to review the last quarter's lessons we suggest the above as suitable to the close of the year. This is a time when solemn thoughts about life, its aims, tendencies, and end, are natural and common. Teachers will do well to improve such an opportunity.

This passage stands in close connection with foregoing context (xi. 7—10), in which the preacher speaks to the pleasure-loving and wilful, who are bent simply on having "a good time." He warns the young man who is determined to "rejoice in his youth" that bright days don't last for aye; that darkness follows, and the judgment is certain. Then, following close upon this stern warning, comes the gentler message of our lesson—"Remember now thy Creator," &c. Acquaint thyself with God and be at peace. His favour is life, and his loving-kindness better than life.

In this passage, the body is thought of as a house, the tenant, or occupier, being the immortal spirit.

WHILE THE EVIL DAYS COME NOT, &c.—Now, while everything is bright, and the house is flooded with sunshine and beauty; now, when the clouds do not return after the rain, like trouble upon trouble, but when clear shining follows cloud: Now, remember thy Creator. It is much easier (and how much safer and better!) to learn God's love, and to love Him, in the bright freedom of youth, than in the dark and cloudy day. This point may need careful enforcement, for many young folk do not believe it.

IN THE DAY WHEN THE KEEPERS OF THE HOUSE SHALL TREMBLE, &c.—Here old age is likened to a house going to decay. The picture is wonderfully beautiful, but terribly sad. We must never forget, however, that this is very specially a picture of godless age—the decay of one whose delights are in earthly things only. Age need not be dark: it is only age without God, without true hope and comfort, that is so cheerless. The pleasure-loving are bidden look forward to a time when the springs of present pleasures will be dry. Contrast with this terrible photograph of dismal old age, the blessed and honoured old age of the truly godly—the outward man decaying, while the inward man increaseth; the hoary head a crown of glory; the light of heaven, now so near, brightening all the life. It is like a calm, rich sunset closing a day that began in rain and tempest. "Let my last end be like his!"

Two views are taken of this passage. According to one, "The inmate of the house notices a coming storm, the light of the sky darkens, clouds march over the scene, strong men are alarmed at the portent, and tremble; work ceases, the doors are shut, the bird rises up with alarm, music is stayed, and all within await in terror. So in old age do all the faculties become conscious of the approaching tempest of death."

According to the other, the different members of the body are severally described. "The keepers of the house"—arms and hands now feeble and trembling. "The strong men," &c.—the legs now weak and bent. "The grinders," &c.—the failing teeth. "Those that look out of the windows"—the eyes grown dim and dull. "The doors," &c.—lips once open with laughter and jest, now compressed. "Sound of the grinding is low"—life's work done. "He shall rise up," &c., is better translated, "It is as the voice of the sparrow," and refers to the weak, thin voice of old age, its piping treble. "All the daughters of music" refers to the sadness of age, too deaf or too indifferent to enjoy music.

"Also when they shall be afraid," &c.—The timidity of age is referred to. "The almond tree shall flourish."—White blossoms in winter, on a leafless tree, fit symbol of the old man's hoary head. "The grasshopper shall be a burden."—Very little things are a burden to the aged. This clause gives teachers a capital opportunity to teach the much-needed lesson of kindness and consideration for the old folk. "Desire shall fail"—appetites grow feeble. How terrible to him whose chosen pleasures are those of sense! These are the features that mark the tenant just as his lease expires, and he "goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets."

And now the house is empty: the passer-by looks in. Lo! the golden lamp that used to hang suspended by a silver chain lies shattered on the floor. Someone loosened the chain; the lamp fell, and was broken.

Just outside the house is the well: over it the wheel by which the pitcher was lowered. Now, both the pitcher is broken, and the wheel also. "The activities of life exist no longer."

LESSONS.

(1) The awful condition of age without God; all its treasure failing, because powers of enjoyment fail. Consider, too, the judgment that follows.

(2) Compare with this the beauty and joy of age when blessed by God—bright with thanksgiving, kindness, love, faith, and hope.

(3) God-fearing youth leads to beautiful old age.

(4) The great lesson of all: Remember now, NOW, thy Creator, &c. Everybody intends to remember Him some day. Who so impious as to say, I will never turn to God? In nothing is delay more dangerous than in this most important business of all. Will it really be easier to-morrow? Oh, will not to-day's putting off make to-morrow's decision harder than to-day's? Begin 1889 as a true follower of Jesus Christ.

ILLUSTRATION.—The princes of the pit sat in council, the question in debate being how to ruin the soul of a certain well-taught, well-trained, and well-intentioned young man. "I will go to him," said one, "and will excite his appetite, and spread before him all the allurements of guilty pleasures; and so will I ruin him." "It is well spoken," said his hearers. Then another arose. "I," said he, "will tempt him to think lightly of religion, to be sceptical of the Bible, and to laugh at holy things; so will I ruin him." Still louder applause greeted this proposal. "Nay," said a third, "he will not heed temptations like these. I will tell him of the glory of learning, and of the crown given to successful men. So will I lure him till he loses thought of his soul in strong ambitions for worldly distinction." When the cheers that followed this speech had died away, one wilier than all the others arose and said: "Ye know nothing at all. This young man is too strong, and wise, and earnest to listen to any of these. I will go to him and bid him seek the Lord, pray, read his Bible, and live a truly Christian life; but at the end of all I will whisper: "Only not to-day, but to-morrow; to-morrow—TO-MORROW, and so will I ruin him." Then all agreed that none had spoken so wisely as he had done.

OBITUARY.

REV. G. MOIR, AVOCH.

REV. GEORGE MOIR, Congregational minister of Avoch, recently died. He commenced his public career in Muirs of Fyvie as a schoolmaster. Some time after he was appointed East Coast missionary at Macduff, where his labours were much appreciated. Going to Nottingham to complete his studies, he afterwards received a call to the East Congregational Church, Greenock, where he laboured eight years. From Greenock he was transferred to the Albion-street Congregational Church in Aberdeen, where he remained other eight years, doing a great work among the poorer classes. His health having broken down in Aberdeen, he accepted a call to the Congregational Church in Avoch, where he has now ended his career. Mr. Moir was highly esteemed by all classes, and was one of the chief instruments in revival movements at Avoch, which were recorded in our columns at the time.

"THE PILGRIM'S PROGRESS" has been translated into Swahili, the language spoken in Zanzibar and its neighbourhood. The Religious Tract Society have borne a considerable portion of the cost.

Among the Churches.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Rev. Sir Emilius Laurie, who is widely known as a devout evangelical clergyman, is about to resign the vicarage of St. John the Evangelist, Paddington, W., in which parish he has ministered with much acceptance and blessing during the past twenty-one years.

The Australian Christian World learns on good authority that soon after his return to Sydney the Primate (Dr. Barry) may be expected to resign the Bishopric of Sydney. The English physicians strongly advise Mrs. Barry not to return to Australia, on account of the climate.

It is proposed to hold a Conference of Evangelical Churchmen, both clerical and lay, in the early part of next summer. The suggestion has been very generally concurred in, and the requisition has been signed by the leading representatives of every shade of opinion amongst evangelical Churchmen.

BAPTIST.

A Conference on Spiritual Life and Power is to be held at Bath in connection with the Baptist Ministers' and Missionaries' Prayer Union on February 4, 5, and 6.

Rev. G. Wainwright, who a few months ago removed from Grosvenor Chapel, Manchester, to Westbourne, Bournemouth, is setting aside the tradition that the congregation are all saints on Sunday morning and sinners at night. Consequently he is preaching and teaching the Gospel on Sunday mornings with good effect.

At Princes-street Chapel, Northampton, under the pastorate of Rev. G. Crossby Roberts, a good work is being done. The pastor commenced his labours in June last, and since that time forty members have been added to the church. On Sunday, December 2, twenty-five new members received the right hand of fellowship, and three days later eighteen were baptized.

At the seventh anniversary of Rev. J. Wesley Boud's settlement at Penge Tabernacle, it was reported that during the year eighty-three members (fourteen from the Sunday-school) have been added to the Church, making a total of 538 during Mr. Boud's ministry. The report also gave particulars of fourteen branches of work in connection with the church, including mission stations.

METHODIST.

The Wesleyans at Hatfield are to be allowed to retain the use of the building which they had received notice to quit three weeks ago, until the beginning of next June. They hope to commence the building of their new chapel in March.

The opening of Iver Grammar School, near Uxbridge, as a Wesleyan Mission Chapel took place on Wednesday, December 5. The outlook here, says The Methodist Times, is most cheering. It is believed that the opening of this Mission will supply a long-felt need of the neighbourhood, there being hitherto in this large and increasing parish (now numbering 3000 souls) nothing but the services of the Established Church.

Rev. R. S. Greene, rector of Cross Canonby, Cumberland, lately wrote requesting the use of the Crosby Villa Primitive Methodist Chapel for the purpose of holding a regular week-night service, that place being a considerable distance from the parish church. The application was readily granted, and in future at Crosby Villa will be witnessed the unusual spectacle of a clergyman preaching in a Primitive Methodist pulpit.

The Wesleyan committee appointed some time ago to consider the question of the employment of lay agents will recommend that Rev. Thomas Champness shall be set apart next year for the purpose of extending the Joyful News Mission. Mr. Champness regards this as a call from God for further service, and he has decided to take a larger house for training his evangelists so that the work may be pushed forward still more energetically.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

A powerful awakening has taken place in Antananarivo, the capital of Madagascar, where Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, of the American W.C.T.U., has been delivering addresses.

A day-school at Dar Bsaleem, of the Lebanon, has just been re-opened. The priests had bribed the people away, but now the Friends, after urgent entreaty, had returned to the Gloe village. Baltimore Friends sustain the work there.

The cry for help from Robert and Mary J. Davidson for heathen China is being answered, in part, and they are soon to have Caroline Nicholson Southall, of Leeds, with them. In company with other missionaries to China, she sailed on the 13th inst. Before leaving her useful work in Great Wilson-street, a solemn and touching farewell meeting was held, and several presentations were made, and loving words and prayers expressed. Four years ago she had felt the call, and now the Lord's time for obedience and service had come.

Western Quarterly Meeting, held at Gloucester on the 12th inst., was a time of much blessing. John T. Dorland was favoured with great clearness and power, both in the ministry and oversight meeting, and in those for worship and Bible-study. A foreign mission collection on one Sunday in the year, after the pattern of "Hospital Sunday," was agreed to, and a committee embracing all the foreign mission representatives established. The subject of peace too is to be pushed, especially among ministers and teachers, and by literature and lectures.

PRESBYTERIAN.

Lady Grisell Baillie, Dryburgh Abbey, has been admitted to the office of deaconess by the Presbytery of Selkirk.

The Presbyterian congregation at Silverhill, St. Leonards-on-Sea, has, during the past two years, been greatly prospering, especially among the working classes. Rev. W. Armstrong, the minister, has given great attention to evangelistic and temperance work, and has succeeded in a remarkable manner in gaining the affection and esteem of the working people in the neighbourhood.

SALVATION ARMY.

New barracks have been opened at Winchester.

The Army have begun active operations at Keith, N.B.

The report of the junior soldiers' section is issued in an attractive little pamphlet, entitled, "The Coming Army."

A good work has been done during the two years the King's-cross corps has been opened; 250 converts have been enrolled.

On Thursday, last week, Miss Celestine Schoch was married to Major Oliphant, who five years ago was curate, under Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe, of Kensington.

NOTES FROM IRELAND.

The British and Foreign Sailors' Society held during the year, in Belfast, twenty-seven services for Scandinavian sailors, and a hundred services for English seamen. Nearly 10,000 sailors of various nationalities visited the reading-rooms during the year.

The Townsend-street Presbyterian Church, Belfast, of which Rev. Wm. Johnson, D.D., is the pastor, raised a sum of £2205 for various purposes during the year, circulated 10,000 religious tracts, has over 700 members on its roll, and has four Sabbath-schools, with an average attendance of 1000 children.

There are now 198 persons of various ages, from four years to ninety years, under the care of the Belfast Mission to the Blind. During the past year ten of those under the care of the Mission died, but it is believed they went home rejoicing in their Saviour. The Mission employs a Bible-woman and trained nurse, and is evidently doing a good work.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."

Rev. J. F. Witty, late vicar of St. Matthew's (parish), Sheffield, which he resigned in 1878, after a fruitful ministry of twenty-seven years.—Rev. Nathaniel Thomas, one of the leaders of the Baptist denomination in Wales.

EDUCATE ONLY A MAN'S HEAD and you make him an infidel. Educate only a man's heart and you make him a fanatic. Educate them both together and you have the noblest work of God.—Dr. Talmage.

MR. WILLIAM NOBLE.—We deeply regret to state that this earnest advocate of the cause of Gospel temperance is suffering from the overstrain of incessant work, and is compelled to take a period of absolute rest. We trust he may soon be restored to health and the important service to which he has devoted his life.

MR. W. J. LEWIS.—We are sorry to hear that Mr. William Joseph Lewis, our old friend who delved so long and so successfully among the poor of Spitalfields, is passing through a time of much trial consequent upon the prolonged suffering and helpless state of his wife from rheumatic gout. He writes to Mr. Sharpless: "Though the strain in various ways has been very great, yet God's grace has indeed been sufficient for me, and his strength has been made perfect in my weakness."

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on a twelve days' mission, to be conducted by Mr. Charles Garnett, at the Brook-street Wesleyan Chapel, Congleton, commencing Dec. 26.——For blessing on special evangelistic services in the Gospel Hall, Lye, Stourbridge, from Dec. 16 to Jan. 6, conducted by Mr. J. Whiting, of the Evangelisation Society.——For blessing on two young missionaries, Messrs. P. H. Shaul and Arthur Le Feuvre, going to Bengal, India, under the new scheme being started by the C.M.S. for sending out lay evangelists.——For a blessing on all Christmas letters sent to the sick and others.

MISSION HALL, NEATH.—We are endeavouring to raise funds before the end of December to enable us to carry on our work in Neath. During the past eleven months we have taken the names of 111 persons who have professed to have found Christ at the services. The changed lives of these converts prove the reality of their conversion. Large numbers also are led to sign the pledge at our Gospel temperance services. Cottage prayer-meetings are conducted every week, and also visitation amongst the people. A good work is being done for the children at the Mission-room, Melincrythan.

The Brothers Joshua, Evangelists, Neath.

Appeals.

Gibraltar.—Rev. J. Grimshaw, Wesleyan chaplain, Gibraltar, asks for back numbers of periodicals and illustrated papers for distribution among soldiers, especially the sick in hospital.

Camberwell Mission and Ragged Schools.—Throughout the winter free breakfasts are provided for destitute adults, and dinners for the children. The secretary is Mr. F. Rainey, 67, Grove Hill-road, Champion-hill, S.E.

"Star Villa" Orphan Home, Penrhyn Lodge, West Hill, Hastings, is a strictly evangelical institution, conducted on the family system. Since 1882, thirty-seven orphans have been cared for. New supporters are much wanted at the present time. Mrs. H. Willis is the hon. superintendent.

Billingsgate Christian Mission.—The hon. secretary, Mr. A. Walters, Lower Thames-street, E.C., states that the Mission desire to give dinner orders on coffee stalls to the unemployed starving on the pavement, and to homeless tramps. The missionary reports much suffering among the resident poor.

Zenana Medical College, 58, St. George's-road, S.W.—Who will give the means to provide scholarships for two Syrian girls, pupils of a former student who, feeling the immense value of her own training at the College, entreats us to receive them as free students?—Dr. G. de G, Griffiths, hon. secretary.

Working Men's Mission, Collingwood-street, New Cut, S.E.—The Brothers Thomas and James Young, 32, Nelson-square, Blackfriars-road, S.E., write: We are greatly in need of funds to carry on the work among the destitute in this very poor district.—Joseph Ashton, 167, Norwood-road, Herne Hill, S.E., is secretary.

Hatfield-street Ragged School and Mission, Golden-lane, London, E.C.—The destitution of many families in this locality is very distressing. We are desirous of relieving, to the extent of our means, many deserving cases personally known to us. Mr. G. A. Robottom, hon. secretary, 115, Winston-road, London, N.

St. Luke's, Camberwell, is a very poor parish, and many of the 13,000 inhabitants will not only be without comforts, but in absolute need at the present season. A distribution of parcels of necessaries is proposed, and contributions will be thankfully received by Miss Haultain, St. Luke's Mission Rooms, Camberwell, S.E.

Rev. Thomas Jackson, 41, Powerscroft-road, Lower Clapton, E., pastor of the Clapton-park Tabernacle, writes: We are labouring with a sad heart among the poor of this district. We are now without funds, and the soup kitchen, children's free dinners, and free meals to outcasts cannot be resumed unless help is forthcoming.

Fox-court Ragged School and Mission.—There are no funds available for the relief of the sick and poor in connection with this Mission in the neighbourhood of Gray's Inn-road. The practice is to give relief in the form of food and coal tickets, and never without due investigation. Contributions may be sent to Mr. H. W. Elcum, 13, Bedford-row, W.C.

The East-end of London.—There is at present acute want here. Several deaths from starvation have taken place, and heart-rending tales could be told of the sufferings of many. Mr. Frederick N. Charrington, Great Assembly Hall, Mile-end, E., will be glad to receive contributions towards its alleviation. Every case will be investigated, and every penny spent in food, the workers being all volunteers.

Field Lane Refuges and Ragged Schools.—This excellent institution, as useful as it is many-sided, in looking after old and young, poor and helpless, requires about £4000 a year to keep all its agencies in action. It is deserving of generous support. At the present season there are special demands upon its resources. The secretary, Mr. Peregrine Platt, may be addressed at the Schools, Vine-street, Clerkenwell-road, E.C.

The Latymer-road Mission provides 2000 halfpenny dinners every week, one half of them to hungry children who can pay nothing. The distress is so great at the present time that the Mission workers are anxious to provide more of these free meals, and give more sick relief. The Mission operations include evening shelters for boys and girls, and many other valuable agencies. Contributions will be gratefully received by Miss Florence M. Gladstone, at the Mission House, Blechynden-street, Notting-hill, W.

Learning by Heart Union.—The cards for 1889 have been sent out. The Secretary will be glad to receive the names of any new members. Subject for next year—"The Daily Life and Walk of the Christian." The Card is 3d. Mrs. May, 59, Freelands-road, Bromley, Kent.

The Ruby Almanac.—Following the plan adopted last year, Messrs. Wheeler Bros., 88, Mildmay Park, N., invite Christians to send their "favourite text" from Holy Writ, for insertion in the Ruby Almanac for 1889. The text and reference, with name and address (not for publication), should be written on a post-card, and forwarded to the Editor of the Almanac, at the address given above.

Pastor Anet, of Brussels, has lately been visiting some of the churches in Canton Vaud, in order to acquaint them with evangelistic work in Belgium. As nearly half the pastors and evangelists who take part in this effort are French Swiss, it has a special interest for them. The Bible occupies a very important place in the work. Nine Bible-readers and five colporteurs are employed. The introduction of the Bible into families through the Sunday-school children has resulted in some cases in leading whole families to Christ from Romanism.—Journal Religieux.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN HOLLAND.—Sinc 1878 the evangelical Christians of Holland have mad great sacrifices in order to maintain Christian schools, i opposition to the Government schools, from whic religion is completely excluded. To-day the number free Christian schools is 430, attended by 77,000 scholar and conducted by 1100 teachers. The needful fun are raised by donations and voluntary fees. The annu cost is 3,000,000 francs, and when it is borne in mi that the Protestant population of Holland is on 2,700,000, it will appear evident that the schools are heavy charge upon the members of the Reformed fai

FRIENDLESS AND FALLEN.

DONATIONS NOW MOST ACCEPTABLE BEFORE CHRISTMAS DAY

To the Readers of "The Christian."

Practically the 31st year's work of the Institution is now completed, and may be summarised thus—

1st. The Committee had hoped to have been able to have transferred the work of the Open-all-Night Refuge to the Central Home, 200, Euston Road. They submitted Architect's plans of Proposed Alterations to the Metropolitan Board of Works. But after much trouble and delay, their proposals were refused. They hope, however, that when the powers of that body get transferred to the New County Council, they may be more successful. Meanwhile, the Committee have determined that 37, Manchester Street, shall be continued for the lower and even the lowest amongst the outcast class, that they may have "A Place for Repentance."

2nd. The Home, 200, Euston Road, will be used as far as possible as an Immediate place of Reception for the more select cases by night as well as by day.

3rd. In the interest of the Friendless Virtuous, the Committee have purchased the ground lease of the house 459, Holloway Road, and placed it in the hands of Trustees, viz., F. A. Bevan, Esq., Professor Gladstone, and J. F. Fortescue, Esq., and thus Another Training Home for young girls, also a temporary Home for young Servants while out of Situations will be established, where, by the payment of a small weekly sum, they may secure Board and Lodging under Christian and Total Abstinence principles, and be assisted to Respectable Situations as domestics.

4th. One Thousand Two Hundred and Forty Friendless and Outcast Young Women and Girls have been brought to the Office, 200, Euston Road—some from Special Missions to the Fallen, others direct from the Gaol Doors, the Streets, and Dens of Infamy—some have been brought by Day, others by Night—Country Girls, Orphans, &c.

5th. 540 have been received into the Open-all-Night Refuge, and a large proporton of these have been permanently helped.

6th. 520 have been received into the various Homes. The Gospel of the Grace of God has been proclaimed in all the Homes. Bible and other Classes, Temperance Meetings, &c., have been held with much encouragement.

Temporal wants, Five Hundred Average Donations of £1 each, and the expenses of the Work for 1888 will be met: may I ask for this Further Sympathy?

MESSRS. MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster Buildings, will, as usual, take charge of Donations, or they may be sent to

THE COW CROSS MISSION.

Under the General Superintendence of

MR. WILLIAM CATLIN.

25th ANNUAL APPEAL.

This Mission has for its primary object the preaching of the Gospel in the Mission Hall, and in adjacent Factories, Hospitals, Workhouses, Prisons, Public Houses, in Open Air, by the Sale of Bibles, and reading aloud the Word of God in great thoroughfares; by Cottage Meetings and House-to-House visitation; also Bible Readings, Mothers' Meetings, Temperance Lectures, Sunday and Week Evening Instruction to the Inhabitants of the parish of Clerkenwell, which has a population of 70,000 souls.

The efforts of the Mission are conducted under the general supervision of well-known Christian Friends, on purely undenominational principles. Annual Report published in March.

The prayerful sympathy and pecuniary help of the people of God are greatly needed at this moment, and are earnestly appealed to, on behalf of this thoroughly Evangelistic work, that it may continue, as in past years, to be a means of spiritual blessing to perishing sinners, and that help in temporal things may not be lacking for the sick poor during the inclement season of Winter. It is sincerely to be hoped that through such help we may be enabled to continue our Halfpenny Dinners to the thousands of poor little children who will doubtless crowd in upon us till the second week in March. We are not assisted by any "society."

A SPECIAL APPEAL.

"Retiring poverty still hides its head," and must be sought out to be relieved. We are particularly anxious to provide a plain but substantial dinner for a certain number of poor families, well known to us, especially those of the "household of faith," on Christmas Day at their own homes (distribution on Christmas Eve); also during the first week of the New Year, to give our Sunday School and Band of Hope Children an extra dinner of Roast Beef and Plum Pudding, and some articles of Warm Winter Clothing, &c.

Contributions will be thankfully received at the Office of THE CHRISTIAN, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.; at the Office of WORD AND WORK, 48, Paternoster-row, E.C.; by Mr. G. KIRKHAM, 9, Ribblesdale-road, Hornsey, N.; Mr. F. NEWTH, 44, Percival-street, Clerkenwell, E.C.; also by

Yours obediently in the Lord Jesus,

Gen. Supt.

HOMES of HOPE,

4, , & 6, REGENT SQUARE, GRAY'S-INN ROAD
LONDON, W.C.

Special efforts are made on behalf of mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.

A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women, before they become mothers, as are unfitted, from their previous good character and position, to mix with others.

The Committee are obliged to make an urgent appeal for contributions:—

1. For the General Fund: the expenses of which amount to about £5 a day.
2. For the Child's Fund: a guinea or two to pay the nurses would in many cases rescue a mother and child. Five Shillings would pay for a child for a week.
3. For Law Expenses: in every case if it be possible the men are compelled to pay the sum allowed by law for the child's support.

The applications are so distressing and urgent that every shilling has been spent.

The Committee are in very urgent need of £250.

WORKING MEN'S MISSION,

COLLINGWOOD STREET, NEW CUT, S.E.

TO THE READERS OF "THE CHRISTIAN."

We beg very earnestly to appeal to your benevolence on behalf of the work of the above Mission, in connection with the POOR & UNEMPLOYED OF THE NEW CUT, LAMBETH, & DISTRICT.

Last winter the number relieved EXCEEDED 25,000. Much more might have been done in this beneficent work had Funds permitted. We are surrounded at all times by a numerous population of POOR AND NEEDY PEOPLE, but the distress is most severely felt during the COLD WINTER MONTHS. The distress falls very severely upon the many Poor Widows and the Children. These crowd the doors of the Mission, eager to obtain the Nourishing Food, and satisfy the cravings of hunger.

Contributions will be thankfully received by the Treasurer, F. A. BEVAN, Esq., 54, Lombard-street, E.C.; or the Superintendents, The BROTHERS YOUNG, 32, Nelson-square, Blackfriars-road, S.E.; or through Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT.

MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.

A THIRD SERIES of MEETINGS are BEING HELD in the EAST END of LONDON; the Committee being assured that the GOSPEL OF THE GRACE OF GOD is the ESSENTIAL REMEDY for FEMALE DEGRADATION. The RECENT MEETINGS held in the WEST OF ENGLAND were SUCCESSFUL.

RESCUED Young WOMEN and GIRLS are placed in suitable HOMES. A CAPITATION GRANT is paid with each one remaining over a month.

With a view to effect Rescues among the numerous classes of FOREIGN WOMEN in the METROPOLIS the Committee have instructed their Organising Superintendent, Mr. J. H. L. CHRISTIEN, to convene a CONFERENCE to promote this important Work

DONATIONS are now very MUCH NEEDED to carry on this Rescue Work, and may be sent to Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT; or to C. WILSON M'CREE, Secretary, at the Offices, 8A, Red Lion Square, W.C.

The Rescue Society,

79, FINSBURY PAVEMENT, E.C.

SEVERAL circumstances have combined this year to cause very heavy additional expenditure to the above Society.

The REBUILDING on a greatly improved and enlarged plan, and furnishing of our New Preventive Home at Woodford (now occupied), in place of the one destroyed by fire in January last, will cost £2,400. The INDUSTRIAL work of this Home is very encouraging, £4 PER WEEK having been earned by the reduced number of inmates in the small temporary building. With the increased accommodation a still larger sum can be raised, thus going far towards self-support.

The REMOVAL of a second Home to MORE HEALTHY AND SUITABLE PREMISES at Dalston necessitated an outlay of £850 for the purchase of lease, repairs, and alterations, but saves £43 per annum in rent.

At a THIRD HOME at Buckhurst Hill it was compulsory to replace the wooden Wash-house, &c., by brick buildings at a cost of £100.

The large sum of £3,350 has thus to be found this year, IN ADDITION TO THE ORDINARY EXPENDITURE, towards which amount we have received from the Insurance Company £1,510, and Special Contributions to the Rebuilding and Fire Fund £599 15s., leaving OVER £1,000 to be made up from other sources.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, our GENERAL WORK HAS INCREASED, and more than 560 Young Women and Girls have already received the benefits of our Homes this year.

We are now in Urgent Need of Help. Our Homes are more than full, and our Funds are quite exhausted.

Contributions will be kindly received by Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, Office of "THE CHRISTIAN;" by the Bankers, Messrs. BARCLAY, BEVAN & Co., 54, Lombard-street; or will be gratefully acknowledged if sent to the Secretary,

Mr. C. STUART THORPE,

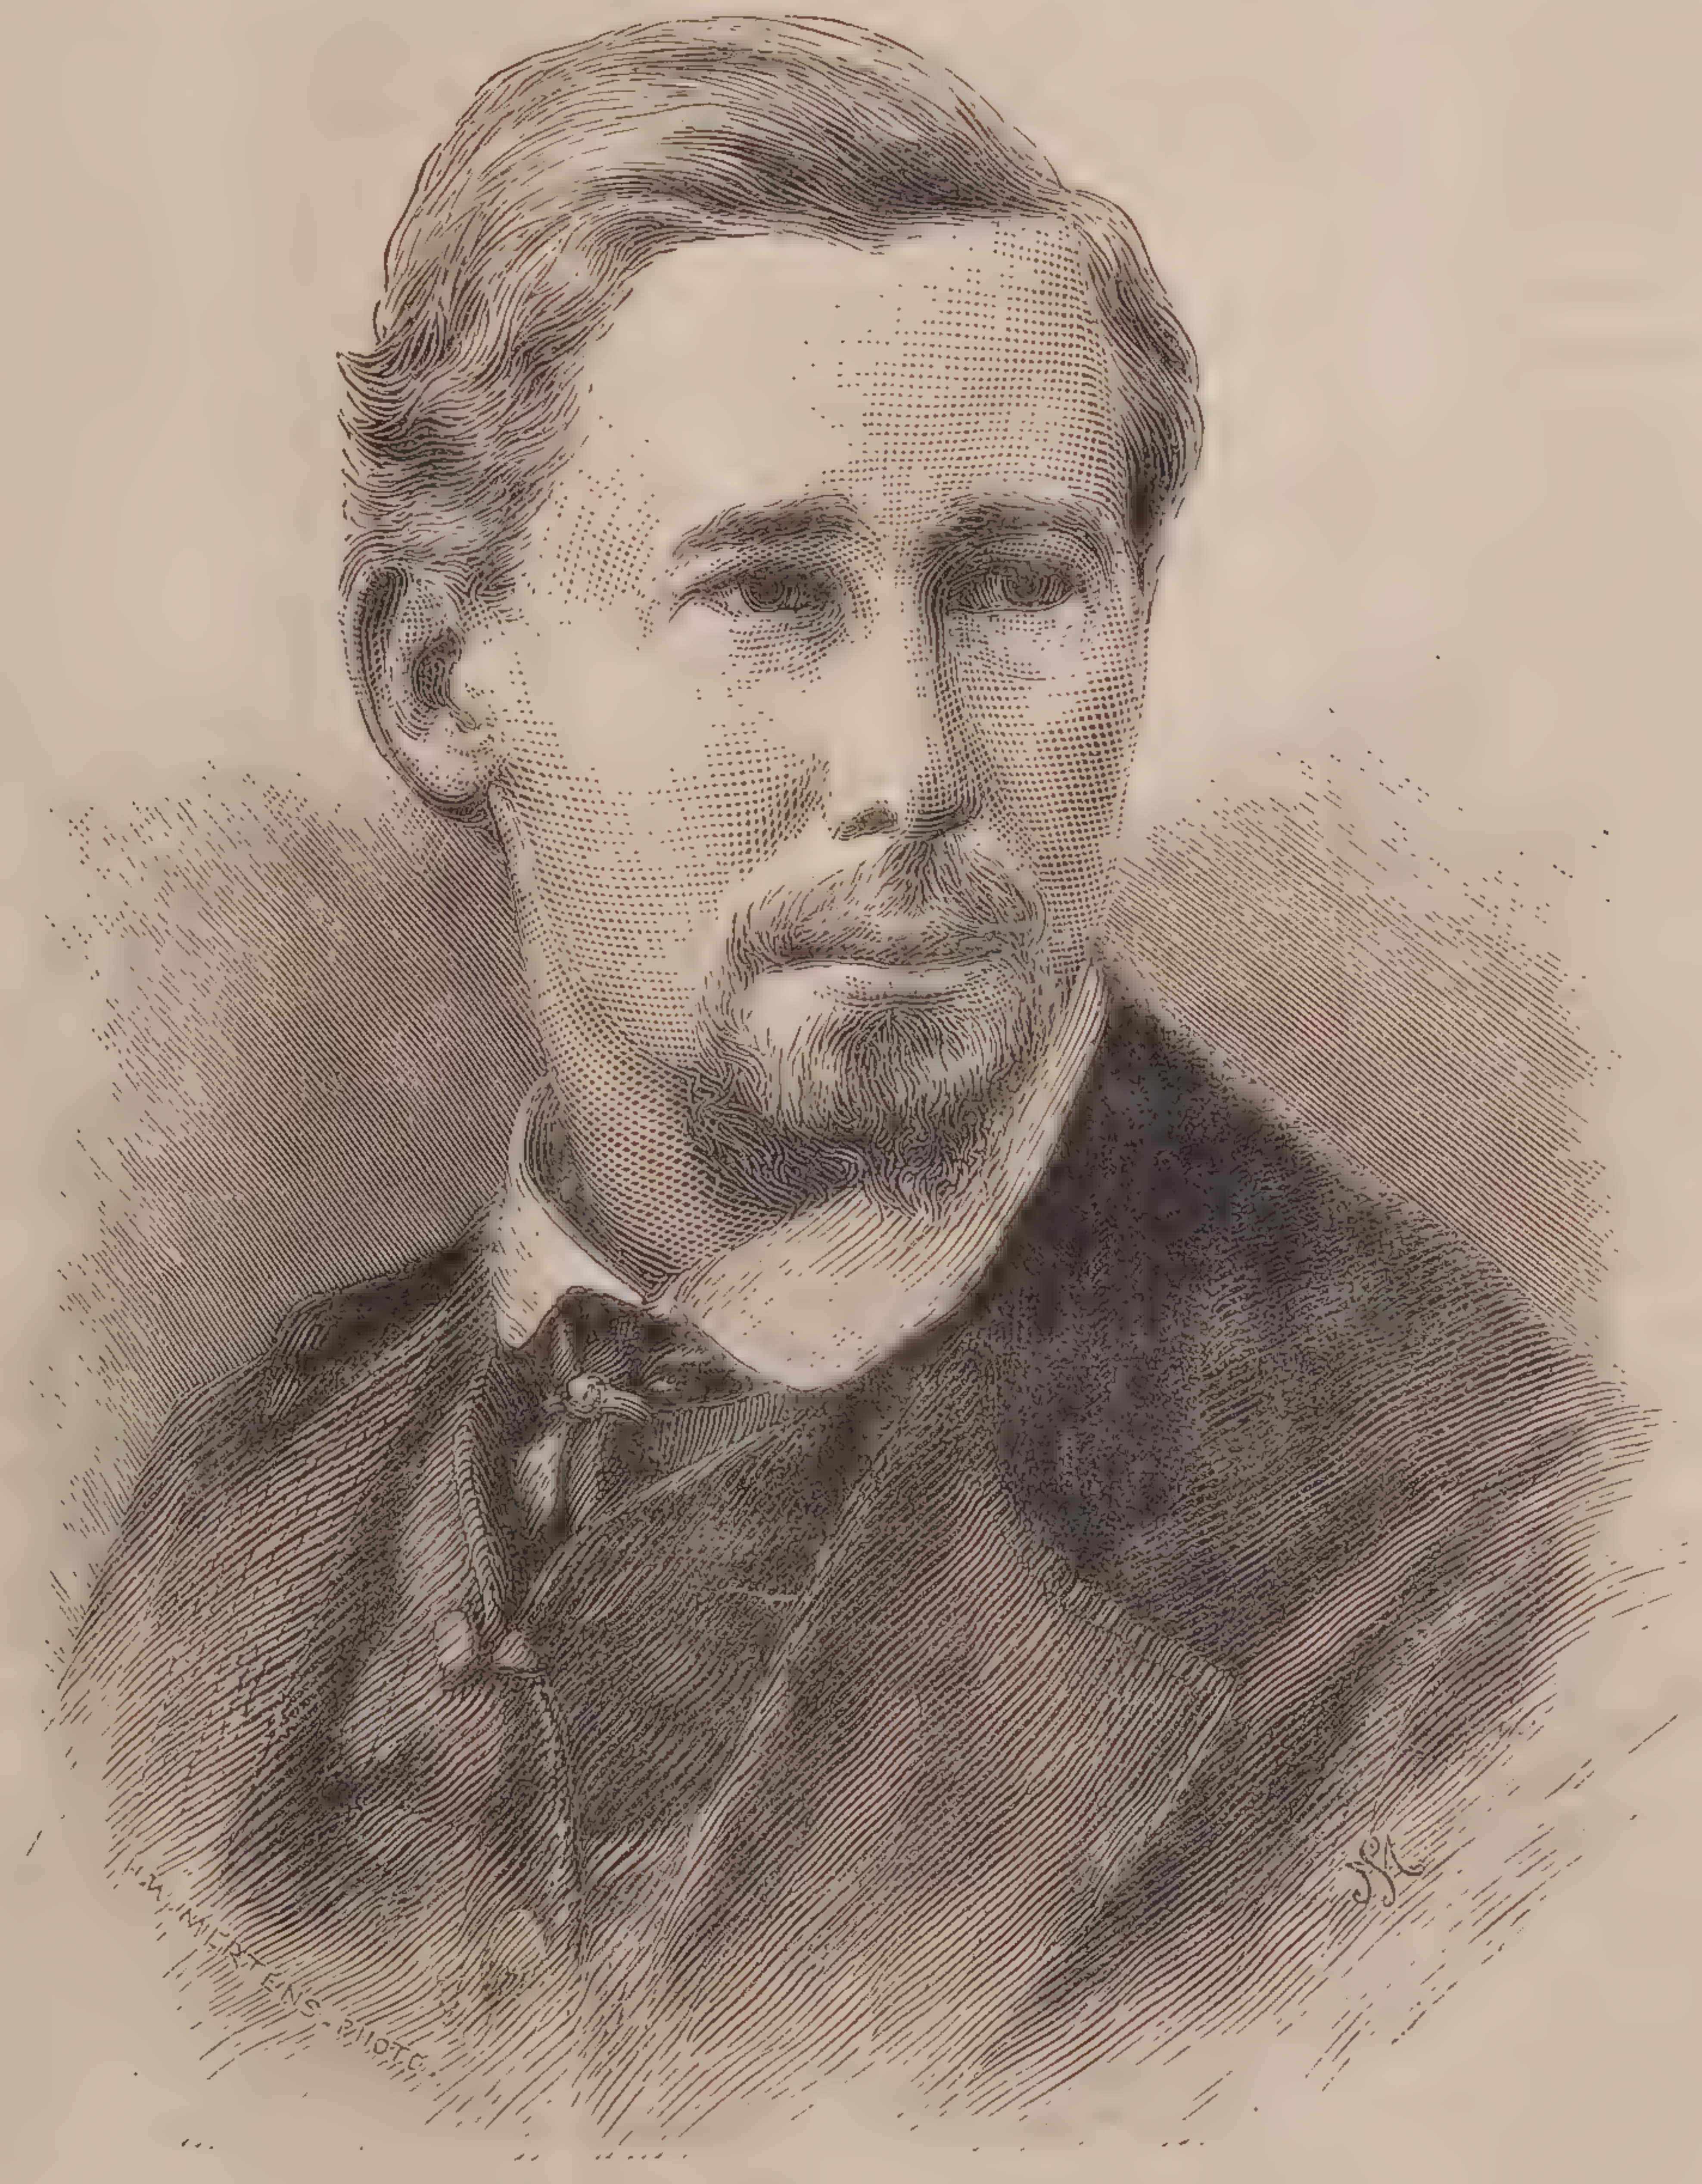
THE LATE MR. JAMES PASCOE,

Of the Mexican Evangelical Mission.

FOR fifteen years past the name of Mr. JAMES PASCOE has been well before the Christian public as director of an intensely interesting mission in Mexico. In that dark and troubled land, until his death last month, he worked with commendable earnestness and singleness of purpose to make known the good news of perfect salvation through Christ the Lord. "In journeyings often," he was called upon to endure constant trial "in perils of robbers, in perils by the heathen, in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst." But, like the Apostle of old, he gloried in the things which concerned his infirmities. It is because he was a man of faith, and was strong in Christ, that he was enabled to do all this. He lived much in the spirit of his life motto: "Trust in the Lord with all thine heart, and lean not unto thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths" (Prov. iii. 5, 6).



Born in 1841 at Helston, in Cornwall, the subject of this sketch was one of a family of nine. His father was an intelligent man in good circumstances, being manager of the principal law office and bank of the place. When about six years old, James was saved from a watery grave. Staying at the fishing village of Helford with an invalid brother, in the care of his eldest sister, he insisted upon bathing against her wish, and was only just rescued from drowning. In 1850 the family removed to London, where Mr. Pascoe senior acted as secretary to various Cornish mines. Young James went to school at Peckham-rye, and at the age of fifteen began to study navigation, with a view to acquiring the position of a marine surveyor in the Indian Navy. His teacher, Mr. A. B. Martin, was a true man of God, and in the habit of reading portions of Holy Writ to the pupil. Writing on this just before his death, Mr. Pascoe said: "These quiet readings gradually led me to change my old course of reading, and very speedily the final question was brought home to my soul with power by a little work of Eliza Gaskell: a simple reflection about being prepared for death and for judgment."

The Sepoy mutiny resulting in the Indian Navy being merged in the British Royal Navy, all James Pascoe's schemes were quite upset, and he resolved to go to sea in a merchantman, and by God's grace to be a missionary to sailors. In the meantime he began evangelisation at home; but his endeavours to bring his father to a knowledge of Christ drew upon him such an amount of ill-will that life became a real martyrdom. Some twelve months later, however, the father was converted to God. While out for one of his usual Sunday drives, he was led by curiosity to enter a barn at Beckenham where Miss Marsh was preaching to railway navvies. The word proved living and powerful, and the man who had been in the habit of passing the weekly rest day without thinking of his duty to God, went home rejoicing in a new-found peace and hope.

At this very interesting time James Pascoe was at sea as midshipman on a large full-rigged London sailing vessel. The voyage was to Madras and Burmah, and on the way several of the sailors accepted Christ as their Saviour. "Our ship," wrote Mr. Pascoe, "left England, outward bound, a very floating hell, so vile and blasphemous were captain, crew, and passengers. She came back a floating bethel, so many of her crew had been converted, and our meetings and praises made the old ship echo."

Coming home after two years' absence, the midshipman-missionary found his father dead, and, being then the eldest boy of the family, he could not well return to sea. His desire was to preach the Gospel while earning his living in some foreign country, and while waiting for the way to open he helped many workers for God in various ways. After five years' longing, his wishes were met by an offer of employment in Mexico under a silver mining company. In 1865 he married Caroline, daughter of Mr. John Williams, of Gwennap, near Redruth, Cornwall. She was a born missionary, and full of hope when, soon afterwards, she accompanied her husband to Ixtapan del Oro to work as book-keeper and accountant for the San Pedro del Monte Silver Mining Company, Limited. The engagement did not turn out what Mr. Pascoe, as a man of honour and integrity, required, and at the end of seventeen months he found himself penniless in a strange land. In 1868 he returned to England with his wife and two children in order to form a company for a mining venture in which some wealthy Mexicans had joined him. In Lancashire he conferred with Mr. John Mercer, his life-long and sincere friend, who gave him money for the purchase of a Spanish Bible for Mexico. On returning, this book was at once put into use, being read by many of the Mexican miners. That was, in fact, the foundation of the evangelistic mission in connection with which Messrs. Pascoe and Mercer have ever since heartily co-operated, each in his own sphere.

As the years went by, Gospel truth was vigorously disseminated, and Mr. Pascoe became a known and marked man among the Roman Catholic population. In 1873 he threw all his energies into mission work, and established a centre of influence in Toluca which continues to this day. The Gospel message was greatly blessed, and in three years the Protestants of the town were numbered by hundreds, whereas when the testimony was begun not one could be found among the native population. Mrs. Pascoe headed Dorcas meetings and instructed the children, while her husband conducted public meetings and circulated suitable religious literature. Frequent and great perils had to be contended with, and occasionally there were tumults which had to be quelled by Federal troops. In 1878 San Telmo was also made a centre of operations. Just before his death Mr. Pascoe wrote:—

> There was not a single Protestant in all those parts when I began in 1878; but now in 1888 there are hundreds, and, indeed, thousands. Hundreds whom I personally have seen come over to Christ; but far more I have heard of as receiving the Gospel from us, and from our converts without ever seeing us. All the village of Santa Cruz Indians, over four hundred souls, are firm in Christ's truth. Many others of other Indian towns also believe. In Ixtapan del Oro for years the brethren have held public services several times weekly. In Tepereal also we have a small house of prayer. At San Telmo, our headquarters, the meetings are oftentimes immense. Far away down to the Pacific coast have we thus sent the message of life. In Huetamo, and several other towns, believers meet and study the Word; and all those who come from there declare how rapidly and how extensively has the Gospel spread and is spreading in those hot regions.

Reference has already been made to some of the trials and perils Mr. Pascoe had to endure. In 1875 his beloved wife fell a victim to the insatiable hatred of the Romanists; her death was intentionally accelerated by a Mexican doctor, whom even Catholics in Toluca afterwards nick-named "butcher," such was their respect for Mrs. Pascoe, and their abhorrence of the man who hastened her end. On her death-bed, the noble woman adjured her husband to "hold the fort," and still carry on the wonderful work which she plainly saw God had entrusted to him. At one time the authorities favoured him, at another they plotted against him, and he often felt compelled not only to carefully watch his own movements, but to protect the hundreds of Indians who looked up to him as teacher and friend. In 1877 he and his colporteurs were much persecuted. Such was the public prejudice, even respectable Catholics did not hesitate to surround and threaten the preachers of Protestant truth, and also to fire at them occasionally. Bibles and tracts were burnt, and now and then highway attacks were made upon the evangelists. These things were duly reported to the Governor, but no notice whatever was taken of the complaints. It took a brave man such as Mr. Pascoe was to continue witnessing for Christ under such very uncomfortable conditions.

Special efforts were made to preach the Gospel, at times when the Romanists were keeping high holiday. During the month of March, 1880, while the Catholics were celebrating great feasts, Mr. Pascoe conducted a vigorous campaign, for one reason, in order to draw his new converts away from the idolatrous pantomimes of the occasion. Not less than 200 souls assembled twice a day to hear his message, and over seventy who had come from a distance slept in his little mountain house at Ixtapan del Oro. On the last Saturday and Sunday in the month he baptized no fewer than 140 persons of all ages, who voluntarily requested to be added to the visible Church. Ninety-three of the number are Indians. When these facts were reported in The Christian, we remarked that they read like a chapter from the Acts of the Apostles. After that, other chapters of a like encouraging character were written on more than one occasion.

Early in the year now closing Mr. Pascoe's health gave way, and he had several teeth extracted in order to secure relief from a painful affection of the face. After consulting with friends he came over to England, and, to the grief of all who knew his work, he soon learned that he was suffering from cancer inveterate and incurable. As our readers may remember, he lingered in great pain until November 28, when he expired, as a warrior taking his rest. During his illness he had Divine grace suited to his needs. A great patience befits a great hope; James Pascoe had both, and his friends reflect with pleasure upon his good and active life and its restful and happy close. He left five children, and his second wife, Juana Gomez, a lady of the race for whom he laboured so earnestly. Three of the children are thus Anglo-Aztecs.

Mr. Pascoe was a life-long abstainer from intoxicating drinks. Not even as a sailor, and never during twenty-three years of life in the tropics, did he wet his lips with such beverages. He was an independent evangelist, not a denominational church organiser; and his heart's hope—the glorious appearing of the Lord from heaven—had due place in his public utterances. His children are walking in the ways of wisdom, and carrying on the work with the help of numerous volunteer labourers. It is to be hoped that, to the glory of God and the present and eternal well-being of the Aztec people, the Mission will be continued in the spirit of its noble founder, who verily counted not his life dear unto him, for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus his Lord.

"BRIDGE OF HOPE" MISSION.

The Night Shelter work has, since the opening, been steadily, and we believe successfully, carried on. During the last ten weeks 1438 nights' lodging, with breakfast and supper, have been given to destitute women and girls. They have not simply been sheltered, and sent adrift again, but every case has had careful, individual attention. Many of the women have been placed in the Refuge laundry; others have been transferred to various Homes. Destitute women, drifting hopelessly about in search of work, have been set upon their feet, and perhaps, as in no other time in the history of the work, we realise the inestimable blessing of an always open door.

Even after the few weeks' experience in this larger Shelter, time would fail us to give the pathetic histories of some of those whom we shelter. By persistently investigating the cases, we often unravel the tangled threads of many weary lives; already our new walls have witnessed the most touching re-unions between mothers and children who have wandered from country homes, only to float on the stream of misery, presently to be lost in the awful vortex, as thousands before them have been. God gave us the new Shelter, as He gives all else, just at the moment of greatest need.

On Sunday week two young girls were sent to us from a neighbouring Home, for which they were unsuited, and we at once took them in. After they had given us many untrue versions of their story, and several false addresses, we got one clue by which the whole secret was brought to light. It was the old, old story of temptation to leave the quiet country home life for the excitements of London, which in the distance look so fascinating to the young and ignorant country girl, ending with the same sad disillusion. Every day during the week fresh efforts were made to find the friends and restore the girls, and at last with success. On Saturday the sister of the younger girl came. She was a respectable married woman, and at the first news she left her home and hastened to London after the lost one whom the sorrowful family had so earnestly sought. Indescribably touching was the meeting between the two sisters. The repentant child, sobbed out her story, and how she had parted with all her comfortable clothes, and was not fit to go home as she was; but, as in the story of the prodigal, the garments mattered not when the lost was found; and the sister said, "Never mind, my child, it's you we want, and now not one of us will be missing at home on Christmas Day." Grateful letters from the mother of the other girl, when she heard of her daughter's safe keeping, gladdened our hearts, and testify that the week's work has not been in vain.

Our friends will understand that this is all in addition to our refuge and preventive work, but after these weeks of Night Shelter work at the beginning of the winter, and at a time when universal attention has been drawn to the special needs of women in the East end of London, we feel constrained to tell those who are interested in the "Bridge of Hope" that the Night Shelter is proving a real blessing, and a quiet, steady work is being daily and nightly carried on. WESTMINSTER CHAPEL, says The British Weekly, is to be made serve as a sort of Nonconformist cathedral. Arrangements have been made to have the Sunday services conducted for a month at a time during next year by leading preachers of various denominations. Professor Davison, of Richmond, takes January; Dr. Dale, of Birmingham, February; and, later on, the list includes such men as Mr. Goodrich, of Glasgow, Dr. Fairbairn, Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, Professor Elmslie, &c.

THE QUESTION OF THE HOUR:—FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Situation surveyed, Defects disclosed, and the Church recalled to her Lord's Instructions.

V.

The Union of the Inward and Outward Christ-Life Vital.

To the single eye there is divine beauty in the wisdom that has inseparably joined heart-experience and its appropriate outward expression in a life of manifest self-abnegation. There is a twofold reason for it. The one affects the spiritual growth and power of believers themselves, missionaries included. The other has reference to the effect which the divorce of the two has upon the keen-eyed world, whether at home or abroad, which ever scrutinises the professed Christ-life on its practical side. This latter will be considered in a later paper, dealing with the divine philosophy that underlies the methods for foreign mission work, which we believe were clearly laid down by our Lord. The first of these reasons will now occupy us. It lies in the fact that IT IS ONLY IN THE PATHWAY OF OUTWARD SELF-RENUNCIATION THAT WE CAN BECOME THE SUBJECTS OF THAT DIVINE DISCIPLINE AND DEALING WHICH ISSUES IN MATURITY AND SYMMETRY OF CHRISTIAN LIFE AND FULNESS OF SPIRITUAL POWER.

See this principle illustrated in the life of Christ, "who though He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich." He became poor in the material sense of the word. He chose to take the lowest place. He voluntarily passed by all the higher ranks of society, in any one of which He could have shone. He left on one side the world's arts, sciences, and politics, upon any one of which He could have discoursed as no other could; and took from choice the place of poverty and utter dependence on the Father. He became a peasant, though David's royal blood was in his human veins. He had no food save as the Father gave it to Him—no shelter, no earthly convenience, save as the Father appointed. With the elaborate appointments and refinements of life which obtained among the great of that day, as of this, He had nothing to do. In rude simplicity He ate and drank and was clothed.

Let us not lose sight of the deep reason for all this in our Lord's life. It was that for his soul's training and perfecting, He might be, as to all that entered into his environment, pliant in his Father's hands. Every experience, deprivation, deliverance, and suffering needed in the process, the Father could appoint. When, as with Israel in the wilderness, fasting must furnish the lesson of the hour, and He be supplied with heart-food which would become a weapon in his hand, such becomes his experience, and in his quiver is ready found the shaft for Satan, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God." He was "made perfect through sufferings"; sufferings in the outward realm as well as inwardly; sufferings which would have been impossible had He either delivered Himself by miracles (which He never used for Himself), or chosen other than the lowly, despised, reputationless and dependent form of a servant. In this pathway of simplicity and suffering He received and manifested the power of God; and when that life of lowly dependence was crowned by the utter self-abnegation of Gethsemane and Calvary, then, being risen, He could say, "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth." Here is wisdom for the wise.*

The time was when it was the same with Christ's followers as with Him, and when the word was well understood, "the servant is not above his Lord." Let Paul yield us an example. He could have excelled in the schools of philosophy, or graced any social position. He appreciated refined surroundings and fine arts. Yet these were but "bones for the dogs" to the man whose inmost heart Christ had won, and who had been intrusted with the precious freightage of his name, and in whose ears the wail of a dying world was ringing. He enumerates, in Philippians, his outward advantages, and tells us he counted them but refuse. When, in that same chapter, his soul pants forth his desire for power—"the power of his resurrection"—he spoke of that to which it is indissolubly joined, "the fellowship of his sufferings; being made conformable to his death." He followed Christ in his outward sufferings and temptations, or rather he put himself into that position of simplicity and dependence in which God could shape his path and mould him at his will. He had the mind that was in Christ; he well knew that faith best flourishes in the soil of unworldliness of life, and amid the rigours of poverty and outward trial, where the soul is momentarily thrown upon God for everything. He was one in spirit with that goodly "cloud of witnesses," to which the self-emptied and world-emptied souls of all ages belong, mean and despised in the sight of men, but of whom God the Spirit writes, "the world was not worthy"; "they wandered about in sheepskins and goatskins; being destitute, afflicted, tormented . . . they wandered in deserts, and in mountains, in dens and caves of the earth."

As the eye turns from these examples of heavenly life in earthly scenes, as pictured in the Word, to the average lives of the most advanced in our times, how humiliating the contrast! We see what sufficed our Lord and the ancient saints, and the deep reason for their lowly surroundings. But we umst needs "reign as kings." They were "fools for Christ's sake," but we are "wise in Christ"; they were weak, but we are strong; they were despised, but we are honourable; they hungered and were athirst, were naked and buffeted and without a certain dwelling-place: but we live in ceiled houses, the best our ample or slender means will allow. None are better clad than we; and as, in these last days, living has become more and more elaborated with its endless niceties and refinements, we have adopted them all. We will be spiritual and consecrated, but will, nevertheless, cast our outward circumstances in that mould which appeals most strongly to our love of position and the material things of earth—the very opposite of the place to which God's Word and providence, as well as their own spiritual discernment of the fitness of things, brought Christ and his early disciples.

* It is a significant indication of the drift of the consecration teaching of the present day, that a recently published, much read, and otherwise admirable book, by a missionary, on Christ as our example, contains scarcely an allusion to conformity to Him in his outward manner of life.

Why is all this? Why should we be better circumstanced than our Lord? Are we made of better stuff than the Apostles that we need not come under the same rule? We have yet to perceive that, as one mighty in the Scriptures has said on this very point: "It is not a conventional but an appropriate, not an expedient but a necessary character, for everyone who possesses a certain measure of God's Spirit." Are we "still without understanding"? Do we not yet perceive that here is the very source of our weakness; that here are the foxes that spoil our vines?

How well we understand that emptying must precede in-filling. But emptying of what? Of outward sins we agree to; but as to social position, a good degree of worldly influence, the comfortable externals of life, the great bulk of our possessions—they must be retained. We must, forsooth, use them for the Lord. We, like Saul, will keep the best of the cattle to sacrifice to the Lord our God. Oh, for some trumpet-tongued Samuel to thunder in our startled ears, "Hath the Lord as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices as in obeying the voice of the Lord?" Thus Saul lost the kingdom. Thus we are weak and powerless. Our riches, reputations, and positions, are our snare and weakness, not our strength.

Would we be fishers of men? Would we have our missionaries such also? Then we must heed the meaning of the word of Christ, which will never accommodate itself to nineteenth century ideas of consecration. "Follow Me and I will make you to become fishers of men." They became his literal followers in outward life. They left all. This opened the way for that correction and training, that suffering and emptying, that having deepest fellowship with Christ, that being baptized with his baptism, by which were dug out the channels through which the power of the Holy Ghost could flow in. The pathway of power is none other now. They were free from those "cares of this life," and "the deceitfulness of riches," and the imperious demands of society; those "weights" to be not carried but "laid aside," that enervate faith in all, that slay it in many.

There is no escaping them, save by resolute and radical dealing. There must be a real forsaking of all, a coming down from our social heights; a deep, deliberate, practical renunciation of the world, with its lust of the eye and pride of life, as well as the coarser lusts of the flesh—its luxuries, its artificial system of living, its artistic and æsthetic pleasures and occupations; an entering upon a life of evident simplicity and self-renunciation: and all by deliberate choice, rejoicing that we have somewhat to surrender for his dear namesake. This is what God calls for. This is the price of spiritual power, or rather the door into the gymnasium where God trains his athletes. This is the Greater-than-David's Cave of Adullam where are to be found his mighty men. Let not the few be pointed out of exceptional spiritual strength who rise apparently superior to the soft ease of their material surroundings. It is in spite of these forbidden things they are strong, and the fact ever remains that their example is most detrimental.

For the future, of which scene will we make our choice? Shall it be that "narrow way," that separate and lonely path whose example and inspiration is the Son of God on earth, wherein is much hard to the flesh, but wherein awaits for faith the power of God? Or shall it continue to be the broad pathway of worldly conformity? If the latter, let us not forget the beginning and the end of the boasted progress and civilisation of this age, with its cities, manufactures, multiplied inventions, fine arts, its intricacies of life and etiquette, its pride of birth, position, and wealth. It began with Cain, the murderer, who "went out from the presence of the Lord," and, with his sons, began building cities, establishing manufactures and arts, and undertook to make themselves comfortable in the scene of the curse, and to get from beneath its sharp edge. It will end in the flames that devour Babylon the Great, which is now glorifying herself and living deliciously; when her harpers and musicians, her merchants who have waxed rich through the abundance of her delicacies, her craftsmen and shipowners, her "heaped-up" treasure will perish with her. "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."

The weakness of the movement toward holiness of life is the absence of these severer and more sombre teachings of Christ on which we have been dwelling. Because they are yet unlearned and unpractised, its full outcome is yet to appear.

We will next consider the subject of money and giving, which appears so largely in all mission ideas.

A MISSIONARY.

HOMES FOR WORKING GIRLS.

THE committee of the Homes for Working Girls in London may be heartily congratulated upon the latest addition to their beneficent institutions. The new Home is Domgay House, 11, Fitzroy-street, Fitzroy-square, W., which was opened and dedicated to God on Wednesday, last week, in the presence of a goodly company of friends of working girls.

Mr. JOHN SHRIMPTON, honorary director, placed before the meeting a deeply interesting statement as to the new Home. When Lincoln House was opened two and a half years ago, it was understood that no further addition would be made to the committee's responsibility, but an anonymous supporter immediately afterwards presented a cheque for 2000 guineas to open another Home, and the path of duty in the matter was soon clearly indicated. After some waiting, Domgay House was placed at the committee's disposal; it has been put in thorough repair and furnished for the accommodation of seventy-five inmates. The walls are bright with pictures and illuminated Scripture texts, and the arrangements in general are such as to make the rooms very cheerful and comfortable. Mr. Shrimpton's few words in justification of the outlay in decoration were hardly required, although it must have been very gratifying to him to be assured, by "hear, hears," and other ejaculations, that the policy that has been pursued commends itself to the many friends of the Homes. About £1300 will yet have to be raised to clear the building of debt.

In the course of some remarks on the important spiritual results of the work, Mr Shrimpton said that every endeavour is exerted to make the Homes a blessing in the highest sense. Eternity alone will reveal the extent to which God has owned the exertions of the workers, and especially the pure and noble influence and example of the superintendents. The work is true and sincere, with nothing sentimental about it, and many and wonderful evidences are occasionally afforded of girls having found Christ, and had the hope of the heavenly home implanted in them. In some words as to finances, Mr. Shrimpton declined to make any appeal, although funds were needed. He beautifully said that, in proportion as the Committee have exercised steady faith in God, their requirements have been most satisfactorily supplied.

Rev. W. R. Mowll, having read Psalm ciii., the dedicatory prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. McEwan. Brief addresses followed. Rev. H. J. Berguer (Islington), expressed a hope that the Home would be a centre of blessed influence. Rev. Dr. McEwan commended the work very highly, declaring it pre-eminently Christian and most humane in character. He remarked upon the large fortunes which are occasionally left by wealthy people, and also upon the extravagance which shows itself when hundreds of pounds are given for a pet dog. He thought Christians should show more clearly what they can do for Christ, who gave Himself for them. Rev. Dr. O'Brien (Somers Town) also spoke. He concluded a hearty address by saying: Go forward, and faint not. The money is certain to come in. It is God's gold and silver, and his servants will support his work. The office of the hon. director, Mr. John Shrimpton, is 2, Westminster Chambers, London, S.W.

THE END OF THE YEAR.—2.

By Rev. WILLIAM GUEST, F.G.S.

If there is one reflection which must occupy men of spiritual enlightenment as the year closes, it is the contrariety of the tendencies and sentiments of the closing years of the century to the Divine aims of Christianity. It may be said that in a world of apostasy this has been true of every century. But men alienated from the life of God may with the progress and enlarged appliances of civilisation develop a tone and spirit which are more than ever Godless. Gluttony, drunkenness, and uncleanness, may not obtrude as in a less advanced condition, while the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the vain-glory of life, may insinuate themselves with a more deadly and dominating sway. The theatre may have elaborate scenic attractions, and the ball-room æsthetical excitements, and the gaming-table alluring baits, that cover worldliness with a witchery and blandishment which conceal its selfishness and wickedness. Falsehood can become a fashion; indelicacy become associated with grace; and an age, spite of its decencies and respectabilities, may be more destitute of spiritual tastes and high aims than a less advanced one. And flow from this remembrance. Let us not be unduly surprised at the manifestations of evil as the years go by. Our Lord's inquiry as to finding faith in the earth at his coming should teach us that in these latter days the grand motives of God's revelation may become dim to men. The intervening time from Christ's manifestation, and the delay of predicted judgments, produce inaptitude to apprehend the invisible, and limit man's vision to the seen and sensible. Faith is apt to become weaker in teachers, and the outgoings of human thought tend increasingly towards the present and the carnal.

But a second temptation comes, and one more ensnaring because more unsuspected. Good men in all previous centuries have spoken of the dividing line between the saved and unsaved. In our times there is the terrible anomaly of the three parties in the nominal Church, spoken of in the previous paper. There are followers of Christ who are seeking to be Christ-like in their entire aloofness from ways and practices that favour among men a casting away of the fear of God. There are, however, the Romanisers and tamperers with Scripture who unite in this that they counterpoise such an aloofness. They magnify all that pertains to worship in the Church with little care for the Christian life in the world; or they enter on courses of worldly attractiveness, and even provide these for the unsaved, whereby the gulf between those who are Jesus Christ's and those who are of the kingdom of evil, is reduced to a line as thin and invisible as that between two continental kingdoms in many parts of Europe; a line as imaginary as that of the Equator.

Other tendencies of the times may be noted. It may be feared that has, in all ages, done more to close the mind against the truth than wickedness of heart. How frequent are warnings against this in the Scriptures. It was of old time the contempt of the proud that was the complaint of the righteous. It is the proud who hath his name as a scorner. They were the men proud in spirit that resisted the prophets. They were the proud among the Romans who did not like to retain God in their knowledge. And was not this the ruin of Judea when the Incarnate Son was in the land? How could they be saved when they would only have a Messiah after their own thought? Thus they reasoned—"This man the promised Prince, who has beatitudes for the poor! This man the Son of David, who, instead of raising up the prostrate house of Israel, bids us take on us his yoke of lowliness and meekness!" And so the priests with their arrogancy, and the Scribes with their pride of learning, and the Pharisees with their self-esteem, and the Sadducees with their rationalism, prepared the way for the greatest crime the universe can have known, and led on the people to destruction. May God in mercy keep us in these days from the same fatal error! May He teach us the limits of our own wisdom, and deliver us from the sway of the cold reason to which the Gospel is a dead letter.

For let us not hesitate to avow that a merely intellectual conception of the Gospel may be utterly illogical, and credulously shallow. During the year a notable work of fiction ("Robert Elsmere") has passed through eighteen editions. It speaks of the Apostle Paul as "strong in poetry, and weak logically." Never could criticism have been wider of the mark. It represents "the life of Jesus" as having wrought itself ineffaceably into the higher civilisation of Europe, and yet it is the life of a peccable man, who made assertions respecting Himself which are to be put aside as mistakes, and which, to all intents, make Him a fanatic, or an imposter. It is painful to refer to such writings; it is done to indicate the miserable shallowness, spite of literary skill, of the fashionable scepticism of the day. And no less superficial is the view taken about working men. A gospel without forgiveness, and with its fallible human founder, would, we are told, captivate the artisans of our period. Why do not the people of this school make the experiment? The working men would tell those who tried that when they want a Saviour it will be the Christ of the Evangelists, and not a Christ created by these literary pretenders.

The same spirit of indocility is shown in discussing

THE QUESTION OF INSPIRATION.

No demonstration of this is possible. The Church of England has done wisely in withholding any theory. Thank God, with millions who do not merely talk about their Bibles, but devoutly read them, the inspiration of the Scriptures is a common-sense instinct. Why may there not be absolute faith along with insoluble mystery? The law of gravitation is taught by science as a force proceeding from the most distant bodies, but can the most accomplished scientist give even the shadow of a hint which determines its speed? Mind and will and conscience have their seat in a man, but who among physiologists can localise these endowments? There are, as we Christians witness and are fully persuaded, changes of character, and marvellous conversions which completely transform men. Even Darwin acknowledged this among the Fuegians, and a traveller who lately avowed himself "impartial as an ancient Roman about religious systems" bore witness to the unmistakable reality of these conversions among the twelve thousand fishermen of the North Sea.

But can any mortal out of hundreds of cases fix the line, or even guess at the point, where the work of the enlightening and actuating Spirit began, and where human co-operation ended? We accept these mysteries, although transcending our reason, by the docility of faith. Why cannot we do the same thing with the Scriptures? May there not be this concurrent exercise of faith and reason in relation to their inspiration? "The wind," said our Divine Lord, "bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but knowest not whence it cometh and whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." To myriads of Christians the evidence of the exceptionally supernatural in the Sacred Writings grows with years, and multiplies in endless minutiæ: it becomes a conviction as firm as is that afforded by our senses, and yet we never get nearer the lines where the individual and the human in the writers, and the superhuman in the inspiring Spirit may be traced. Why should we want to? Who are we, to scan the ways, and to refuse to believe till we have determined the methods, of the infinite God? Man's à priori conceptions of God's methods are almost always wrong.

And here I cannot but advert to the perverted learning that is now in vogue. Suppose there are two stories of creation in Genesis, and composite writings in the books that bear the name of Samuel, and two Isaiahs and three Zechariahs (although statements of this kind, like hypotheses of modern scientists, may be proved to have been premature), this does not set aside the fact that it was to Israel in its corporate and theocratic capacity, that there were delivered the oracles of God. A man with the cold skill of an anatomist may pretend to show us how the different parts of a book of Scripture came together; but most unfortunate is the congregation who by this method of teaching are led to look on the Bible as a merely human Book, and are brought to forget an earlier faith in its Divine, unique, and incomparable glory. Such teaching is like that of a man who should conduct you through an English Cathedral. He bores you by dilating, without a pause, on the different styles and different dates of the architecture. You would like to feel the grandeur and sublimity of the edifice, but your guide leaves you not a moment for this. What he says of the composite styles and different dates may be true, or may not be true. The man is a verger, and nothing more. Give him his florin, and let him leave you to yourself.

PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY.

"It is no delusion that the world was changed in twenty-five years after the Resurrection of Christ by belief in that fact." Such are the words of Dr. Thomson, Archbishop of York. They justify the conviction which has found very emphatic utterance during the year, that the one and only remedy for the age is the revival of the faith and piety of the first Christian age. Two words then expressed discipleship—FAITH and LOYALTY. One grand and all-mastering thought came upon the Church after Pentecost, and that was—the Son of the Highest had come forth from God, and had appeared among men: it was no fiction; He had been seen, handled, heard: He had completed what the Old Testament foretold of complete atonement for sin: He had risen from the dead, and for man, as a Brother and Redeemer, was at the right hand of power. The grand announcement pervaded the Old Testament from the beginning of Genesis to the end of Malachi: He who is mighty to save shall come, and the Apostolic Church proclaimed, He has come, and will come again. And then to a world that groaned and travailed in pain came the preaching:—Believing Him, you shall find relief from life's miseries, pardon for its sins, a remedy for its griefs, rest for its heart-aches, overcoming for its fierce temptations, and a magnificent hope for its future. It was this faith and this preaching of all disciples that lifted up the gates of a new era for a despairing age, and in a quarter of a century changed the face of the world.

"It is vain," we are told, "to attempt to reproduce the Apostolic age." In part this must be true: in part it is false. To set forth the contrast between our present-day Christianity and that of the first century would take pages. The "falling away," which Apostles foretold is appearing everywhere. Unchristian customs, official hollowness, and nominal profession, have all but gained a predominance in the churches. Christian discipleship has so changed its character as to provoke the godless to ask of Christians, "Are ye also become like unto us?" But, however impossible it may seem to restore primitive Christianity, this the faithful can do; they can seek in simplicity and retirement to learn their Lord's decision in relation to this age. Freeing themselves from dominating prejudices, policies, and selfish expediencies; aiming with single eye to learn the very thought and mind of Christ, they can be so taken hold of by the Holy Spirit as to be silent witnesses, or fearless protesters on the side of the superhuman in the kingdom of God.

Suggestions as to present duty may be reserved for a New Year's paper. This is, however, palpable. Faithful men must protest against a sensuous Christianity on the one hand, and a secularised Christianity on the other. These, working in different directions, are the counter-plottings of the "Power" continually spoken of in Holy Scripture. But the year has shown wondrous movements of the Spirit of God. Lines of Providence are clearly pointing to a new development in human history. A great movement is approaching. Jews are witnessing an astonishing awakening. Christians, and especially young men, are coming out for Christ in a way history has not recorded. Now, in a crisis of peril and hope, let Christ's called ones assert themselves. They ought not to be unconcerned about the reformations that would set right the social conditions of the people. But let them not forget that it is out of the heart of man all evil proceeds, and that men out of touch with the actuating Spirit are powerless to right a world ruled by potentates of darkness. The ark of Israel had to be overlaid with gold, but the "within" of beauty is put before the "without." The Apostles preached at a time when the whole social state was depraved by intolerable evils, and, while they did not forget the ethics of the Gospel, they preached a Christianity that would be efficacious to cleanse the heart of the hitherto mastering selfishnesses out of which injustices sprang.

We close the year, then, with the one conviction that compromises and worldly compliances are utterly inadequate to restore unity to the alienated Church of God, or to right society from its debasing evils. The year has shown not merely unutterable pollution of life, but a sort of tacit acceptance of all this as unavoidable. It is an Almighty power we want; and also the very message of the inexorable claims of God's law and Gospel, apart from which that power refuses to work with us. Our superficialities, hireling officialisms, moral reformations, and popular amusings have been proved to be a miserable abortion. It is fatuity to persevere in such vain reliances. But to you who are refusing to be beguiled by a new theology or new Church fashions, the end of the year does bring the lesson of perseverance. You have learnt that a Gospel with its accommodations, modern tastes, and mere culture is a Gospel without converting grace. It is yours to dare to be singular for Christ; yours to be faithful in exclusively following the Word of the Lord; yours to strive for the Christian unity which will do so much for our age; yours to stand in the strength of communion with Him, whom the world vainly thought it had put to death, but on whose uplifted cross of salvation must be written the sign, "Whose We Are and Whom We Serve."

Tunbridge Wells.

Is it Possible?

"What, in a few words, do you understand by the consecrated life?"

To this question, which I was asked recently, I replied: "The true Christian life (for every Christian's life should be the consecrated life), according to my understanding, is—trusting Christ fully, obeying Him absolutely, and making this the habit of the life, moment by moment."

Is this life possible?

Of all axioms of the Christian life there can be none more certain than:—

(1) That it is impossible to trust Christ too fully.

(2) That it is impossible to obey Him too absolutely.

(3) That it is impossible to trust and obey Him too continuously, or with too great persistency.

But again I am asked, Is this life possible?

How important this question is will be very clear to us when we consider how comparatively slight is the influence upon us of that which we know to be beyond our grasp.

We dare not give any other answer to this question than an emphatic "Yes."

Moreover, with equal emphasis I would proceed to say that the possibility lies open to everyone, without exception, who is a "child of God by faith in Christ Jesus."

But, it may be objected, "the great part of my life is spent in the midst of the harrying cares of business, bargaining with men, buying and selling, with temptations thick about me, as flies on a hot summer's day."

Then, Christian, let me give you one further axiom:—

Where and when our need is the greatest, and the most urgent, there and then is our Saviour the most available, and his power the most effective.

"The just shall live by faith."

A.D. 1889.

Blank pagèd still, this New Year's volume lies;
Unwritten yet this annal of our life!
The Old Year, fading, fainting, slowly dies,
Entombing all its passions, and its strife!
Forward! we gaze, and shrink at fears unknown,
Which hover o'er th' horizon of our heart;
The Past, scarce buried, seems no more our own;
The Present, clouded by the tears which start!
But rainbow hues, of Faith, and Hope, and Love,
Span the vast arch that severs earth from heaven!
And sunlit, roseate tints celestial move,
Chasing all cloudy mists, asunder riven!
Faith laughs at Doubt, and boldly trusts untraced,
Each coming moment of the new-born year—
While Hope and Love, twin sisters, locked embraced,
Smiling at shadows, sing, "We Will Not Fear."

Incurable.

The word has a hopeless and saddening sound about it. Yet the darkest cloud in this shadowed world has its silver lining. It may seem best to the great Disposer of all things to ordain that some physical ailments shall find no surcease on this side the tomb. But out of the soil of unremitting pain there grow the beautiful plants of sympathy and kindly help; and over all there stretches the bow of promise, that in the good time to come there shall be neither sickness, nor sorrow, nor pain.

The work that is achieved by the Royal Hospital for Incurables at Putney is a peculiarly pathetic and Christ-like one. In that noble "Palace of Pain" there are over 200 sufferers, whose weary span of life is brightened, so far as practical kindness and relief can brighten it. Then there are more than 550 outside pensioners to whom a helping hand is given under their own roofs, thus keeping the family circle unbroken, and preserving for the invalid the sanctities and attractions of home. Mr. F. Andrew, the secretary, has sent out another of those touchingly written, and artistically beautiful, records of the outside work of the institution. It is called "Letters from the East Country," and describes visits paid last summer to some of the Society's pensioners resident in the Eastern Counties. It would be a rich channel of grace to those who are in robust health, to read this diary of visitation work among the sons and daughters of sorrow. The floodgates of sympathy would be opened and the purse strings would be unloosed, and this noble charity would, mayhap, have the power not only to continue, but to extend its benign and beautiful mission of mercy.

Let all who have hearts to feel and a hand to help, secure a copy of this brochure from the Secretary, 106, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

CHARING-CROSS.—Rev. J. F. Kitto, St. Martin's Vicarage, Charing-cross, writes to The Times: The open parade of vice in this neighbourhood is confessedly a scandal and temptation to many, and a committee has been formed, if possible, to abate it. It is found to be not wholly impossible; but the work is difficult. Repression cannot be effected without putting the law in motion—an invidious task. Nevertheless our society has already done something effectively in this direction. Rescue work is still harder and more delicate. It requires Christian care, common sense, and prompt action. A Shelter has been opened in the centre of the neighbourhood; it has already produced encouraging results. But we sorely want money. It would be a pity for the promising work to be choked to death for want of means.

The Epistle to the Hebrews.

X.—THE GOSPEL OF REST.

Hebrews iv.

The keynote of this chapter is Rest. In the second verse it is spoken of as a Gospel, or good news. And is there any Gospel that more needs preaching in these busy, weary days, through which our age is rushing to its close, than the Gospel of Rest? On all hands we hear of strong and useful workers stricken down in early life by the exhausting effects of mental toil. The tender brain tissues were never made to sustain the tremendous wear and tear of our times. There is no machinery in human nature to repair swiftly enough the waste of nervous energy which is continually going on. It is not therefore to be wondered at that the symptoms of brain-tiredness are becoming familiar to many workers, acting as warning signals which, if not immediately attended to, are followed by some terrible collapse of mind or body, or both.

And yet it is not altogether that we work so much harder than our forefathers; but that there is so much more fret and chafe and worry in our lives. Competition is closer. Population is more crowded. Brains are keener and swifter in their motion. The resources of ingenuity and inventiveness, of creation and production, are more severely and constantly taxed. And the age seems so merciless and selfish. If the lonely spirit trips and falls, it is trodden down in the great onward rush, or left behind to its fate; and the dread of the swoop of the vultures, with rustling wings, from unknown heights upon us as their prey, fills us with an anguish which we know by the familiar name of care. We could better stand the strain of work, if only we had rest from worry, from anxiety, and from the fret of the troubled sea that cannot rest, as it moans around us, with its yeasty waves, hungry to devour. Is such a rest possible?

This chapter states that such a rest is possible.—"Let us labour therefore to enter unto that rest." Rest? What rest? His rest, says the first verse; My rest, says the third verse; God's rest, says the fourth verse. And this last verse is a quotation from the earliest page of the Bible, which tells how God rested from all the work that He had made. And as we turn to that marvellous Apocalypse of the past, which in so many respects answers to the Apocalypse of the future, given us by the Apostle John, we find that, whereas we are expressly told of the evening and morning of each of the other days of creation, there is no reference to the dawn or close of God's rest-day; and we are left to infer that it is impervious to time, independent of duration, unlimited, and eternal; that the ages of human story are but hours in the rest-day of Jehovah; and that, in point of fact, we spend our years in the Sabbath-keeping of God. But, better than all, it would appear that we are invited to enter into it and share it; as a child living by the placid waters of a vast fresh-water lake may dip into them its cup, and drink and drink again, without making any appreciable diminution of its volume or ripple on its expanse.

What does it mean by God resting? Surely not the rest of weariness! "He fainteth not, neither is weary." Though He had spread forth the heavens, and laid the foundations of the earth, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance, and had invented ten thousand differing forms of being, yet his inventiveness was as fresh, his energy as vigorous as ever. Surely not the rest of inactivity. "My Father worketh hitherto," said our Lord. "In Him we live, and move, and have our being." True, He is not now sending forth, so far as we know, suns, or systems, and fresh types of being. But his power is ever at work, repairing, renewing, and sustaining the fabric of the vast machinery of the universe. No sparrow falls to the ground without Him. The cry of the young lion and the lowing of the oxen in the pastures attract his instant regard. "By Him all things consist." It was the rest of a finished work. He girded Himself to the specific work of creation, and summoned into being all that is, and when it was finished He said it was very good, and at once He rested from all his work which he had created and made. It was the rest of Divine complacency, of infinite satisfaction, of perfect content. It was equivalent to saying, "This creation of mine is all that I meant it to be, finished and perfect; I am perfectly satisfied, there is nothing more to be done, it is all very good."

This, then, is the rest which we are invited to share.—We are not summoned to the heavy slumber which follows over-taxing toil, nor to inaction or indolence, but to the rest which is possible amid swift activity and strenuous work; to perfect equilibrium between the outgoings and incomings of the life; to a contented heart; to peace that passeth all understanding; to the repose of the will in the will of God; and to the calm of the depths of the nature which are undisturbed by the hurricanes which sweep the surface, and urge forward the mighty waves. This rest is holding out both its hands to the weary souls of men throughout the ages, offering its shelter as a harbour from the storms of life.

But is it certain that this rest has not already been entered and exhausted by the children of men?—That question is fully examined and answered in this wonderful paragraph. The Sabbath did not realise that rest (ver. 3). We cannot prize its ministry too highly. Its law is written, not only in Scripture, but in the nature of man. The Godless band of French Revolutionists found that they could not supersede the week by the decade, the one-day-in-seven by the one-day-in-ten. Like a ministering angel it relieves the monotony of labour, and hushes the ponderous machinery of life, and weaves its spell of rest; but it is too fitful and transient to realise the rest of God. It may typify it, but it cannot exhaust it. Canaan did not realise that rest (ver. 8). The Land of Promise was a great relief to the marchings and privations of the desert. But it was constantly interrupted, and at last, in the captivity, broken up, as the forms of the mountains in the lake by a shower of hail. Besides, in the Book of Psalms, written four hundred years after Joshua had led Israel across the Jordan, the Holy Spirit, speaking by David, points onward to a rest still future (Ps. xcv. 7). Surely then, if neither of these events has realised the rest of God, it remains still, waiting for us and all the people of God. "There remaineth, therefore, unexhausted and unrealised, a Sabbath-keeping to the people of God."

And there is a yet further reason for this conviction of God's unexhausted rest.—Jesus our Forerunner and Representative has entered into it for us. See what ver. 10 affirms: "He that is entered into his rest;" and who can He be but our great Joshua, Jehovah-Jesus? He also has ceased from his own works of redemption, as God did from his of creation After the creative act, there came the Sabbath, when God ceased from his work, and pronounced it very good; so, after the redemptive act, there came the Sabbath to the Redeemer. He lay, during the seventh day, in the grave of Joseph, not because He was exhausted or inactive, but because redemption was finished, and there was no more for Him to do. He sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on High; and that majestic session is a symptom neither of fatigue nor of indolence; He ever liveth to make intercession; He works with his servants, confirming their words with signs; He walks amid the seven golden candlesticks. And yet He rests as a man may rest who has arisen from his ordinary life to effect some great deed of emancipation and deliverance; but, having accomplished it, returns again to the ordinary routine of his former life, glad and satisfied in his heart. Nor is this rest for Christ alone, but for us also, who are for ever identified with Him in his glorious life. We have been raised up together with Him in the mind and purpose of God, and have been made to sit with Him in the heavenlies; so that in Jesus we have already entered into the rest of God, and have simply to appropriate it by a living faith.

How then may we practically realise and enjoy the rest of God?—(1) We must will the will of God. So long as the will of God, whether in the Bible or in providence is going in one direction and our wills in another, rest is impossible. Can there be rest in an earthly household when the children are ever chafing against the regulations and control of their parents? How much less can we be at rest if we harbour an incessant spirit of insubordination and questioning, contradicting and resisting the will of God? That will must be done on earth as it is in heaven. None can stay his hand, or say, What doest Thou? It will be done with us, or in spite of us. If we resist it, the yoke against which we kick will only rub a sore place on our shin, but we must still carry it. How much wiser, then, meekly to yield to it, and submit ourselves under the mighty hand of God, saying, "Not my will, but Thine be done." The man who has learnt the secret of Christ, in saying a perpetual "Yes" to the will of God; whose life is a strain of rich music to the theme, "Even so, Father"; whose will follows the current of the will of God, as the smoke from our chimneys permits itself to be wafted by the winds of autumn—that man will find rest unto his soul. And though we may not be always able to feel glad and acquiescent, yet if we will God's will, and are willing to be made willing to will it, then our feelings will presently follow in the train of the will, and we shall come to cry, "I delight to do thy will, O my God."

(2) We must accept the finished work of Christ.—He has ceased from the work of our redemption, because there was no more to do. Our sins and the sins of the world were put away. The power of the adversary was annulled. The gate of heaven was opened to all that believe. All was finished, and was very good. Let us then cease from our works. Let us no longer feel as if we have to do aught, by our tears, or prayers, or works, to make ourselves acceptable to God. Why should we try to add one stitch to a finished garment, or append one stroke to the signed and sealed warrant of pardon, placed within our hands? We need have no anxiety as to the completeness or sufficiency of a divinely finished thing. Let us quiet our fears by considering that what satisfies Christ, our Saviour and Head, may well satisfy us. Let us dare to stand without a qualm in God's presence, by virtue of the glorious and completed sacrifice of Calvary. Let us silence every tremor of unrest by recalling the dying cry of the cross, and the witness of the empty grave.

(3) We must trust our Father's care.—"Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you." Sometimes a wild deluge, sweeping all before it, and sometimes like the continual dropping of water, so does care mar our peace. That we shall some day fall by the hand of Saul; that we shall be left to starve or pine away our days in a respectable workhouse; that we shall never be able to get through the difficulties of the coming days or weeks. Household cares, family cares, business cares; cares about servants, children, money; crushing cares, and cares that buzz around the soul like a swarm of gnats on a summer's day. What rest can there be for a soul thus beset? But, when we once learn to live by faith, believing that our Father loves us, and will not forget or forsake us, but is pledged to supply all our needs; when we acquire the holy habit of talking to Him about all, and handing over all to Him, at the moment that the tiniest shadow is cast upon the soul; when we accept insult, and annoyance, and interruption, coming to us from whatever quarter, as being his permission, and, therefore, as part of his dear will for us; then we have learnt the secret of the Gospel of Rest.

(4) We must follow our Shepherd's lead.—We which have believed do enter into rest (ver. 3). The way is dark; the mountain track is often hidden from our sight by the heavy mists that hang over hill and fell; we can hardly discern a step in front. But our Divine Guide knows. He who trod earth's pathways is going unseen at our side. The shield of his environing protection is all around; and his voice in its clear, sweet accents is whispering peace. Why should we fear? He who touches us touches his bride, his purchased possession, the apple of his eye. We may, therefore, trust and not be afraid. Though the mountains should depart, or the hills be removed, yet will his loving kindness not depart from us, neither will the covenant of his peace be removed. And amid the storm, and darkness, and the onsets of our foes, we shall hear Him soothing us, with the sweet refrain of his own lullaby of rest: "My peace I give unto you; in the world ye shall have tribulation, but in Me ye shall have peace."

THE TOWN OF BANGALORE has been in a state of uproar, the cause of disturbance being the conversion to Christianity of a married girl of the Naidu caste, named Muthulutchmi, who was recently baptized. Rev. Josiah Hudson, Wesleyan missionary, says that it will be difficult for people in England to form an idea of the storm that has been created over this zenana convert. Several public meetings have been held in the town to discuss the question, and many parents have withdrawn their children from the mission schools, with the result that two schools have been almost deserted. Householders are also closing their houses against zenana visitors. The excitement in Hindu circles has been intense, and legal process has been threatened.

NESTA'S NEW YEAR RESOLVE.

By EVA TRAVERS EVERED POOLE.

I do not know if you will think it quite fair to peep over Nesta's shoulder, as she sits this New Year's Eve writing in her blue-covered diary. Some of you would not like a stranger to read your secrets, but I think Nesta will forgive us if she ever learns that this little story about her has helped anyone onward and heavenward.

This is what she had written, in a neat, clear hand, better than that of most girls of eleven years old: "I am a Christian—that is, I hope I am; but this is one of the things that trouble me. I don't always feel sure about it; and sometimes, if anyone were to ask me if I was one, I should not dare to say Yes. I wonder if other people ever have doubts about it? I do believe in Him; but I don't always feel that He hears my prayers; and so I go on groping in the dark, and doing such hateful things, making all sorts of blunders, until I get so discouraged, and think it's of no use trying to be a Christian. Oh, dear! to-morrow is New Year's day, and I must begin fresh—I will, I will try harder——."

Then came a little lower down in the page of the diary, these words in big print:—

NEW YEAR'S RESOLVE—"I WILL TRY AND TRUST JESUS MORE."

Poor little Nesta! As she looked at her New Year's resolve printed in big letters, tears gathered in her blue eyes, and a sort of lonely despair crept over her young heart. For had she not resolved something almost the same last New Year's Eve, and, on looking back over the story of the past year, what a miserable failure to trust Jesus it all looked! And would the coming year be any better? Ah! that was the question.

Putting down her pen, and blotting and closing her little book, Nesta rose, and made her way downstairs to Ethel Lyman's room. Ethel Lyman was a distant cousin of her mother's, who, for many years, had been too much of an invalid to take any part in the busy scenes of life. Years ago, Nesta's mother had offered her a home, and this kind act had been more than repaid by the sunshine and blessing which Ethel Lyman brought into the house with her. The tiny room given up to her became the very abode of peace, and there troubled hearts came with their sorrow, weary souls with their burdens, little children with their joys, and in Ethel's sweet, God-taught ministry found comfort, rest, and sympathy. To-night, as Nesta entered, she thought she had never seen Ethel look so sweet, and fair, and fragile, lying like a lily amongst her crimson rugs and white pillows, the faint rosy light of the shaded lamp failing to give colour to her wasted cheeks, but the beautiful light in her wonderful grey eyes looking like a radiancy from heaven itself. The room was fragrant with sweet-scented flowers and dainty with the small elegancies that seemed naturally to surround Ethel Lyman. Nesta stole softly in, with a pleading "I hope I am not disturbing you?" seeing Ethel was lying, Bible in hand, with her eyes upraised and shining, as if in happy vision.

"Not a bit, darling. I am glad to have you. So glad to have a New Year's Eve chat with you. Isn't there just a wee shade of trouble on your face, Nesta?" passing her hand gently over Nesta's brow.

"More then a shade, Ethel; a great cloud, I fancy," said Nesta with a little nervous laugh, trying not to show how sore her heart was. But Ethel's quick glance of sympathy rendered this impossible; and, after just a minute's silence, Nesta knelt down by Ethel's side, and laid her fair curly head upon her lap.

"Tell me the trouble, dearie?" murmured Ethel's soft, caressing voice.

"It's about my New Year's resolve," said the child. "I cannot keep it, Ethel; I made the same last year, and yet I was always in trouble, always in the dark, and never happy for long together."

"What have you resolved, Nesta?"

"That I will try and trust Jesus more this year," replied Nesta, shyly hiding her face.

Ethel smiled a sweet, peculiar smile, as she made answer, "Will you alter your New Year's resolve a little, Nesta?"

"How?" said the child, looking up quickly.

"By taking out that word 'try,' and just leaving the word 'trust,' with nothing but a hearty 'I will!' in front of it."

"Will that make any difference?"

"All the difference in the world, darling. You would never dream of trying to trust me! You trust me, simply but perfectly. Now, just stop 'trying to trust,' and trust Him in the same simple way. Give yourself up entirely to Jesus, trusting in Him for all the help you need, every day of the coming year. He is not only your perfect pattern, but your perfect helper. You are as weak as you can be, but He will be your strength, your ALL—only don't try to trust Him—just trust——."

Nesta looked earnestly at her cousin, a ray of sunlight seeming to burst across the trouble-cloud on her face.

"Trying is hard; trusting is easy," she said, softly and slowly, more to herself than Ethel.

Ethel only smiled.

"I think—no, I am sure—I have been so busy trying that I have forgotten the trusting. Has that been my mistake, Ethel, and is that why I cannot keep happy all the time?"

"I am sure it is, darling. We need not waste time in trying to believe, or to trust, or to love; that is often a hard task, but let us enter the New Year without any struggle at all; happily believing, simply trusting, and gladly loving our dear, precious Saviour. Let us put our hands in his, willing that He should lead us, and we shall live in the sunlight all the way. Come, Nesta, not 'Try,' but 'Trust' is your motto."

"It shall be, Ethel," promised Nesta, with a glow of earnestness in her dear little face, as she rose to kiss her cousin gratefully. "I'll go and alter it in my diary at once," and she bounded away—closing the door gently after her, however, remembering that Ethel always shivered at a sharp sound, as though a blow had struck her.

And so it was. Many a time she forgot to change the word, and her faith and courage left her; many a time the darkness threatened to overcloud her again; but, like a rainbow in the cloud, the golden letters of the little word "Trust" gleamed out, and reminded her to look to Jesus in shadow as well as sunshine, and the darkness only drove her nearer to Him.

Long years after, people, looking on the young girl's sweet, peaceful face, little dreamed of the doubts that had once filled her soul; little knew when her eyes filled with happiness that they had ever been filled with tears. If they ever put the question to what she owed the serene sunlight of her soul, she would smile and answer, "Just by taking one word out of my 'New Year's Resolve!'"

Young reader, which shall it be for you? Trying to trust, or trusting, throughoutt his new year? Would it not make "all the difference" in your life, if, your New Year's motto being, "I will try and trust Jesus more," like Nesta, you change it to "I will trust Jesus more."

"We are orphans and fatherless, and our mothers are as widows."—Lam. v. 3.

ORPHANS AT BAGSHOT.

An Earnest Appeal is made on behalf of the 220 DESTITUTE ORPHAN CHILDREN who are now being Clothed, Fed, and Educated at the ROYAL ALBERT ORPHAN ASYLUM at BAGSHOT. The Institution is conducted on strictly non-canvassing principles, so that only the most needy and deserving are admitted. In addition to a simple religious and secular education, the children are trained as Carpenters, Tailors, Shoemakers, Bakers, Gardeners, Farm Servants, Domestic Servants, Laundry Maids, Needlewomen, &c.; so that boys and girls are alike fitted, on leaving the Institution, immediately to earn their own living.

The Committee of Management make a MOST EARNEST APPEAL to the readers of "THE CHRISTIAN" to help them in this very practical work of charity. They feel assured that it is one of the few working examples showing how the poorer classes of orphan children at the present day can be brought up, both morally and physically, so as to fight the battle of life, and become good members of society. An article appeared in "The Christian" of Nov. 30 describing in detail the working of the Institution.

Donations, but especially Annual Subscriptions, are much wanted, and any amounts forwarded to the Secretary, Mr. Richard Witherby, 62, King William-street, London, E.C., or to Messrs. Morgan & Scott, will be thankfully received.

THE EARLSWOOD ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS has accommodation for 700 patients. The present income enables the Committee to receive not more than 600. 150 applicants are earnestly seeking admission by election. Many of these must be disappointed unless funds are forthcoming. Contributions are urgently required. Ample provision made for private cases on payments regulated by the Board of Management.

CHRISTMAS GIFTS for the POOR

Sympathising friends are heartily thanked for contributions toward giving Food, Coals, and Clothing to the Poor of a very poor London parish. For each 10s. forwarded, 15 adults or 20 children can be provided—by a local Committee—with a substantial meal.—A. HOMES of HOPE,

4, 5, & 6, REGENT SQUARE, GRAY'S-INN ROAD,
LONDON, W.C.

Special efforts are made on behalf of mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.

A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women, before they become mothers, as are unfitted, from their previous good character and position, to mix with others.

The Committee are obliged to make an urgent appeal for contributions:—

1. For the General Fund: the expenses of which amount to about £5 a day.
2. For the Child's Fund: a guinea or two to pay the nurses would in many cases rescue a mother and child. Five Shillings would pay for a child for a week.
3. For Law Expenses: in every case if it be possible the men are compelled to pay the sum allowed by law for the child's support.

The applications are so distressing and urgent that every shilling has been spent.

The Committee are in very urgent need of £250.

THAMES CHURCH MISSION.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT.

DURING the year the Missionaries have paid 79,059 visits to individuals, 16,326 visits to barges, 19,839 visits to ships and steamers, and 2,385 visits to foreign vessels; they have distributed 538,260 English and 18,453 foreign tracts, 1,277 English and 2,813 foreign "portions" of Scripture; and 17,573 copies of the New Testament; they have also sold 641 Bibles, and 5,845 New Testaments in English and 105 Bibles and 104 New Testaments in foreign languages; 450 Prayer Books have been either sold or given away; 603 total abstinence pledges have been taken; library bags have been placed on 269 additional vessels; medical aid has been rendered in 17 cases, and hospital letters granted in 107; 1,053 mufflers and cuffs have been given away, and 12,266 Emigrant's Packets have been distributed on board 141 emigrant vessels; and last, but by no means least, 5,065 services have been held, with an aggregate attendance of 130,727. Never before in the history of the Mission has so much been accomplished. To God be all the glory!

The work has been, and they hope it will ever be, essentially a quiet work, but they venture to believe it has been none the less real. "Jesus only" is the keynote of every effort of the Thames Church Mission.

"OH! MY FATHER!"

BY LADY HOPE.

Seven o'clock had just struck, on a dark, rainy evening, when the gutters were overflowing, and the streets were full of mud; for London streets may be seen at their worst on a stormy night in December. The flaring gas-jets gave, with undeserved partiality, their whole illumination to sundry public-houses at the corners of the lesser and greater thoroughfares; and, amidst the mud and dirt, the darkness and the noise, the crowd of foot passengers and the rumble of carts and cabs, stood the half-open door of one of our coffee saloons.

"Do shut that door!" said someone; "the cold gets in."

"Don't shut it!" said someone else. "There are some girls outside. They want to come in."

Then it was swung wide open, and a group of three girls entered. Two of them were supporting—almost carrying in their arms—a third. She was quietly, neatly dressed, or had been so during the course of the day; but now her bonnet was battered in. Her clothes were covered with mud. She was so intoxicated that she could not stand.

"We found her," said the other girls, "lying in the street, outside a public-house. A crowd of men and boys were striking and kicking her. We went into the midst of the ring—we were not afraid, for we are Christians! And we said, 'Stand back! and let us save her!' So we got her away from them; and we brought her here; for we thought you would help her."

It was a pitiable story; but they had done wisely in bringing her to us. She was allowed to rest in a warm comfortable room. She was given strong coffee, and after a time some food; for she had not eaten anything that day. Then her face and hands were washed; and she was soon able to tell her history. She was quite young. Her home was in the country; but she had come away from home, and had entered a bad house in London. Only three weeks she had tried this life of sin; and the cruelties she had endured had driven her to drink.

"Why did you leave your home?" she was asked.

Then a bitter cry was wrung from her; and she rocked herself backwards and forwards, moaning to herself.

"Oh! my father! my father!" she said. "He drinks so much; and then he beats us. Mother, and all of us, has a dreadful time. I could not bear it any longer; and so I came away."

"Come with me," said one of our kind helpers; "I will take you to a Home, where you will find food and shelter. There you will have kind friends; no one can hurt you or do you any harm."

"No! no!" she screamed. "I will not go. I know what you mean. I understand all about it. Oh! my father! my father! if only he were right! if only he were good! I should have a home of my own to go to! I should never have been like this, if only I had been like other girls, and had A GOOD FATHER!"

This poor creature, in her utter misery, only spoke the experience of thousands. The fathers go to ruin; and then the children follow. It is indeed well known by all Christian and temperance workers that good fathers have, as a rule, respectable, well-conducted daughters. No sober man would rest for a moment, if he thought his daughter were roaming the streets, or drinking herself to death. These tender home ties are not easily broken. They cannot be snapped, except by vice and dissipation.

Will you not help to save the fathers? Will you help us to enlarge and extend our coffee-house work? At the Golden Bells, High-street, Notting-hill-gate, we want to OPEN A LARGE HALL. This increase of our premises, the additional space, we absolutely need. For two years we have laboured here, and the result has been, as we expected, a great blessing. We now have not room to move. We cannot hold the meetings, classes, or associations that we require, because we have only small rooms, and very close ones; whereas, surrounded as we are by such a population, and our house much frequented by customers from a distance, we could do an enormous amount of good in a variety of ways, if we could receive the people, instead of sending them away night after night.

I have often helped my friends, and am still doing so, day after day, in their work. Will you not help me to throw wide open, at this time, a much-needed door? We can easily go in and use it; for at this moment we and our helpers are visiting a large number of the poor. The needs of the people are very great. We find it difficult to meet anything like the actual want that surrounds us. Can you help us?

On all sides applications are coming to us for the opening of new coffee-houses, worked on our own principles and conducted by ourselves—some with mission work and some without, according to the premises occupied and their localities.

This we can do, if you will give us the money we require.

Hundreds, I may say thousands, of homes might be made happy, children might be saved, mothers' hearts gladdened, a national burden lightened, if only we could open and work ourselves a network of "Our Coffee Rooms" on a large scale, in London, in cities, in towns, and in villages. Thus in each fresh locality a death-blow would be struck, by this practical temperance work, at the deadly drink which forms the basis of so much evil.

Will you enable us now to go forward? Past experience has taught us many a lesson. We tremble before our successes rather than our discouragements. But we are ready, by means of a trained and efficient staff, to increase and extend this work at once, if only we have your aid to do so. Once started, we can easily make the coffee-houses self-supporting. We have no difficulty in attracting customers. We have no difficulty in making them comfortable. We only want to open the rooms for them. Can you possibly help us?

OPEN-AIR PREACHING.

Some admirable counsel was tendered to the members of the Open-air Mission on the 17th by Rev. Newman Hall. The occasion was the annual prayer-meeting, held in Hawkstone Hall. After dealing with the antiquity and divinity of open-air preaching, he dwelt upon its usefulness. It was good for young men to preach out of doors, because it gave them pluck, voice, and health. It was good for the hearers also, as they were willing to listen out of doors, even though they would not come inside. He advocated brevity. "Be as short as you like," he said. "When I began, I preached an hour and a half; now I only preach thirty-five minutes. But the hands of the clock seems to go quicker when I am preaching than at any other time." He was against discussion or long arguments. "Give it them right away!" he exclaimed. "The masses are not in sympathy with infidelity, but will listen to the Gospel.

Mr. Hall then recounted his own experiences as an open-air preacher, first among the hop-pickers near Maidstone, and gave some striking illustrations of the way the word had been blessed. The incident of incidents was the origin of his little book "Come to Jesus," which was the outcome of an open-air sermon in Hull, and the circulation of which now exceeds four million copies.

WATCHWORD FOR THE YEAR.

Wilt Thou, dear Master, as the years are passing,
In me thy purposes of love fulfil;
Wilt Thou transform me into thine own image,
And may I in thy loving hand be still!

For, oh, I want to be more really like Thee,
More sympathising, holy, tender, true;
More earnest in the work which Thou appointest,
More useful in the world I'm passing through.

I want to be constrained by Thee entirely,
To serve so faithfully my gracious King;
That self shall daily have a sharp denial,
And thy love only be my motive-spring!

I know not what Thou may'st consider needful
Thus to transform me to thine image fair;
I only ask for willing, glad submission,
That I in no wise may thy work impair.

Perhaps Thou dost intend in loving-kindness
To mould me very gently, hour by hour:
Whate'er Thou wilt, thy grace is all-sufficient,
To Thee be Glory, and to Thee be Power!

AMONG THE ZULUS.

It is three years and more since we came here, and we have been permitted during that time to carry the Gospel to very many of the heathen around. We were not long here when we found that we must take the Gospel message to them in their own kraals. Itinerant work is what is most needed here as yet. Although we are under English rule and enjoy many advantages, we are in the midst of a heathenism as dense and as degrading as could be found in the heart of the continent. Of course, around long-established stations better things are seen, but on the locations here we find the people for the most part in the savage state in which they have lived for generations.

Forbidding as these creatures are in this their heathen state, it is our joy to go amongst them with the message of love and salvation. Everywhere I find an open door for the word; great numbers often come together to listen to it, and I think not a few receive some of the truth into their dark hearts. A meeting-house has been put up in one district where many have come within sound of the Gospel.

We are desirous of taking a new step, which we find necessary if our work is to go on. Owing to a good many having lately moved away to Pondoland and other places, we find it needful to go to a more convenient centre. We could procure a site on good land and well suited for mission purposes within a few miles of our present home, but we need means; £60 would, we think, enable us to do as indicated, as we would with our own hands do much or most of the work. Mrs. Guinness, Harley House, Bow-road, London, E., is able to give particulars regarding ourselves or our labours.

Sincerely yours, W. Christison.
Port Shepstone, Natal, South Africa.

NO MERE LEGISLATORS, either in Westminster or in College-green, will ever be able to go to the root of our Irish troubles. The disease is too deep for statesmen to reach. For the most part, they seem hardly to suspect the existence of the disease. Most Roman Catholic countries may be said to be on the brink of revolution. Is it not so in France, Spain, Italy? It certainly is so in Ireland. Is there a common cause? We think there is. No people who bend their necks to the yoke of a priesthood claiming to occupy the place of God, can possibly possess even the primary elements of liberty. And no people lying under this ignoble bondage can by any possibility be at rest. The hope that many seem to cherish, therefore, that Ireland can be quieted by legislation, is in our judgment misleading and futile.—Christian Irishman.

Central Africa for Christ.

This was the keynote of meetings held in Manchester on Sunday and Monday last week, attended and addressed by Mr. Graham Wilmot Brooke, recently returned from the Soudan. Many Christians who listened to the story of Africa's great need felt themselves verily guilty as concerning their dark-skinned brethren, and gave a willing ear to Mr. Brooke's words as to the progress of the Gospel in the interior of the Continent.

Mr. Brooke delivered his first address on Sunday morning in the Central Hall, in Oldham-street. Mr. Leonard K. Shaw presided over the meeting, which was prefaced by a season of earnest prayer, the cause of Africa being definitely laid before the Lord. Mr. Shaw took occasion to speak in recognition of the warm devotedness of Mr. Brooke, and it was very cheering to hear him add that many Christians in Manchester have constantly besought the Lord of the harvest on behalf of our young friend's pioneer missions. "Only last week," remarked Mr. Shaw, "a gentleman told me that every Thursday, at the prayer-meeting in his mill, Graham Brooke and his work are specially mentioned." In some further words Mr. Shaw acknowledged the goodness of God in raising up such earnest labourers for distant lands. "Thank God," he said, "Mr. Brooke is back again for the third time, before going forth into Central Africa to carry the Gospel to its benighted millions."

Mr. Brooke's address was as powerful as it was simple. He spoke from personal knowledge, and testified what his own eyes had seen. On the one hand the story was sad in the extreme; on the other it was full of encouragement. His remarks were confined to the condition of things in the vast Congo basin, which region occupied the larger portion of his attention on the last of his three journeys. He spoke first of the awful wickedness of heathenism, and afterwards of the wonders that Christ has wrought in Africa.

MYRIADS OF HEATHEN.

He began by briefly explaining the extent of the region, with its immense towns and innumerable hamlets, and, in order to convey some idea of the denseness of the population, he adopted the expression of a traveller whom he had met, that the people "swarm like ants." Myriads of heathen! Thick darkness, unrelieved by any light! Some estimate the habitual cannibals at ten millions. They are not of the class who, in times of special excitement or war, eat prisoners or enemies; but they are people whose first thought, on seeing a stranger, is to catch him and kill him for food. And the fact of your being a friend of A makes you at once an enemy of B. Illustrating this and other experiences, Mr. Brooke said: While on a long canoe voyage I stopped at a large town, and the people came to the beach and talked with me. I had been staying at places below theirs, and they knew that I called myself a messenger of God. The fact of there being a God, the Creator of all things and very powerful, is known to them already, it being a tradition of their tribe. They crowded around me, and brought some sick people for treatment. I was careful to explain to them what I was about, and told them of a mission station many miles lower down, at which they might learn more of Christ. At the next place, about five miles farther on, we found the whole population out with their guns and spears, ready to launch their canoes and catch us, simply because we had stopped at the place below. We had to go at once and assure them that there had been no treasonable talk with their enemies.

SIN ABOUNDING.

Enlarging upon the exceeding wickedness of heathenism, Mr. Brooke observed that what is said in the Book of Revelation as to those who are without the gate of the city, and in the Epistle to the Romans of those who are given up to their own evil passions, is a true description of what he himself has seen on the Upper Congo. He remarked: After the age of eight years, there is no crime that I know of with which the children of Central Africa are not practically acquainted. I have with my own ears heard a little boy of about seven or eight years talking and laughing about having assisted in eating up his own mother. The extent to which the devil has indeed had his own way in that region, and is tormenting the people, is simply awful. I have seen canoes full of bound slaves, such as go up the river every month, to be sold for ivory, and then to be eaten. I have slept in a village reception hut with skulls surrounding me—skulls of men who have been eaten. There are millions of cannibals, extending over tens of thousands of square miles, and the practice is carried on to such a degree that I was again and again informed that one tribe had eaten the whole of its slaves, and was sending hundreds of miles around to get more for the same purpose. I have no fear of exaggerating when speaking on the sad wickedness of the country, because all I can say must fall short of the shocking reality.* Mr. Brooke spoke with emphasis when he declared that in narrating these horrors he was not endeavouring to raise missionary zeal. Any other motive than loyal obedience to Christ's command to tell the Gospel in all the earth will surely fail the missionary in dark Africa. Rather he mentioned these things to show the apathetic guilt which lies at the door of the Christian Church, which has not inquired into the condition of the people of the Soudan, as it ought to have done, seeing that the Lord's commission was that the Gospel should be taken to them.

MIRACLES OF MISSIONS.

Proceeding to refer to Christian effort among the many millions of the Lower Congo, the speaker said that when he left there were five workers, who had not been long settled there, and one was preaching to the people. But what is one among so many? I have, said Mr. Brooke, marched about 230 miles through the mountains to a tribe scattered in little farms, and in that country the Gospel has been proclaimed. There are several mission stations, and at three or more of them the Gospel is being abundantly blessed. Genuine conversions — conviction - of - sin conversions — have taken place. At one of these stations Mr. Brooke stayed a month, and, though not cannibals, the people were quite as hard of heart, and quite as attached to their own sins, which are characterised by fearful cruelty, as well as great moral corruption, yet many are now following Christ. When any one of these people begins testifying for Jesus, he is liable to be turned out of his town or village, but these and other hardships are willingly endured. Moreover, as soon as Jesus is acknowledged, He is preached; converts spread the Gospel heartily, and go many miles looking up and cheering their isolated brethren. At one station there have been fifty conversions since Mr. Brooke visited it, and he declared that he knew no congregation in England which, as a whole, has communicants so constant or so spiritually minded as those late savages. They have deep theoretical and spiritual knowledge of the offices of Christ, and holiness is the order of the day. A real persecution, although no bloodshed, attends upon the profession of Christ. In conclusion, Mr. Brooke again called upon his hearers to realise their responsibility in regard to the heathen of Africa.

A CALL TO CONSECRATION.

Mr. Reginald Radcliffe followed with some searching words as to the great commission of the Church. The desideratum is entire surrender to Christ, and a being filled with the Holy Ghost. These points he enforced with power, and entirely carried the meeting with him, when he affirmed that the Church in Anglo-Saxon countries has neglected to discharge her great responsibility to the less enlightened nations of the world. He concluded by leading the meeting in prayer for power and grace in abundant measure, so that the world may speedily be evangelised, to the glory of God.

WHO IS ON THE LORD'S SIDE?

In the evening both these brethren delivered addresses to a large congregation in the Refuge Conference Hall, Strangeways. Indeed, each spoke twice, once at the ordinary meeting, and a second time at a prayer-meeting held afterwards. Having pointed some important lessons from 1 Chron. xii., specially dwelling upon truths suggested by verse 18 ("Thine are we, David, and on thy side, thou son of Jesse: peace, peace be unto thee, and peace be to thine helpers," &c.), Mr. Brooke asked Christians to examine themselves as to whether they were really on the side of Christ, and doing his work.

Mr. Radcliffe dwelt upon the Lord's words in John xiv. 15: "If ye love Me, keep my commandments." One of those commandments is, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." Referring to the considerations which have in the past deterred Christians from acting on their heart's desires, and taking the Gospel into foreign countries, Mr. Radcliffe showed that the command obviates the special "call," which was once held to be a pre-requisite to entering upon a missionary career.

TRANSFORMING POWER OF THE GOSPEL.

In the course of his second address, Mr. Brooke spoke of what he had seen and heard on the Lower Congo. Debased savages have been transformed by the power of Christ without those civilising processes and influences which some have contended for as necessary preliminaries for their elevation. They have, in fact, gone quite beyond most of the people in England who bear the name of Christ, for they not only endure persecution with patience, but suffer themselves to be defrauded, and actually render good in return for evil. Mr. Brooke told stories in illustration of all this, showing most clearly that these people have in many cases stepped at a bound from the power of Satan to the power of God. Those African Christians have but a few of the books of the Bible, but they make grand use of them, bringing the teaching to bear upon their hearts and lives. We, said Mr. Brooke, sit with sin upon us, while these people are being saved straight from sin; they step into liberty such as we, as congregations, neither aspire to nor expect. Will not many of them rise up in judgment against many of us? For, though they are now what they are, they were brought up to be cunning, and to cheat, and they are so clever that I have never heard of their being overreached in business transactions. The glorious liberty of the children of God is with them no mere theological expression, but a living reality and power.

At the suggestion of Mr. Kirlew, of the Children's Refuge, Mr. Brooke also spoke some encouraging words to several lads nearing twenty years of age, belonging to the institution, who have for some time had it upon their hearts to go to the Soudan, when possible, and as the way may open, in order to there preach Christ while earning their living at trades such as they now practise. Mr. Radcliffe added a few words, as also did Mr. Leonard K. Shaw, who presided over the proceedings. It was felt by many that a Sunday thus devoted to a consideration of the needs of

* It should be noted that Mr. Brooke was speaking of the Mobange tribes, and not of the Balolos—a very numerous and powerful tribe inhabiting that portion of the interior to the south of the great bend of the Congo.

Christ's heathen had been spent in a right Lord's Day spirit.

SIXTY MILLIONS OF UNEVANGELISED BLACKS.

The meeting on Monday afternoon was held in the Mayor's Parlour at the Town Hall, and presided over by Alderman Hopkinson. Mr. BROOKE's address was on the Central Soudan, information concerning which region has for some time been eagerly awaited by a number of earnest Christian workers in Manchester. Indeed, some two years ago, a fund was started towards helping any effort that might be made to send the Gospel to the vast territory stretching from the Atlantic to the Red Sea. The Soudan, said Mr. Brooke, is peopled with black races, chiefly negro, almost all of them Mohammedans, and formed into large kingdoms with fairly centralised government, under Moslem Sultans. Perhaps about 60,000,000 in number, these people have so far been left totally unevangelised. Large numbers of them can read Arabic, internal communications are said to be generally pretty open, and the people are attentive, eager listeners. Knowledge of one language opens up as large a work as any one man need attempt.

Speaking at length of the various routes to the Soudan, Mr. Brooke detailed his own interesting travels, in the course of which he received, as a missionary, unvarying courtesy, and often great generosity, from political officials and trading houses. In return, he now felt bound to avoid mixing himself in politics or trade questions. In the Western Soudan he distributed copies of the Scriptures, and did not experience any such fanatical opposition as has been declared to be certain to show itself on the part of the Mohammedan authorities and people. The Niger route offers great advantages, although it also presents peculiar difficulties; other routes are either absolutely closed or impracticable at present.

With regard to his own purposes, Mr. Brooke said: My desire is, if practicable, to go to the existing mission station at Kipo hill, opposite Eggan, on the Niger, and bordering on the great Moslem kingdom of Sokoto. Here the important Haüsa language can be studied, and any number of Mohammedans met, from whom further information may be got as to the condition of things to the North. The mission station is an outpost of the Church Missionary Society, in association with which I wish to go to this place, and the Society feels the warmest interest in the matter. Experience has shown me the utter impossibility of forming opinions of any value except from local knowledge, and as I see no possibility of sailing before the end of February, I am not likely to commence work before April, 1889.

In answer to a question by Rev. T. Champness as to the proportion of pagans in the Soudan population, Mr. Brooke said that his strong conviction was that nearly all the Mohammedans are really pagans living in a rough conformity with the religion which has become fashionable through contact with the Arabs. Replying to another question, he said that though there is no open idolatry, charms abound both in public places and in the houses of the people.

After some hearty words by the Dean of Manchester, Mr. Radcliffe, and Mr. Shaw, each expressing a hope that God will prosper Mr. Brooke's way in the future as He has in the past, the proceedings terminated. Prebendary Macdonald and the Mayor of Manchester were among those who afterwards congratulated the young missionary traveller upon his devotion to the cause of evangelising the dark millions of the Soudan.

It will be seen from our list of Forthcoming Meetings that Mr. Brooke will address a meeting at Regent's Park Chapel, N.W., on Monday evening, January 7.

Mr. W. J. Orsman, Costers' Hall, 234—242, Hoxton-street, N., appeals for funds to carry on free cocoa breakfasts, and an Irish-stew soup-kitchen, throughout the winter.

A Seven Years' Evangel Tour

Round the World.

BY REV. J. MOUNTAIN.

III.—CONCLUSION.

WE left South Australia in the early part of November, 1886, and sailed for New Zealand viâ Melbourne. New Zealand is about 1000 miles from the latter place, and we arrived just at the commencement of the summer. We were welcomed by the Congregationalists and by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Otago. We laboured in this colony about eighteen months, and conducted nineteen missions, which ranged from Invercargill in the south to Auckland in the north. All the missions were attended with blessing, but some more so than others. I have seen it stated that religion is at a low ebb in New Zealand, and that the ministers of various denominations are lacking in earnestness regarding the salvation of souls. Both parts of this statement are, so far as my observation went, entirely erroneous. As a rule, the ministers of all denominations there work very hard, often preaching three times on Sundays, besides travelling considerable distances. I found very few traces of what is called the "new theology" either in New Zealand or in any of the colonies.

As to climate, we found the summer weather exceedingly pleasant; but the autumn, winter, and spring are trying. The mean temperature is considerably above that of England, but the rain is very copious, the winds are cold and searching, and the sudden changes are very severe. Moreover, many of the houses are built of wood, and are not lined. They are, therefore, extremely cold at night. People suffering from pulmonary affections require to be very careful. The country is fertile, well-wooded, mountainous, and well supplied with beautiful lakes. As to trade and commerce, New Zealand is passing through a time of serious depression. What the country now needs is not an influx of clerks, drapers, and grocers, but of small farmers and farm-labourers. With a plentiful supply of these, and economy in public and private expenditure, its vast resources will be opened up, and prosperity will again visit her shores.

On March 26 of this year we sailed from Auckland for San Francisco. One of our fellow-passengers was the Bishop of Nelson, Dr. Suter, a liberal and large-minded man, with whom I had much pleasant fellowship. We spent three weeks in San Francisco, and then sailed for British Columbia, our desire being to see as much as possible of the Dominion of Canada. After staying three weeks in Vancouver's Island, we took the train from Vancouver for Canada proper. The Canadian Pacific Railway extends a distance of 4500 miles, and is well built and well officered. For the first 800 miles the scenery is of the most magnificent description. After travelling 1500 miles we reached Winnipeg, a large town, the capital of Manitoba. It is well supplied with large and beautiful churches. We remained there about two weeks, and conducted a mission in the Congregational Church. We then started for Toronto, a journey of 1500 miles, partly by rail, but chiefly by Lake Superior and Lake Huron. I preached several Sundays in Toronto, and two months at London, Ontario. A number of applications for missions reached me while I was in the latter, but so far as we could see the cloud of guidance seemed to point homewards. After a pleasant voyage from Montreal, we landed at Liverpool on October 12, thankful to our gracious God for the privilege of preaching the glorious Gospel all round the world, and for all his protecting care during the vicissitudes and dangers of the journey.

Taking a general survey of our seven years' colonial tour, I have been greatly struck by the religiousness of the people, and the willingness of even unconverted people to support the public worship of God, because they respect Christianity, and acknowledge that its influence in the world is beneficent. Another thing which has impressed me is the fact that all denominations of Christians are liberally supported, and do not need, as they do not possess, State patronage and control. Judging from what I saw of the Church of England in the colonies, I should say that, if that Church in England were disestablished next year, its spiritual strength and its hold upon the general public would be greatly increased. Another thing impressed me, and that was the practical spirit of ministers and churches generally, their fraternity with each other, and their devotion to all religious and philanthropic matters. Much attention and energy is given in Great Britain to ecclesiastical differences, educational squabbles, and fierce political contests; but in the colonies these things are almost unknown, so that the churches come nearer to each other, work more together, and labour more directly for spiritual and philanthropic objects than in the Mother Country. Lastly, I never felt so thankful as I do now to be a citizen of the world-wide British Empire. In the colonies one finds a reproduction of all that is good and noble in the Mother Country. May the numerous portions of this Empire be united still more closely together, and be, in the future, more conspicuous than ever among the nations of the world, for the love of liberty, peace, righteousness, and the spread of God's Holy Word.

A CALL TO CHINA.

ON the coast of China, lying on the north bank of the great Yangtsi River, there is an immense plain of some 150 miles broad and 170 miles long, with an area of about 13,000 square miles. It is well watered, very fertile, and teeming with a population of some 6½ millions. There are thirteen cities and sixty towns and villages known to us, and I have reason to believe that perhaps other sixty could be found if the place were more thoroughly explored. The highways are canals and rivers. I have travelled over this region at different times, and have visited every city, and a good number of the smaller places.

These journeys were all taken for the purpose of selling Scriptures; and, with the assistance of the native helpers, perhaps twenty thousand portions and New Testaments were sold. In Rukao, with the additional help of Mr. Hogg, we once sold a thousand Scriptures in one day. At another place, single-handed, I sold four hundred and fifty portions during the day. The people bought them, some out of curiosity, others, possibly, because they contained what we had been talking about. The people are quiet, industrious, and well-to-do generally. On our last Bible-selling journey (Sept., 1887) they paid great attention to the preaching of the Gospel. Thousands must have heard it, and I frequently caught the remark, "Every sentence we understand." This was encouraging to the preacher, and I believe I never enjoyed a month's Gospel work so much anywhere.

There is no missionary of any kind throughout this vast region for these six and a half millions of heathen. The country is open, and should be occupied at once by a number of men and women who, out of love to the Lord Jesus Christ, and in obedience to Him, will go and spend and be spent in his service among these perishing heathen. The Lord will surely provide for everyone who is willing to go to the heathen for Christ's sake. Let us have child-like faith in the promise, "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. iv. 19). I am purposing to return to China early in February to work in this hitherto neglected part. May the Lord stir up others to go too, and fit them for the work!

THIRTY YEARS AGO AND NOW.

The last issue of another year seems to call for a few words, from ourselves, of thanks to God and to our readers. We echo what the venerable and lowly-minded George Holland said at the opening of Louisa Lady Ashburton's magnificent new hall at Canning Town last week: "We think how much God must have loved us to have given us such a work to do." With soul and spirit we thank Him for the testimony received frequently during the past year from dear missionary and other readers abroad and at home, to the benefit they have received. It is no small pleasure to know that with the help of our friends we have been able to send The Christian, without charge, to 1400 foreign missionaries and other workers; and although we have directly heard from only a small proportion of them, we are assured by these that they have derived edification and impetus from the instructive articles and the encouraging information which our columns have contained. We shall rejoice if enabled during the coming year to reach a still larger number.

Of course we have not pleased everybody: we have not tried to do so: if we had we should have deserved to fail. We will not spoil the peace and goodwill of the season by recounting the grievances of our few complaining friends. Suffice it to say that they have about balanced each other; those who were displeased that we went too far on any given line were probably equalled by those who suffered because we did not go far enough. We are assured, however, that they would have been still more displeased had we endeavoured to please either of them instead of seeking to please God and satisfy our own conscience.

It is very nearly thirty years since the Revival which had begun in America visited our own shores. One of its chief characteristics was a terrible conviction of sin, followed by a corresponding exultation when the grace of the Gospel had been received. There had been years of legal preaching, and now the glad tidings of a full, free, and present salvation filled thousands with an unknown joy. John iii. 16 and v. 24; Isa. liii. 6, and other passages became luminous as an electric light, and those illuminated by them enlightened others.

The truth of resurrection life in Christ was restored and enjoyed as it had not been since apostolic days, and it was learned that the standard of holy living must correspond with the standing thus apprehended: "Therefore we were buried with Him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."

Very early in those days there came a sense of individual responsibility, and individual effort in very great variety was quickly manifest. The need to-day is not more individual effort, so much as a spirit of harmony combining those multiplied individualisms into one accord and one mind. There is a passage which we would leave with our readers this week, and on which we may dwell a little more fully in our next; it is Ephes. iv. 1—16, especially the last verse. Individuality has degenerated into isolation, and isolation has produced independence one of another, while the grieved Spirit testifies that we are members one of another; members of his body; many members but one body; "the body of Christ and members in particular."

A new era, unsurpassed for fruitfulness in any century since Jesus died and rose and ascended into heaven, will dawn upon us with 1889, if we enter upon the new year "speaking the truth in love, growing up into Him in all things who is the Head, even Christ, from whom the whole body fitly joined together, and compacted by that which EVERY JOINT SUPPLIETH, ACCORDING TO THE EFFECTUAL WORKING IN THE MEASURE OF EVERY PART, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

May God give his beloved saints an old year's benediction and a new year's blessing, while they meditate on this, his holy, acceptable, and perfect will concerning them.

Notes and Comments.

Next week we hope to give portrait and sketch of Rev. E. E. Jenkins, Hon. Sec. of the Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Society.

As this issue goes to press some days earlier than usual, owing to the Christmas holidays, late communications and donations will be acknowledged in our next.

We once again plead the cause of the poor. At this season much is being done to alleviate the hard lot of the weak and the needy, and Christian workers are continually asking for help. We trust that, as in years past, the generosity of our readers will enable us to respond to the appeals of many who are devoting the Christmas holidays and New Year season to deeds of love and mercy.

A letter recently received from Bishop Smythies, of the Universities Mission to Central Africa, confirms the view we have already expressed as to the blockading operations on the Zanzibar Coast. The Bishop says:—

> I hope it is clearly understood in England that the disturbances on the coast have had nothing to do with opposition from the slave traders, or with Mohammedan feeling; but are entirely due to the high-handed action of the members of the German East African Company, who have treated the parts of the coast where they have settled as a conquered country.
> As they have had...to revenge the action of coast people against them, we can see what an opportunity is here opened for cruel reprisals.
> I hope God may bring good out of the evil, but, as the superior of the French mission said to me to-day, it is the very worst moment in the last fifty years that could have been chosen by the Powers for a blockade. Besides it seems to me to be very like a gigantic fraud; the blockade is professedly directed against the slave trade; the real reason for it is to cover the loss of German prestige which would otherwise result from the insolent oppression on the part of the members of the German Company, and their consequent failure to establish themselves in Africa....

Telegrams telling of the slaughter, by British and Egyptian troops, of four hundred Arabs in one brief half hour, are not a very gratifying prelude to the Christmas bells, which are supposed to sound forth the message of "peace on earth, goodwill to men." As far as we have been able to grasp the situation in the Soudan, it seems clear that whatever differences have arisen between the Dervishes and the friendly tribes might easily have been settled by peaceful negotiations, if these had been entered on at the proper time, and in the proper spirit. If this be so, a very heavy burden of guilt rests on the British military authorities in Egypt, as well as on the Government at home. Well might Sir Wilfrid Lawson exclaim in the House of Commons:—

> If this is Christianity and civilisation, then civilisation is a sham, and Christianity is a mockery, a delusion, and a snare.

We cannot help feeling that this "brilliant victory" is, in reality, one more dark stain on our national escutcheon. Moreover, it brings into sharp relief the necessity that is laid upon Great Britain as a professedly Christian country to carry the Gospel message into these regions so long devastated by the slave trader, and the cruel hand of war.

Our readers will learn with pleasure that Mr. H. M. Stanley is reported to have reached the Aruwhimi in August, after having relieved Emin Pasha. It appears, from intelligence received last week from Zanzibar, that Mr. Stanley is in good health, and his expedition in want of nothing. There have been of late many apprehensions and evil rumours as to the fate of the intrepid explorer. Happily, these seem to be now dissipated. We sincerely hope that Mr. Stanley will accomplish his important mission without any further difficulty, and that his future course will add much to our knowledge of the Dark Continent, and greatly help forward the work of its evangelisation.

A few months ago there were many searchings of heart among the officials of our missionary and charitable societies, at a decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, by which the funds of the Moravian missions were made liable to income tax. The Lord Chief Justice ruled that the expression "charitable purposes" in the Act, was only intended to apply to monies devoted to physical relief, and that religious societies could not claim exemption. We are very glad to see that the Court of Appeal last week upset this ruling, and unanimously decided in favour of the Society. The members of the Appeal Court did not quite agree in their method of interpreting the word "charitable," but they were at one in deciding that it applies to the Moravian Missions, and, by parity of reasoning, we should say, to all similar societies.

The power of definite Gospel preaching was established at the mouth of many witnesses at the meeting held a few days ago in token of our dear friend and fellow-worker, Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, director of the Evangelistic Mission, having completed a period of twenty-five years' service of the Gospel in London. During this entire period, the endeavours of Mr. Hurditch, and those with whom he has laboured, have been on strict and steady evangelistic lines, and men and women have uniformly been persuaded to accept Christ, not only in view of God's great goodness, but also of his just severity. By tongue and pen, with untiring diligence, Mr. Hurditch has exerted himself in proclaiming glad tidings and unfolding the Scriptures; and not only is his name now widely known as a Christian worker, but it is rightly associated with activities which have been crowned with abundant spiritual success. We trust many more years of usefulness are before him, and that in the future his word will be with increased assurance, and also greatly multiplied power for good.

This work is instructive, suggestive, full of spiritual force, and at the same time strong and manly; these latter adjectives we find it impossible to use concerning many of the devotional books produced in our day. It is admirably adapted for the mature and thoughtful; and also peculiarly fitted to give a right direction to the lives and thoughts of the young, and to mould them into Christians of a high type of character."—The Newcastle Daily Journal.

A friend of the Y.M.C.A. has offered three prizes, of £20, £5, and £2 10s., for the best essays on "What is Protestant Christianity?" The competition is open to all members and associates of the Y.M.C.A. in Great Britain and Ireland, under the age of twenty-five. Particulars may be had on applying to Mr. E. J. Kennedy, Secretary, Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

We regret to see in The British Weekly a somewhat captious criticism upon a well-known text. The writer says:—

> Mr. Spurgeon says when a text from the Word has been peculiarly precious to the Christian man's heart, he will hear its authenticity impugned, its translation disputed, or its Gospel reference denied. Does Mr. Spurgeon mean that every text that has been peculiarly precious is authentic, rightly translated, and with a Gospel reference? What is his opinion about "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him"? A more precious word has not been found in the Bible, and yet the translation is, beyond dispute, wrong.

This is not the opinion of some, well competent to judge. "The Speaker's Commentary" gives a long note on the supposed difficulties of the original, mostly arising from a difference of reading, but sums up thus: "On the whole, the rendering of our Authorised Version should be retained; or, with a very slight change of expression, the clause may be translated, 'Lo! He may slay me, I will wait for Him,' i.e., abide hopefully the issue of his judgment." The Revised Version renders it, also, "Though He slay me, yet will I wait for Him."

It ought to be known that the general apprehensions as to the incurableness of hydrophobia are quite without foundation. For many years now, a system of treatment named after Dr. Buisson, an eminent French physician, has been before the public, and both in Britain and on the Continent has been applied with great success. By a series of Turkish or vapour baths, with accessory measures to promote perspiration, the poison is extracted from the patient through the pores of the skin, even after the disease has plainly shown itself. Thus many valuable lives have been saved. More about this treatment may be learned at the principal hydropathic institutions of the country.

A Scottish daily paper thinks it has cut the ground from under the feet of the Anti-Opium agitators in this country by some quotations from a Chinese Yellow Book, to the effect that the native-grown article is superseding the drug as imported from India. We cannot see much cause for jubilation in the fact that the Chinese, having learnt the use of the soul-and-body-destroying opiate from their Indian neighbours, are now, from motives of economy, producing it for themselves. "The subject," says our contemporary, "must cause some uneasiness in the financial department of the Indian Government." We hope it will cause sufficient uneasiness to induce that Government to look elsewhere for its income. We can never atone for the guilt of the past, but we can at any rate "cease to do evil, and learn to do well." We might make some tardy reparation if we relinquished the opium trade while it is to a certain extent profitable; there will be no virtue at all in doing so when we cannot help it.

In a letter to The Times, Mr. A. C. P. Coote makes the suggestion that half a million pence be weekly subscribed among the industrial classes of London, to defray the annual deficit in the hospital funds of the Metropolis. As this class benefits almost exclusively by the hospitals, the proposal is a fair and feasible one. Mr. Coote thinks the Hospital Saturday Fund should carry it out.

No prophet could, as we close the year, bid a beholder look upon any nation, and say: "Thine eyes shall see a quiet habitation." On the contrary, the low mutterings of threatened war are everywhere heard. And men boast that the war which is coming, with its new, explosive, and deadly appliances of electricity, will be decisive. But let not the servants of Christ be shaken in mind. This might surprise, if the year closed with the spectacle of nations in peace and safety, which have been ruled by human policies, and not by the precepts of eternal righteousness. Earth's history is always one that teaches man's blind folly in putting from him the law of the Lord. To those who wait and watch for the heavenly kingdom the separating word is spoken: "Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast."

Another thought is with us as we close the year. There are growing evidences that even the men of our period who are merely literary are not satisfied with present manifestations of people eagerly given up to the chase after pleasure; and express their fear that evil has got the upper hand among us. They do not know how persistently and how self-denyingly a noble army of workers are seeking to keep back these strong tides of evil, and to rescue engulphed ones from the overwhelming waves. How much they have done through the grace of the Spirit has been indicated in the pages of this journal, as the weeks of the year have gone by, but only He can take the full measure of these blessed results who teaches us that He "knows the works" of his servants.

Were there not confidence in the work of the Spirit in believers, and the power of the prayers of godly parents, we should lose heart as we read the following in The Daily News:—

> At the discussion in the Diocesan Rooms in Liverpool last week, apropos of Rev. Webster Hall's paper on worldly amusements, the assembled representatives of the Rural Deanery of Liverpool North were found to be all in favour of dramatic and other entertainments which have no tendency to deprave. Only two speakers ventured to utter a discordant note, and to express despair of ever seeing the theatre what they would wish it; but these speakers were laymen. Canon Warr recognised in the theatre a powerful agent for good or evil; and Mr. Webster Hall, by way of completing the rout of the dissentient laymen, told his audience that "one of the most devout and earnest young workers in his parish was a person who experienced the turning-point in his life after seeing Mr. Henry Irving."

When actors themselves warn against young girls going on the boards of a theatre; when they tell us of a moral atmosphere behind the scenes that is growingly full of temptation; when recent special and very carefully conducted inquiries into the causes that have led to the ruin of promising young men have shown that the beginnings of physical and moral debasement were found in the associations of the pit or gallery of a theatre, or its adjacent snares and opportunities of evil: it were surely to be expected that clergymen should wait until the modern theatre were cleansed of its dangers and surroundings, before they took the place of its patrons and promoters.

The other day, before the Lords' committee upon the sweating system, Mr. Lakeman, Factory Inspector, asserted, as the result of his observation, that, so far as Christian women were concerned, the sweating system was responsible for much of the prevalent immorality in the East-end. At the same sitting, evidence was given which pointed to something other than "cruel cheapness" being concerned in the degradation of the workers. Mr. Burnett, the Labour Correspondent of the Board of Trade, stated that a large portion of the West-end clothing was made at the East-end, but that the wearers did not benefit by the falling of wages, the same prices being paid now by the purchasers as was paid seven or eight years ago when higher wages were paid to the worker. Someone is, therefore, intercepting the workers' dues. Looking at the terrible results which are flowing from it, they must sooner or later reap the reward of those in whose skirts is found the blood of the souls of the innocents.

Miss Emily S. Holt says, in her recent book, "The King's Daughters":—

> There are some savages—in Polynesia, I think—who decorate themselves by thrusting a wooden stick through their lips. To our European taste they look hideous. Honestly, I cannot see that they who make holes in their lips to ornament themselves are any worse at all than they who make holes in their ears for the same purpose. The one is just as thorough barbarism as the other.

The hideous fringe and the exaggerated ostrich feather with which the factory girl and the feminine costermonger try to add attraction to their personal appearance would be, to a lady of good taste, vulgar in the extreme. But to the angels, the elegant dress of the fashionable lady may appear no less vulgar. The real vulgarity lies not in the tastefulness or the clumsiness of the attire, but in the self-love, the vanity, the pride, of the wearer. The lady who goes to read or speak to the employées in a warehouse or work-room with her hands glittering with rings, or her head adorned with a miniature imitation of a church spire, is sowing the seeds of vanity and self-love in the hearts of those less-cultured girls, which will bear bitter fruit. Probably the weeds will grow more quickly and more luxuriantly than the good seed, the word of the kingdom, and the unconscious influence of the lady's ornamentation affect the girls more powerfully than the words and counsels of her lips.

In a meeting of Christian workers we have seen a considerable quantity of head-gear disfigured by the skins, and painfully exhibiting the heads and members, of slaughtered birds, which, when they lived, were lovely in sight and exquisite in song. We know a gentleman in the North of England who has a large Bible-class of young women, upon whom not an ornament nor a feather is to be seen. How far more likely are they to pass through life without insult than those whose conspicuous dress seems intended to excite notice. If Christian women of all ranks would adopt the apostolic precepts which prescribe modest attire, they would set a most valuable example to their own sex; would educate men in respect for women; and, above all, would strengthen themselves in the habit of obeying God.

It is matter for very deep regret to find an influential journal like The Scotsman devoting its correspondence and leading columns to aspersions of the noble work of rescue maintained by Dr. Barnardo's Homes. The head and front of Dr. Barnardo's offending seems to be that he has been submitting the claims of his institutions to the Scottish public, and asking for support in his efforts to cope with the sins and sorrows of the great city. We agree with The Scotsman and its correspondents that Scottish charities have the first claim on the generosity of the Scottish people, and we learn with regret that these charities are not always adequately provided for. At the same time, that can be no bar to the Edinburgh public being made acquainted with an effort like that of Dr. Barnardo, which is cosmopolitan in its scope, and therefore deserving of the help of philanthropic people everywhere. Many Scottish works of charity are advocated in English journals (including our own), and nobody, so far as we know, has ever complained before. There is no compulsion exercised in either case, in the matter of giving, and we entirely fail to see the grounds of the objection.

The Scotsman, and, at least, one of its correspondents, have placed themselves out of court by attributing unworthy motives, roundly insinuating that Dr. Barnardo's Homes exist chiefly for the benefit of the officials, and that they are, in short, "a commercial speculation." Those who have the remotest practical acquaintance with the work of our devoted brother, will know that charges of that sort constitute a gross and foul libel. We are glad to believe that they will probably have an effect altogether opposite to that intended, and will make the friends of the perishing children rally to the support of a work that has helped so many waifs and strays into a new and better life.

In a recent letter to The Morning Post, Dr. Drysdale has called attention to some painfully interesting facts contained in the recent report of the French Commission on the Liquor Traffic. It appears that of late years highly impure spirits, which are simply liquid poison, have largely taken the place of wine among French drinkers, and the result has been an immense increase in insanity, suicide, and criminality. In 1885 the proportion of suicides from drink rose to eleven per cent. for the whole of France; in Normandy they constituted fifty-two per cent. of the whole number, and in an asylum in the Seine Inférieure forty per cent. of the cases were ascribed to spirit drinking. Medical experience also proves that these spirit drinkers not only have all kinds of nervous and other fatal diseases, but that their children are largely affected by epilepsy, insanity, and hysteria. In the north of France there is a public-house to every sixty-two persons.

Such is the result of "free trade in drink." With a view to remedy this terrible state of things, the Commissioners recommend that all private distillation (which is now permitted, without duty, to anyone, so long as he only uses the produce of his own fields) should be abolished, that all manufacturers should bring their products to public rectifying establishments, that no wine should contain more than twelve per cent. of alcohol, and that the price of licences should be increased fourfold. It is open to grave doubt whether these prescriptions will avail to arrest the disease which is thus fastening upon the vitals of the nation; but it is a hopeful sign that our Gallic neighbours are awakening to a sense of the perilous position in which their mistaken policy has placed them.

A contemporary, under the heading of "Spiritual Nonsense," recently inserted a letter from a correspondent complaining of an evangelist he had heard at a Bible-reading, because, in expounding Gen. xiv. 23, he drew the very appropriate, and, we may add, generally recognised lesson from Abram's determination not to be enriched by the spoils of Sodom, that such was "an admirable example of the spiritual dignity of the truly consecrated man." To the writer such a mode of treating Scripture is a "brain-confounding surprise!" and he proceeds to expose what he considers its absurdity thus:—

> My mind moved forward to the end of the chapter, like an engine with the steam shut off when a little way from the terminus. I got this lesson, according to his style of exposition: that the modern Abraham should not himself take a shoe-latchet of earth's spoils, but that he should demand a full share of them for his Aners, Eshcols, and Mamres, his spiritual converts whom he has rescued from the power of the world! He has to see that they have their fill of the worldling's portion.

The italics are ours. They will show the blunder into which the critic has fallen. Aner, Eshcol, and Mamre, we need hardly say, were not persons "rescued by Abram," but his allies, "confederate with Abram," who had fought with him and helped him to deliver the captives of Sodom. The spiritual lesson is most instructive. A truly consecrated Christian may take high ground in recognising God alone as the source of all his blessings, but must not impose his own high standard on others who may not be able to take similar ground, even though they are "confederate with" him. The Apostle Paul acts on this principle in forbearing to press on others as a necessity a standard which he had himself attained (1 Cor. vii. 35). Had the critic been more careful, he would not have first made a mistake, and then have tried to turn his own mistake into ridicule.

The same critic further reveals his inability to discern spiritual meaning in Old Testament narrative by objecting to an exposition he once heard from a London clergyman from the Book of Ruth, in which Boaz was treated as a type of Christ. We should have thought that such a view was fully sanctioned and generally recognised, but there are some minds that seem incapable of seeing anything but the surface meaning of Scripture, and it is a hopeless task to endeavour to point out the veins of typical or allegorical teaching which so richly reward those who dig beneath the surface. St. Paul's use of the narrative of Sarah and Hagar (Gal. iv. 24) gives, however, Scripture sanction to what some would call allegorising, and though some have undoubtedly carried this mode of interpretation to excess, or based their interpretations on mistaken principles, it is not the less to be valued when soberly and discreetly employed.

A SHAFTESBURY MEMORIAL.

For some years past a really good work has been carried on in one of the poorest districts of South London—namely, the district laying between High-street, Borough, and Blackfriars-road, where large numbers of families of the labouring classes reside in small tenements, amid scenes of wretchedness and squalor. For some time this Pepper-street Mission had for its home and centre an old Greengrocer's shop, wherein the Gospel was preached by a conscientious missionary, and the young were instructed in grace and truth. Moreover, the hungry have been fed, and several helpful agencies established, until at last it became imperative that more commodious premises should be provided.

The mission work will henceforth be carried on in Shaftesbury Memorial Hall No. 3, a very suitable structure which has just been erected in Union-street, Borough, under the auspices of the Special Religious Services Committee. The Mission is in connection with the London City Mission and Ragged School Union. The total outlay on the Hall is about £870, of which £209 has yet to be raised. The formal opening took place on Friday afternoon last, when the Earl of Aberdeen presided over a public meeting at which the Countess was also present.

An encouraging financial statement having been made by Mr. F. A. Bevan, treasurer, the Chairman delivered a brief address. He spoke in terms of warm approval of such unpretending buildings, and testified to their undoubted usefulness. Mr. R. K. Causton, M.P., in a few hearty words, declared his sympathy with the mission-hall movement generally, adding that he was specially interested in its success in the borough which he represented in Parliament. He maintained that such buildings should be used to their utmost, and that something should be done throughout the week to elevate and cheer the people. He moved a resolution affirming the importance of multiplying mission-rooms in poor and populous districts. This was seconded by Rev. G. W. McCree, who, while advocating broad measures and large sympathies in conducting such institutions, forcibly pointed out that like many other good movements this one has been from the first associated with evangelistic effort. Referring to his own mission service in Seven Dials, for a period of twenty-six years, he said that if he had twenty-six years more of young life he would like to devote it to the same cause; for, he said, "if a man wants to be happy and feel that he is doing God's work in God's way, and in God's place, let him give his time to the service of the poor." Mr. C. M. Sawell, 3, Bridewell-place, New Bridge-street, E.C., is secretary of the Special Religious Services.

NEW FRENCH MISSIONARIES.—Several new missionaries are about to leave for their spheres of labour. Messrs. Allégret and Teissères go to the Congo; M. Benjamin Escande to Senegal; and M. Girand to Tahiti.

"FALLEN ON SLEEP."—Rev. Reece Lawrence, Primitive Methodist minister, of Kingston-on-Thames.—Rev. John Howe, late pastor of the Baptist Chapel at Waterbarn, Stackstead, Lancashire.—Rev. John Broadbent, of Knighton, a Wesleyan minister, who for many years was eminently useful in winning souls for Christ.—Rev. William Paton, of Nottingham, for many years a Congregational minister.

LORD RADSTOCK spoke on Wednesday evening, last week, at the workers' meeting at the Home of Industry, Bethnal Green-road, E. He emphasised the great need of power for service. This can only result from communion with God, which is incompatible with the rush and bustle of much that is done to-day. Fellowship with Christ will give the worker that gentleness which will win souls. Then the right word will be said in the right way. We must, however, be empty before we can be filled. If filled with Christ, we shall not labour in vain, but the very spirit and grace of the Lord Jesus will be seen in us.

A DEPUTY'S STORY.

CONDENSED NOTES OF ADDRESS

By Rev. JAMES WELLS, M.A., Glasgow.

More than twenty years ago the General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland resolved to send deputies to all the congregations within her bounds. At the beginning of the first visitation, which occupied fifteen years, the congregations in Scotland stood at about 750; at its close they numbered over 1000. Visiting about 140 congregations annually, the present deputation will take about eight years to accomplish its work. Its aim is to create a church feeling, to assure the scattered congregations of the sympathy of the whole Church in their trials and work, and to struggle successfully against the tendency to narrowness and isolation. But its chief aim is to call attention to the higher ends of the Church, its spiritual life and work.

I was one of the deputation, about a hundred strong, fifty ministers and about the same number of elders, which visited the Presbytery of Edinburgh. With but few exceptions each congregation had a week of evangelistic services. We met, first, for an hour with the office-bearers, who showed a deep interest in the work. To these office-bearers we were commissioned by the Assembly to put thirty questions, the most of which go straight to the heart of congregational life and work. Of this number I select a few, and the answers we received in the three churches I visited as a deputy.

The weekly prayer-meeting—how is it attended?—One congregation, famed for many things, but specially famed for its prayer-meeting, told us that about six hundred people attended, a third of whom do not belong to the congregation.

State generally the condition of the congregation. Is it in a hopeful and promising state, or the reverse? Then specify causes which operate against it.—Colonel Young, who was my fellow-deputy at one congregation, told us that he visited two congregations in Banffshire, and put these questions to them about the spiritual prosperity of the congregation. He was asked, "How are we to estimate spiritual prosperity?" One of the elders, a miller, said: "I judge of the success of my mill by what it turns out, and we must judge of the success of our congregation by what it turns out, by the kind of Christians we make, and by the number of them." No answer could have been more admirable. And we must test all our congregations by the kind of Christians, and the number of them we turn out. The other congregation was in a fishing village, and Colonel Young was deeply impressed by the manly and intelligent answers of the office-bearers; one of whom said: "I am a fisherman. My boat is built according to the best plan, sails and tackle all right. I have good fishing gear, and I am careful to keep it in order, but often I venture out into the deep and do my best, and come home without any fish. This congregation is, in my opinion, like my fishing-boat. We have plenty to 'man' it, many office-bearers, organisation complete, all in order, and, yet when we cast our net into the deep, we often feel we are not successful." A similar answer might be given regarding the spiritual welfare of our congregation. Not forgetting many things profoundly encouraging, for which we should always thank God, we ought to judge all our congregations as the miller judged of the success of his mill, or that fisherman of the success of his boat.

Do the young men, as a rule, join themselves to the fellowship of the church?—This is a great and a grave question, and we were told in many churches I have visited all over Scotland that they have a great number of young men who are well disposed, and even under conviction; but they lack the desired decision, and, in consequence of that failing, are slow to join themselves to the membership of the church. In addressing these congregations, I used the illustration that these young men were like a vessel I have seen launched on our Clyde, held back half-way in the water and half-way out of it. That, I said, was the position of some promising young men; they were not completely launched for the service of Christ; held back, one can hardly tell by what. We were asked to appeal to some, and were told that the appeal in some cases was not in vain.

How do matters stand in the congregation with reference to family worship?—We visited old-established congregations and were informed that there was every reason to believe that family worship was almost universal among the families who had been for years in the flock. In other cases we were told that they had no definite information about this subject. Scotland owes much to family worship. I am one of those who owe much to it, and I believe there are many in this church who could tell the same story. If they were to go back and explain to you the force that kept them on the side of Christ in youth, and the grandeur and peace that Christianity has impressed upon their minds, they would tell you that family worship had a very large place in it. And it will be an evil day for the cause of Christ and for Scotland if family worship decline. I would affectionately recommend this practice to those who are beginning married life. Let it be ever so simple and unburdensome at first, begin, and begin not only on the Sabbath evening, but seek, if not in the morning, at least every evening to gather your household and to recognise God, though it should be only for a few minutes. I tell you there shall go forth from it a hallowing influence. I tell you that when your sons and daughters reach middle age and old age, one of the things for which they will specially thank you shall be the memory and the music of family worship.

Are means taken to safeguard the morals of the young?—Profanity abounds in some districts, and in one church I related the following incident:—"While the train halted at Dumbarton for a few minutes one day, when I had occasion to be there, a great crowd of farm servants were on the platform, some of whom were tipsy. One man near my carriage window was swearing very rudely, and a young man by his side, apparently a ploughman, said, in the gentlest and most modest way, 'Oh! man, why do you swear that way?' And the blasphemer turned round, and, with a horrid oath, replied, 'None of your Free Kirk here.'" I hope the Free Kirk is honoured by such distinctions, and that the members of it are distinguished in Scotland by their noble-minded concern for purity of speech and purity of life.

What methods are taken to promote a kindly and Christian fellowship among the members of the congregation?—I mentioned one method of having a social gathering every half year, and of introducing new comers to all the families around them. An elder remarked that he had seen people sit in adjoining pews for years, and never speak to each other, in the church where he worshipped, and that it was not easy, under such circumstances, to have a right family feeling. Another elder replied, "That is not our way. We sit for years in the same pew, and never speak to one another." This estrangement ought to be overcome. There should be a genial, friendly feeling among all the members of a congregation, and every member should do his and her part in order to secure this. Another question was:—

Indicate any hindrances to spiritual prosperity that may exist in the congregation.—And to this question we received in one congregation an unusual and suggestive answer. Their hindrance was great financial prosperity. A minister, at the close of one of our meetings, said he would take his congregation into his confidence, and tell forth the deepest thought in his heart about them. "In our congregation," he said, "we have many Christian people, but they live on the borderland of the world, and there is in social life very little to distinguish them from the people around who make no special profession of their faith in Christ. This I think it is that injures our congregations all round, and I do not believe that we shall ever be able to rise to higher things in any one department of Christian life till those of us who are sincere Christians are more avowed and more decided, and have more deeply and broadly upon us the mark of the Lord Jesus Christ."

In addressing one of the congregations, I called attention to four risks and drawbacks affecting large congregations: (1) Individuals are overlooked. I pleaded for greater attention to young men, specially young men in lodgings. (2) A lessened sense of individual responsibility. I suppose we must seek the reason in the fact that we have all a sort of subtle mental arithmetic, which computes thus: "Well, here is some work to be done, and there are 850 of us to do it. The 850th part fairly falls to my share." And in this manner we are apt to lessen the efforts we put forth in Christian life and Christian service. (3) Self-satisfaction and self-complacency. (4) Deficient enterprise. We are apt to say of a church like ours, "It is full. The object in view has been secured." That is but the framework. What do you turn out? In our large mission district great moral trophies may, and have been won. Let us pour out our energies there. It may mercifully rescue us from the risks and the drawbacks affecting a large congregation.

I have had some interesting experiences as a deputy. When in Ross-shire, a young blacksmith introduced himself to us at the close of one of the meetings. He said, "I have come to you, because I felt, while you were addressing the meeting, that I was all wrong; that my relationship to the Church of Christ is not right." Some years after I was one of a large gathering which met in the Free Barony Church, to bid God-speed to a small band of young men on the eve of their departure for Livingstonia. This young blacksmith was one of the band. "I am going," he said, "to teach ordinary blacksmith work; but the blacksmith work that most needs to be taught is the beating of their swords into ploughshares and their spears into pruning-hooks. That is the blacksmith work I hope to teach the Africans in Central Africa." Turning to me, he said, "I am going to Livingstonia because I met you in that Ross-shire village." After five years' faithful and honoured service, he returned on furlough to his native country. An appeal was made to young men to assist Mr. Stewart in opening the great highway between Lake Tanganyika and Nyassa. The young blacksmith at once offered his services; and, on Mr. Stewart's death, he became chief of the staff. "It all comes," he said, "from meeting the deputies in Ross-shire."

Our visit to Edinburgh closed with a largely attended and impressive meeting of the Presbytery, at which we compared notes. One minister said it had done him good to be called upon to re-consider his work. A young elder wrote me on my return. His closing words were: "I feel after all that we are a poor lot, letting slip so many opportunities of doing splendid work for the cause of Christ." If we possess this spirit, there is hope. When we labour in our homes, Sabbath-schools, and mission work, we should remember that our very best is poor, compared with what we ought to aspire after and pray for. Having this self-humiliating spirit, we shall betake ourselves to God in prayer, consecrate ourselves afresh to the work of Christ, love our particular congregation better; and ministers, office-bearers, and Christian workers shall all seek to make our flock more worthy of Christ's Church, and to do more than we have hitherto attempted to serve our generation by the will of God.

DOING AND KNOWING.—In the life of Dr. Fleming Stevenson we find an interesting commentary on the words, "He that doeth my will shall know of the doctrine":—"At this time his mind was in a somewhat unsettled state regarding some elements of the creed in which he had been brought up, to which he clung with loyal reverence. It was by plunging into practical mission work that light was to come to him upon these thorny points of theology."

GIPSIES AT CHOBHAM.—About sixty cottage services and ten open-air services have been held during the past year in addition to visits paid to the tents and cottages. The past few winters have been very trying to these unfortunate people, through the lack of work amongst the villagers round—few have money to buy the goods they hawk, and those who are willing to work find it hard to get any. The superintendent of the work is Mr. Stanley Alder, Rose Cottage, Lucas-green, Chobham, Surrey.

WHAT WE WANT JUST NOW, under God, is a Christian poet who will separate humane social aspirations from atheistic and violent associations, and will give articulate expression to the unselfish and tender-hearted sentiments which are fermenting in the souls of our young men and young women. The new pity for the poor, the new sense of social wrong, the new demand for social purity, the growing abhorrence of war, the yearning for ecclesiastical peace, all mark the birth of a great era, which so far, however, has "no language but a cry," and that often a very bitter cry. Now the sacred, the prophetic, function of the true poet is to utter the deepest and most formative thoughts of his age. We have had quite enough jeremiads from the sceptical and defeated representatives of agnosticism and mammonism. Our great need is a Christian poet, emancipated from the traditions of conventional and ecclesiastical Christianity, familiar with the hopes of Isaiah and the experiences of St. John. The new movement in thought and life is an intensely Christian movement. It yearns for the ethical Christianity of Christ, for the pure primitive Christianity of brotherly love, for a Christianity which exhibits itself in business and in politics as much as in sacraments and in prayer-meetings. When and where will the new poet appear?—Methodist Times.

Somerstown Blind Aid Society.

We had been visiting a friend and pleading the cause of the blind. "Help the blind!" she laughingly exclaimed; "no, no, everybody helps the blind—far too much is done for them"; and bidding us farewell she returned to her artistic drawing-room, to await the dinner summons to her delicately spread table, meanwhile enjoying her hour of choice reading, until joined by husband, children, friends!

"Too much done for the blind!!" the words followed us and seemed to ring mockingly in our ears as we wended our way through gloomy back streets to a few of their uninviting homes. "Too much done for them!!" Thank God much is done; many a loving hand stretched out to help; many a generous gift bestowed; but as yet how sadly far the need exceeds the aid!

Groping down some broken steps we enter one home. It consists of two small dark kitchens. In the one are two mangles; in the other the living and sleeping accommodation for the family of five. "What have you earned by the mangles this week?" we presently inquire of our blind friend who is doing his best to turn the handle. "Almost seven shillings," he replies. "And what other means of support have you?" "Lately the two shillings a week pension which you know about, and the shilling from you." "And is this all?" "Yes, that is everything. It would not matter so much if the children were older, and able to work. I do my best to help the 'missis' with the mangles, but you know how I suffer since I became blind—I am not fit for much." Is this, then, one of the blind for whom "too much is done"?

Praying that the day may come when we can help him more adequately, we pass on and enter another home. Its owner is a poor widow; she lost her sight by overstraining her eyes with dressmaking—and was forced to stand in the streets selling pins, tape, &c. The room is very tiny and miserably bare, but she is grateful, gentle and quiet, and speaks with refinement.

"How are you getting on?" we ask. "God keeps me just from day to day," she says. "I seem to have prospered ever since you allowed me that 2s. a week." "How much did you make last week?" "Oh! I had a good week, I made enough for my rent, and ninepence over." "What had you to live on?" Why the 2s. and the 9d.—and the lady you sent gave me such a treat—she brought me two new-laid eggs and a rice pudding." "What have you had to eat to-day? I see you have no fire." "My landlady let me have some boiling water—I had a cup of tea and some bread and dripping." "That was for breakfast—it is now nearly five o'clock, what have you had since?" "Oh, nothing since, but I mean to have another cup of tea and some more bread and dripping for tea and supper all in one." The sweet face looked quite contented! We took our leave, again mentally asking, And is this one of the blind for whom "too much is done"?

Again another visit. This time to a blind basket-maker, age forty-five. He has just lost the dear old mother who, to her dying day, bravely toiled and struggled to keep a home over her blind "boy's" head. He is otherwise afflicted in addition to his blindness. He is a good worker, but not quick; his earnings never reliable, depending on the private orders he can get, but never beyond eight shillings in the week, and often nothing at all. He has no pension. Has "too much" been done for him? We promised his dying mother to do all we could to help him. God send us the means to do so!

We could multiply cases by the dozen, while we can point to others whom we ourselves or other societies have been enabled to assist, and where the dark homes have been made bright, and the sad, aching hearts made joyful, by the gift of a few shillings a week. The few shillings make all the difference between poverty and comparative wealth, between a constant state of nervous dread lest the rent cannot be "met," or the children's food fall short, and a thankful contentment.

We know our people well; this enables us to help wisely, and truly they are grateful. We seek their spiritual as well as temporal good, and even pray that "when they sit in darkness, the Lord may be a light unto them." The president of the Society is Rev. Principal Dykes, 13, Coolhurst-road, Crouch-end, N.

THE METROPOLITAN MUSIC HALL.

"My husband kissed me last night for the first time for many years, during which we have known much sorrow, but now I am indeed happy." The husband had been blessed at the same music-hall the previous night; the wife herself and a nephew had been brought to the Lord three weeks before.

"On Sunday evening I came to the service and plucked up courage enough to stay till the after-meeting; but felt too proud to give in, until one of the choir convinced me that I was wrong, and I accepted Christ, and found the rest and happiness I had longed for so long. I had seen other young men happy, which made me desire to be a Christian, and now father's prayers are answered, and I am seeking to follow the Lord."

"I want to join the choir, Mr. Cook, and help you in the singing." This young man had not found rest, but was seeking it. He was led to Christ, and then his services were accepted. Occupying an official position in the neighbourhood, his influence can be of great use, now the Lord has brought him to Himself.

These are some recent cases; let us now sketch the scene on a Sunday evening. It is the advertised time of beginning, but we are met with the words "No room"; but, obtaining entrance to one of the private boxes, we find the huge building crowded from floor to ceiling, and every available standing space is occupied; the stage, seating about 60 or 70, is filled with the choir.

"How long," we ask, "has this hall been used for Sunday services?" "Mr. Chas. Cook has preached here for some twelve years." "And is it always as crowded as to-night?" "Yes, each Sunday night this season large numbers have been turned away, and many in the neighbourhood say 'It's no use going, we cannot get in.'"

Each week a sheet of hymns is printed to suit the address. The singing of the congregation is hearty, and the choir lead with precision and musical ability, as well as devoutness of manner. The text is "Behold the Man." Stress is laid upon his manhood; his divinity is insisted upon. "Mark the perfect Man"—the truth is clearly brought out for whom He suffered, for what He suffered, and the exhortation pressed home—"Behold the Man." "Imperfect man, behold the perfect Man; sinful man, behold the sinless Man;" and the warning note is sounded out concerning the coming again of the Son of Man. Interspersed with suitable illustrations, it was a sound and useful Gospel address, and at the close the workers and choir were busy with anxious souls.

Here were two elderly women who came to the meeting for the first time, and who were thinking they "had something to do," but their eyes had been turned away from self to Christ, and they were now rejoicing in the text, "Behold the Man." Two young girls living with a member of the choir were induced to come, and both were on their knees seeking the Lord, and soon rejoiced in a Saviour's love. A friend brought by a worker is also seen praying with the ones who led him to the meeting, "Lord, restore me for I have wandered from Thee." In fact, all over the building are souls being dealt with under conviction of their sin.

We leave the building praising God for sermon, songs, and souls; and as we know the neighbourhood is a centre of infidelity and Socialism, we feel that this is a work specially raised up by God, and greatly honoured by Him in the gathering in of precious souls: thank God for this witness for Him in dark and dangerous times, and for such a proof that there is attractive power in the Gospel of our Lord to bring thousands beneath the sound of "the old, old story."

This work began by Mr. Cook preaching alone in Hyde Park. The headquarters of the Mission is Hyde Park Hall, Edgware-road, W. It is supported by a few good men, but it is often cramped and hindered for lack of means. If these were supplied, its usefulness could be greatly enlarged, the whole neighbourhood more perfectly evangelised, and the whole Mission more effectively worked.

Appeals.

Poplar Ragged School.—Gifts of cast-off clothing or donations will be gratefully received by the Secretary, Miss Taylor, Poplar Ragged School, East India-road, E.

St. John's, Copenhagen-street, N.—We are anxious again to help the poor at this season by giving flannel, coals, or grocery, according to the need.—Mrs. Charles Ough, Worthing House, Barnsbury-square, N.

Evangelistic Mission Hall, 301, Holloway-road, N.—Mr. H. Putterill appeals for help in giving free meals to the unemployed in the North of London. Mr. J. Shelley, 23, Upper Tollington-road, is Hon. Sec. and Treasurer.

Poor in Shoreditch.—Mrs. Cuff writes from the Shoreditch Tabernacle appealing for help towards alleviating the distress in Shoreditch. For many years private friends have helped to clothe and feed the honest needy, but the wants are so many and the work so large that she craves the help of the larger public.

Home Teaching Society for the Blind.—The Secretary of this Mission begs to remind sympathisers that the address is 31, New Bridge-street, E.C. A lady writes:—"I can speak most highly of the good it is doing, having a girl of my own blind. Since I first became acquainted with this Institution, it has regularly sent a teacher gratis to instruct her in reading. No one knows the many happy hours she spends daily in studying the Scriptures and other instructive books."

RAGGED SCHOOL UNION.—Sir,—There are about a hundred thousand of the poorest of the poor benevolently reached by the Ragged School Union. The pressing needs of the children and adults thus coming within the sympathetic touch of the two hundred affiliated Ragged School Missions are increasingly urgent. In desiring to meet these necessities the committee find their resources crippled, both for the regular work, and the feeding and clothing directly undertaken on behalf of the destitute. They earnestly appeal for assistance, so that the four thousand voluntary (besides paid) teachers may be enabled to continue their labours of love, by gifts of free meals.

John Kirk, Sec.
Exeter Hall, Strand, W.C.

THE SALVATION ARMY.—Mr. Caine, M.P., writes:—Major Tucker has placed under Major Ajeet Singh sixty Europeans and ten native missionaries, and as soon as the Europeans have acquired the language a determined effort will be made to evangelise Bombay. These Salvation heroes and heroines have thrown up all earthly affairs, and have devoted themselves heart and soul to their work. They receive no wages. I doubt if sixty shillings could be found in their sixty pockets. They live upon bread, curry, and rice, tea being their only luxury. They wear the native dress, and go barefoot, begging their curry and rice from door to door—a course of action which, they contend, enables them to get at the people as in no other way. The average yearly cost to the Salvation Army is about £5 per head per annum. The average cost of a Protestant missionary has hitherto been about £400 a year. It is impossible to doubt the consecrated self-denial of these men and women, whatever opinion may be held as to their wisdom. The Christian Church must give them a fair chance.

WINTER COLDS, ASTHMA, and BRONCHITIS.

HOW TO PREVENT THEM.

OF all diseases known to the medical profession none have received more attention, and yet none are more to be dreaded, than the above, which are so incidental to our climate, and which so often threaten to develop into phthisis.

The efficiency of Appareil Magnétique in all affections of the chest and respiratory organs has been most remarkable, owing to its permeating and soothing properties, which reach the congested organs, clear the capillary vessels, and produce an even circulation. Moreover, by heightening the resisting powers of the system it becomes a most valuable protection against external influences.

Mr. H. STAFFORD, 14, Frisby's Buildings, Stamford.

"I am pleased to tell you that your treatment has been of great benefit to me. Although I cannot yet say that it has overcome the asthma, I firmly believe it quickly removed other complicated ailments; for instance, the dreadful pains in the back, legs, and in the lower part of the body generally, soon disappeared, and I do not doubt but that it was a great help to my getting well again. I frequently walk over twenty miles a day; and I am thankful to say my general health is better than it has been for years."

Mr. Stafford reported eighteen months later as follows:—

"I have passed through the last severe winter in a most favourable manner; I have been out in all weathers—snow, rain, fog, &c., and have been continually exposed to north-east winds; anyone with an asthmatical tendency knows what that means. The greatest blessing of all is that I can lie down and have refreshing sleep; I have not had to sit up one night, whereas the winter before I had to be propped up, and even then had to struggle desperately for breath. Only those who have suffered similarly can describe the horrors of an attack of asthma, and my heart is full of gratitude for the blessing of restored health."

Mrs. E. THOMPSON, Guildford Street, Chertsey.

"I never fail to recommend Magnetism, for it has given me relief such as nothing else that I ever tried could give me. I suffered severely for years with my heart and lungs through spasmodic asthma before adopting your treatment."

Mr. M. TODD, 47, Whitefield Road, Liverpool.

"I am pleased to tell you that by the use of your Appareil I have been cured of asthma. I had been troubled with this trying complaint for about seventeen years, when, as if by Providence, my mother heard of your treatment through the Rev. C. Garrett, who spoke very highly of it, After the adoption of the remedy I obtained great relief, and any return of the ailment has been brought about by my own neglect. I am highly pleased with your treatment, and therefore will not fail to strongly recommend it to everyone who suffers as I have done, whenever opportunity offers."

Mr. B. Copson Garratt has devoted many years of his life to the practical adaptation of magnetism to the alleviation and cure of various forms of disease. His advice may be had gratis on application personally or by letter.

MR. CONGREVE will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED in this Journal BEFORE, EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK.
CONSUMPTION.—CASE of Mrs. ARGAR, RAMSGATE.

In a letter dated Oct. 11, 1888, Mrs. Argar writes:—"Mine is another testimony to your invaluable medicine. Would that all who suffer from the shocking disease with which I suffered could procure it, for it has been life to me."—M. A. ARGAR, 31, Adelaide Gardens, Ramsgate."

The case was brought under my notice in December, 1887, by Rev. Robert Wood, B.M., of Ramsgate, requesting my kind consideration. She had procured medicine through someone in the town, and been benefiting already.

The patient had been delicate from childhood, at which time she had a low lever that left her in a very wasted condition. Had been thin and weakly ever since. She had now a hacking cough, and phlegm mixed with blood, occasionally clear blood spat up, much pain in the chest and side, diarrhœa, &c. There had been an improvement in the short time she had taken the medicine procured in the town.

I advised her fully, and in a few weeks' time there was such an improvement that "astonished her friends." The diarrhœa had ceased, and the spitting of blood. The chest felt wonderfully relieved.

With a little varying at times, there was gradual improvement, the last medicine being sent to her in June, after which she reports:—"Your treatment has cured me, by God's help. Last year, before I commenced with it, I was so weak and ill; now I am able to do a great deal of house-work."

The last letter received from Mrs. Argar (October 11) contains the quotation above.

NOTE.—Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days. Everyone is expected to have seen the book first.

Rescue Work in Bombay.

Dear Sir,—Though only a few weeks have passed since I landed in this country, the Lord has already shown me the great need there is for more workers. The more we see of the awful depths of wickedness, not only in this place, but in all the large cities of India, the more we feel constrained to cry out to those whose hearts the Lord has touched, to come over and help us.

There is an immense field of labour amongst European girls, English, German, French, Italian, Turkish, Armenian, &c., who are decoyed over here by those who make it their business. They promise their victims situations in bars, and for a time they are placed in some liquor saloon. I visit many of these poor girls there, remonstrating, pleading, and praying with them to give up this evil life. We all know too surely what this leads to; we soon lose sight of them in the bar, make inquiries, and find they have been removed, or have gone voluntarily, to houses of ill-fame, of which there are, alas! so many. Besides this, there is a vast traffic in native girls.

What we hope to do, as the Lord shall send more workers, is so to hedge these people round, and hinder them in every way, that we shall diminish the trade, and in the end make a clean sweep of it from India. I visit saloon after saloon where there are three or four girls, some of them very young; I know one or two only about sixteen. It is fearful to think of their being led off to ruin in this way.

There is one whole street entirely given over to houses of ill-fame. Nearly all European girls live there, or, properly speaking, are kept there. This street I am now commencing to visit; pray for us. We have often to bear oaths and curses, jeers, and mocking laughter, but Jesus bore more for our sakes, and "where He leads we will follow." Our one wish is to rescue the perishing.

Miss Richardson, whom I am helping, is doing a grand work in her Reformatory and Rescue Home, which she started two years ago. If ever work needed whole-hearted consecration this does; it is so trying, so disappointing, so difficult, that it needs tremendous courage, faith, patience, incessant labour, and constant waiting upon God. This fearful slave trade is being carried on every day in our midst, and we are so few to stem the tide. "Who will be the next to follow Jesus" out here for this work? Remember these poor down-trodden fallen women are our sisters, and God will require their blood at our hands. The language need be no hinderance, with so much to be done among European and English-speaking people. Tracts in German, French, Italian, English, &c., will be most acceptable, especially those published for rescue and Gospel purity work. They should be sent to me, care of Miss Richardson, Reformatory Hospital, Tardeo, Bombay.—Yours, on behalf of India's lost ones,

MARGARET MELITA RUMSEY.

Bombay, Nov. 29.

REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.—For blessing on an eight days' mission in Newport (Mon.), commencing Jan. 20, by Rev. F. C. Spurr, of Cardiff.——That the blessing being so largely experienced in Rothesay may spread to other towns and places.

HARECOURT CHAPEL, CANONBURY.—Last week this congregation celebrated the two hundredth anniversary of the building of the first Harecourt meeting-house. In his day John Bunyan preached in the chapel, and it was in the house of one of its deacons, Mr. John Strudwick, that he died, in August, 1688.

IRELAND.—Dr. J. A. Greig, of Edinburgh, has been accepted by the Presbyterian General Assembly's Foreign Mission Committee, and appointed as a medical missionary to Manchuria. Dr. Greig's support for three years, together with that of two assistants, is to be contributed by Mr. J. T. Morton, of Caterham, Surrey.

Mission Work at the Docks.

On Thursday last week a mission hall was opened at Ashburton Buildings, Victoria Docks. Situate nearly opposite the Custom House railway station, Canning Town, the Buildings comprise a coffee palace and lodging house, built about two years ago at the sole expense of Louisa, Lady Ashburton, who has now, by providing a bright and spacious mission hall, given new proof of her deep Christian interest in the poor of the East-end of London. Apart from preliminary outlays, the range of buildings have involved an expenditure of nearly £12,000. The mission hall has been erected to meet the needs of a growing mission agency connected with the coffee palace, and it was formally opened by the DUCHESS OF TECK, who was accompanied in her visit to the Docks by several personages of rank and influence.

On the happy occasion of the opening ceremonial, the Hall, which will accommodate between 500 and 600 persons, was thronged. Rev. C. A. Fox led the devotional exercises, and followed with a brief address, in which he pointed to this grand work as a beautiful instance of what a devoted woman may do. Mr. GEORGE HOLLAND made an encouraging statement as to the rise and progress of the work. The business at the coffee palace has become considerable. Between half-past five and half-past eight in the morning the sales often reach 70 gallons of tea, 50 gallons of cocoa, and 35 gallons of coffee. The men who labour at the Docks are loud in their expressions of gratitude for the benefits thus placed within their reach, for cheap dinners as well as other meals are supplied at a low rate, the customers numbering from 700 to 1000 a day. Beds also are let to seafaring men, and other arrangements are made for their comfort, so that there is no need for them to go to the public-house.

Among the reports presented was one by Miss DOWLES, the lady superintendent of the Mission. It showed that there are meetings and other fixtures for every day in the week, designed to elevate the men and women of the district, the children also coming in for instruction and encouragement at special meetings. In the various adjuncts of the Mission, great help has been received from other workers, in co-operation with whom homes and factories have been visited and many other good endeavours engaged in. Many residents have borne testimony to having received blessing, and not a few homes are to-day purer and brighter than two years ago, through the beneficent agency of the Mission. As a token of their high appreciation of Lady Ashburton's kindness, the women spontaneously put together their mites and bought a capital clock for the hall.

In declaring the hall open, the DUCHESS OF TECK said that taking part in the ceremony gave her great pleasure. She gracefully added: "I think I shall only do what you wish if I tender, in your name, as I do in my own and that of the neighbourhood, our heartfelt thanks to the kind, large-hearted lady to whom you owe this magnificent hall." The Hon. and Rev. E. CARR-GLYN proposed a vote of thanks to her Grace. In seconding the motion, Lady Ashburton said she hoped the hall would be a benefit to many poor fellows who now spend their evenings in public-houses, or hanging about the streets. Moreover, she trusted that such would find great blessing in the place.

In the evening there was a tea party and public meeting in celebration of the occasion. Altogether the proceedings were very delightful, the main regret being that there are not more such generous and earnest ladies as the one who is doing so much for Canning Town. At the New Year, a soup kitchen is to be opened. Public baths are also being fitted up. A provident loan and other benefit societies have been established; and the sick are visited and nursed. It was announced that Lady Ashburton will gladly allow others to share with her the joy of sustaining the Mission in its various departments.

Evangelistic Notes.

Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh continued during the past week to give evangelistic addresses in the Town Hall, Macduff; hundreds of people attended nightly. The evangelist continues in Macduff for the present week.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, of Oxford, recently returned from a long tour with the Bible-carriage in Oxfordshire, Berkshire, Hampshire, Wiltshire, and Somersetshire. Thousands of Testaments and good books were sold, and Gospel services were held in chapels, barns, &c.

Rev. R. Balgarnie has closed a ten days' mission at Bedford in connection with the two congregations of Bunyan Meeting and Howard Chapel. At the close of the meetings a large number of young people gave in their names as having been brought to decision for Christ.

Mr. Henry Smith, Jun., of the London Evangelisation Society, has completed his fourth mission this year at Morecambe, Lancashire, and is now engaged in his third at Wilnecote, Warwickshire. Great blessing has been received, and many have professed conversion at each place.

Messrs. Hyde and Stevenson, the two young graduates from Mr. Moody's Seminary at Mount Hermon, who have been labouring acceptably in Ireland for some weeks, will be in London in January to undertake evangelistic work. Letters for them may be addressed to the care of our publishers.

Rev. J. and Mrs. Mountain have completed a ten days' mission in the Lowther-street Congregational Church, Carlisle (pastor, Rev. John Thomas). The meetings were marked by growing interest and spiritual power. Many professed personal decision for Christ. At the close of the mission a Young Disciples' Union was inaugurated.

Mr. J. W. Moodie has concluded his meetings in the Baptist Chapel, Wishaw, N.B. A number of anxious souls have been dealt with. Some were very much broken down, and afterwards filled with joy and peace in believing. Mr. Moodie's Bible-readings for Christians have also been very much enjoyed. He commenced work in Peterhead on Sunday last.

Eden Bridge.—Mr. R. Stark has conducted a series of evangelistic meetings in connection with the Greybury Presbyterian Church. The results have exceeded all expectation. Many have expressed their sense of real benefit received at the meetings, and all felt the influence of the cheerful and hearty brightness with which Mr. Stark enforced and illustrated the old, old story.

Rev. R. F. Horton, of Hampstead, has held a mission in Rev. Dr. Macfadyen's Church, Manchester. Night after night the body of the church was well filled, and Mr. Horton delivered a series of appropriate evangelistic addresses, the aim of which was the immediate salvation of the hearers. The inquiry-room was well used by persons seeking to know the way of salvation.

Mr. Henry Thorne has concluded a seventeen days' mission in Grimsby. It has been a season of blessing. The afternoon Bible-readings were specially blessed to Christians. A goodly number professed to find the Saviour during the mission. Many of these belong to the non-church-going, and some have literally been taken out of the gutter.

Messrs. Fullerton and Smith have held a week of special services at Peckham-park-road Chapel, London. There were crowded congregations nightly. Nearly one hundred and fifty inquirers have been spoken with, and much interest has been awakened among those in the neighbourhood who are entirely neglectful of all religious associations. During January Messrs. Fullerton and Smith will hold services in Exeter Hall, Strand, London.

Cockermouth. — Mr. Josiah Spiers, of the Children's Special Service Mission, has concluded a fourteen days' mission in the Public Hall. From 500 to 600 children were present at each evening service, and there is every reason to believe that much good has been done. Many remained to the after-meetings, which were very helpful in leading little ones to the Saviour. During the mission Mr. Spiers has circulated gratuitously about 15,000 copies of Gospel literature, such as story books, magazines, picture leaflets, music and hymn sheets, tracts, &c. Upwards of three hundred portfolios were made by children to preserve their gifts.

Letters to the Editor.

GIFT-BOOKS FOR WORKING MEN.

Sir,—In answer to your correspondent "H," I should like to mention the new Missionary Series published by Messrs. Partridge, 1s. 6d., as likely to serve his purpose. The lives of William Carey, T. J. Comber of the Congo, James Chalmers of New Guinea, Robert Moffat, Griffith John, and Bishops Paterson and Crowther have already thus appeared in a most attractive binding, good type, and with abundant illustrations. "The World's Workers" Series, 1s. each, published by Messrs. Cassell & Co., I find highly appreciated. For men who would read deeper books, "What are we to believe?" (Mack), and "How did we get our Bible?" (1s. Bagster), are most useful. Some of the "Home" Series, published by Messrs. Shaw at 6d. each, are really valuable books. G. H.

Another correspondent recommends Rev. Geo. Everard's "Strong and Free" (Nisbet), and Dr. Mackay's "Grace and Truth" (Hodder & Stoughton).

JUVENILE DEPRAVITY.

Dear Sir,—Who can wonder at the growing prevalence of crime amongst the young, when we read such paragraphs as the following in a respectable newspaper:—"The Flask Musical Club. The smoking concert of the above club held on Wednesday night at the Flask Tavern, Flask-walk, was a great success, and well attended. After the interval, 'the Brothers Blackwell,' aged four and five years respectively, boxed three good rattling rounds, Qeeensbury rules, and were much applauded."

This I have copied verbatim from The Hampstead and Highgate Express of a recent date. I have written a strong protest to the editor of that journal, pointing out the wrong he is guilty of in giving publicity to such disgraceful proceedings without commenting severely upon them.

It is bad enough to have the minds of the young polluted with the vile trash which swamps our streets under the garb of "boys' papers," but what shall we say when a respectable journal encourages such a state of things as that at present under our notice?

Language fails me, so I leave the matter to you, Sir, hoping that you will use your utmost effort to arouse men and women to a sense of their duty towards our future nation.—I am, dear Sir,

Yours faithfully, Wm. L. Tweedie.

THE LATE MR. BOWEN, BOMBAY.

Dear Sir,—Permit me, simply in the interests of entire accuracy, to correct one or two misstatements in the searching article by "A Missionary" in your issue of the 21st inst. They relate to the Rev. George Bowen, of Bombay, who, more than once, while living, corrected similar misstatements in the paper which he edited.

In the first place, Mr. Bowen never adopted the native costume. Indeed, he strongly deprecated the doing so by others, on the ground that, if truly called, the Head of the Church had called and sent them to the mission field as foreigners, who are not required, any more than were the Apostles, to denationalise themselves in any way. It is true that he resided for a long time in the heart of the native population, "on a few rupees a month," to show the disinterestedness of his motives, and practically to evidence the unselfish love of the foreigner who had come to seek the welfare of the people; but he never wore native costume.

That his home surroundings were refined and the circle in which he moved a cultured one, is true; but, that "he left position and wealth," is hardly so. At the time of his conversion, call to the ministry, and subsequent appointment to the foreign field, his immediate relatives were in rather straitened circumstances, his father having retired from business fortuneless.

Mr. Bowen's forte was philosophy rather than science. Previous to his conversion he read extensively, and was thoroughly conversant with, the works of the English, French, and German philosophers, as his "Reminiscences" show; but he does not appear to have given much attention to the study of science. He was passionately fond of music, and, at one period, the slavish admirer of Italian opera.

Personally cognisant of our late esteemed brother's sensitiveness to anything like exaggeration in speaking of his life and work, I deem it due to him and others to make the above corrections. Nothing can be gained by deviation, however trivial and unwitting, from the exact truth. Fully endorsing the remark of "A Missionary," that Mr. Bowen's "Meditations" are to-day drawing men in many lands heavenward.—I am, yours fraternally,

J. E. Robinson, of Bombay, India.

"BAPTISM OF THE HOLY GHOST."

Dear Sir,—I was staying last summer for over a month at Deal, a quiet seaside resort known to many Christians, and was glad to find some true and earnest work for the Master going on there; but, as an earnest, godly policeman who lives there said to me, "We want a fresh baptism of the Holy Ghost." I found all to whom I spoke as a rule willing to listen to the truth. I always like to speak to Coastguard men, &c., and, as an encouragement to others, I may mention that on a previous visit a few months before, for a fortnight, the Lord graciously used me in bringing one of these Coastguard men to Himself. He has written me now and again since, and on my last visit I was very pleased to find he was making steady progress in the Christian life. I must not forget to mention a large body of men—viz., the marines, some 1500 in the barracks.

I am glad to say a young resident and his wife have a Bible-reading on Sunday afternoons and Tuesday evenings for those who will go. I was asked to go to two of them, and found much joy and blessing. It was very good to hear the prayers of some of these dear fellows for their friends and their unsaved comrades.

Will not some brother on fire for souls go there for a week's mission this winter? If anyone will communicate through you I shall be glad.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

HOME.

The British Women's Temperance Association have issued a handsome Christmas leaflet, suitable for enclosure in letters.

A proposal of the Falkirk U.P. Synod to establish a total abstinence society in conection with the church was rejected in the Presbytery by 11 to 9.

Mr. William Forbes conducted a three days' Gospel temperance mission in the Free Methodist Church, Framlingham. Several signed the pledge, and donned the little bit of blue.

Dr. B. W. Richardson has published a second lecture on "The Storage of Life; or, Health and Length of Days." He says alcohol reduces by one-fourth a standard length of life otherwise easily attainable.

The licensing magistrates at Wolverhampton have decided not to grant any extension of hours to the publicans of the borough during the Christmas holidays, except in individual cases and for special reasons. They hold that eleven o'clock is quite late enough for the public-houses to remain open.

Sir W. Lawson has asked whether the Government proposed to take any steps next Session for giving legislative effect to the resolution passed by that House declaring "That the question of Sunday closing should be relegated to the decision of the inhabitants of the localities in which the public-houses are situated." He got no reply.

FOREIGN.

Nearly five million signatures have already been obtained to the petition for the passage of the Sunday Rest Bill introduced in the Senate.

In Texas during the last year seventy churches have adopted the use of unfermented wine for Communion services, directly through the influence of the W.C.T.U.

In Nebraska, under high licence, the beer consumption has increased since 1880 from 40,000 barrels to 108,000. In Kansas, under prohibition, it has decreased from 32,000 to 16,000 barrels.

ZAMBESI.—Sesheke seems likely to become a really important town in Central Africa. In Lessonto the Roman Catholic Mission is becoming very aggressive. It seeks to damage the influence of the evangelical missionaries, and to increase its own by tolerating certain practices, against which the Christian tries to use his influence.

EVANGELISATION IN FRANCE.—The report of the central Protestant Evangelisation Society for the past year is full of encouraging facts respecting the progress of the Reformed faith in France. When the Reformed Church was reconstituted in 1824, after centuries of persecution and oppression, there were some 140 congregations. To-day there are nearly 600 recognised churches, and as the 300 stations of the Central Evangelisation Society are virtually churches in formation, the number will, it is hoped, soon be very largely increased. Some of the congregations have been organised in towns and villages which were scenes of fearful massacres in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. In North Africa also the Society's efforts are being attended by good results.

Personalia.

Rev. J. Mountain has resolved, after fourteen years of continuous mission service in different parts of the world, to resume the work of the pastorate.

Mr. John Wanamaker.—This well-known citizen of Philadelphia, of business and Sunday-school fame, is named as a probable holder of the office of Postmaster-General in the next United States cabinet.

Dr. Lansdell.—Recent news respecting the movements of this traveller tells of his being in the far wilds of Turkestan. At Yarkand he received a demonstrative welcome. No opposition is offered by Buddhist or Mussulman to the sale and distribution of the Scriptures.

"The Good Earl."—In an article on the increase of theatres in London, The Times, referring to the fact that one new theatre is named after the late Lord Shaftesbury, says it is so named "by a concentration of inappropriateness. Probably the Good Earl never entered a theatre in his life, except perhaps for a religious service."

Earl Compton, in a recent speech, referred to the serious revelations in The Lancet with regard to the dock labourers, and said he wondered that people calling themselves Christians could rest while such things were going on around them. For himself, he would never rest until something had been done to make the lives of the poor less unendurable than at present.

Mr. Denham Smith, still prostrate and weak, is unable to leave his bed, yet the lowering effects of the disease are happily lessened by nights of refreshing sleep. Much painful misconception has arisen from a recent announcement in some of the newspapers of the death of a gentleman bearing the same name, but not a relative. This led to numerous letters and inquiries expressing a widespread sympathy. While, happily, based on an error which has caused much pain, yet we are requested by Mr. Denham Smith's family to say how deeply they have felt the sympathies and kindly feelings thus shown.

Pastor Ruchteschel, one of the German pastors of the Evangelical Church in St. Petersburg, was lately arrested by the police. He was attached in his religious capacity to the German Hospital, and in the course of his duties there he made the acquaintance of a Russian patient. This person induced the pastor to receive him into his fold and administer the sacrament. Proselytism of this kind, although carried out at the urgent request of the convert, is a criminal offence, punishable with deportation to Siberia. The pastor appears to have since started to go abroad, and has recently been conducted back from the frontier by gendarmes to be put upon his trial.

Dr. Saphir and Dr. Stevenson.—In the newly published Life of the late Dr. Fleming Stevenson there are some interesting reminiscences of the relations between these two divines. "It was during Dr. Stevenson's first winter of study in Glasgow that he met Adolph Saphir, the now well-known preacher and writer, who had come from Germany to study at the University. There was a strong intellectual and spiritual affinity between the two students, and they became life-long friends. Mr. Stevenson always delighted to acknowledge how much of the impulse of his life he owed to his friend. Mr. Saphir spent the summer with him at Strabane. There they read books together, discussed problems, sang songs, and talked over the arrangements for their theological studies at the New College, Edinburgh, then under the presidency of the late Principal Cunningham, who was at the same time Professor of Church History. It was probably under the teaching of this distinguished man that Mr. Stevenson acquired that love of the study of Church History which afterwards characterised him, and the fruits of which he turned to such good account in his missionary lectures. He spent three sessions in the New College, during the whole of which he enjoyed the close companionship of his friend, Adolph Saphir." The friendship between the two is frequently referred to in the volume.

OXFORD.—The revived Friends' Meeting here is making itself felt as a power for good. Recently Frederick Sessions and Jean Tennant held a mission there, which has resulted in the formation of a "Christian Band" for aggressive work and the spread of the temperance cause.

The Book World.

A Song of the Sea.

RE-UNITED. By W. H. Hawker Morgan. Music by Torriano. In two keys. 4s. Hart & Co., 22, Paternoster-row, E.C. With so much rubbish as there is forced upon the public in the form of songs—some low and vulgar, others too weak and maudlin even to do any harm, still less any good—it is refreshing to find here and there one that is worth singing. There is a genuine pathos about the words of "Re-united" (which appeared in our last issue) which will go home to many a heart, but an entire freedom from silly sentiment or twaddle. The music is vigorous and tuneful, the air of the refrain being well calculated to catch the popular ear. Perhaps some critics will find one or two points in the accompaniment which are not strictly grammatical, but these are not noticed in the singing. It is a good, wholesome sea song. The version in E♭ is for soprano and tenor singers. Others will choose that in C.

Miss Emily Holt's New Book.

THE KING'S DAUGHTERS; or, How Two Girls Kept the Faith. By Emily S. Holt. 3s. 6d. John F. Shaw & Co. No more seasonable book than this, in the class of lighter literature, has been published this season. It narrates an episode in the never-to-be-forgotten story of the Marian persecutions. Its characters, both men and women, are powerfully yet delicately drawn, while in naturalness and naïveté the child Cissy is as fascinating as Little Lord Fauntleroy, with the advantage that she belongs to the aristocracy, not of earth, but of heaven, and her conversation shows that she has been baptized into Christ's death, and walks in newness of life. The generous heroism of our martyred fellow Christians, the wrongs they suffered, and the blessings they bequeathed to us, never needed to be studied more than they do to-day, when long years of the very liberties we have inherited have made this generation careless of retaining them, until our ideal religious liberty has become a "freedom free to slay herself, and dying while they shout her name." Miss Holt serves her generation according to the will of God by recalling "enough of the past for the future to grieve," and yet not idly to grieve, but to shake off the dull sloth which is affording the tyrant of Rome the opportunity to recover his hold of England.

The Missionary Conference Report.

REPORT OF THE CENTENARY CONFERENCE ON THE PROTESTANT MISSIONS OF THE WORLD, held in Exeter Hall, London, 1888. Edited by Rev. James Johnston. 2 vols., 7s. 6d. J. Nisbet & Co. The very useful papers that were read at the Conference in June last are here presented in a revised form, with full notes of the many interesting speeches and discussions. The result is a remarkable body of missionary information and suggestion, filling over twelve hundred octavo pages, beautifully printed and strongly bound. There is a lucid introduction, and also a full bibliography of missionary literature. Excellent indexes are added, and the general arrangement is as good as the subject-matter is undoubtedly important. Mr. Johnston well remarks in the introduction: "This Conference has vastly increased the Church's responsibility. Light has been diffused, and, through these pages, will be within the reach of all. Facts as to the world's wants; the power of the simple story of the Cross to meet these wants has been demonstrated. This means a responsibility commensurate with the demands of our suffering and perishing brethren, and the commands of our crucified but living Saviour." All whose hearts go out in compassion to the heathen should endeavour to possess themselves of these goodly volumes, which are published at a very low price, on the assumption that the demand will be large. We sincerely trust that the mission cause will receive a mighty impetus through the interest excited by a perusal of the report.

MISCELLANEOUS.

STORIES OF BIBLE CHILDREN. By E. M. Waterworth. Religious Tract Society. These illustrated chapters on Joseph, Moses, Samuel, David, and other Old Testament children, are written for the young. They not only convey historical information, but forcibly present moral lessons and spiritual truth. The book is likely to prove very useful.

The Christmas issue of The Queen (1s. 346, Strand, W.C.) contains a gre[illegible]f seasonable writing from able pens. The [illegible] of Rutland describes the work of libraries [illegible] reading-rooms for the industrial classes. Lady Aberdeen advocates co-operation among women. The Countess of Mar dilates on cookery classes. The Countess of Malmesbury tells in part the story of the temperance movement, but in the matter of total abstinence she is very half-hearted. Mrs. Henry Fawcett contributes hints and reminiscences as to public speaking. The pictorial element, of course, is strong.

From Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co. we have the following:—THE LADS OF KINGSTON, by James Capes Story (1s. 6d.), a capital temperance story of thirty years ago, which the boys of to-day will read with pleasure and profit.—THE LITTLE PRINCESS OF TOWER HILL, by L. T. Meade (1s. 6d.), gives a short episode in the career of a spoilt child, whose course of life was changed through coming into contact with one in a lower social rank.—"TOOTS" is the name of a Persian cat, which writes her autobiography for the benefit of boys and girls. The little book contains many amusing anecdotes about cats, and costs only sixpence.

THE OBEDIENCE OF A CHRISTIAN MAN. By William Tyndale. 2s. 6d. Religious Tract Society. This famous work, from the pen of the Bible translator and martyr, has been well edited, with introduction, analysis, and notes, for the excellent "Christian Classics Series." "The Obedience" is the largest and most elaborate of all Tyndale's works, and, next to his translation of Holy Scripture, the book by which he was best known to his contemporaries, and which exerted the greatest influence upon those who were friendly to the Reformation. It deals out hard blows against the corruptions of the Romish Church, and has a real use to-day as well as a special literary interest.

JESUS CHRIST THE DIVINE MAN: HIS LIFE AND TIMES. By Rev. J. F. Vallings. 2s. 6d. Nisbet & Co. Manifestly, the useful "Men of the Bible" series would have been incomplete had not one volume been devoted to the life and times of the God-man. In thus adding to the long list of lives of Christ already before the public, the author has taken an independent course, and set forth with much clearness the moral and spiritual history of the Life of lives, and that in special relation to missionary work and the contact of Christianity with non-Christian religions. Though not prepared to follow Mr. Vallings on some points of detail, we are glad to be able to speak in terms of warm praise of his unpretentious but very suggestive book. The pages have a charming freshness, and cannot but be read to advantage even by those who are familiar with the many larger works on the subject.

ANNUAL VOLUMES.

THE TEACHER AT WORK. Stock. An illustrated magazine for all who train the young. The notes on Bible lessons are very full and explicit.

THE SHIELD AND SPEAR, vol. iii., contains a variety of wholesome reading matter, including vigorous sermons by the editor, Rev. W. Evans Hurndall. (Elliot Stock.)

BIBLE LIGHT. Vol. viii. J. F. Shaw & Co. A magazine for truth seekers and workers. Many who desire to know the mind of the Spirit will read the various articles with pleasure and profit.

OLD JONATHAN: THE DISTRICT AND PARISH HELPER. Vol. xiii. of the third series is as bright and useful as its predecessors. The illustrations are attractive, the letterpress varied, and the tone uniformly high. (1s. 6d. W. H. & L. Collingridge.)

THE METHODIST FAMILY. Office, 61, Paternoster-row. This capital magazine now enters upon the twentieth year of its existence. The nineteenth volume is filled with interesting articles for quiet hours, and would be a good addition to many a village library.

BIBLE WORK AT HOME AND ABROAD. Cassell & Co. Vol. v. of this monthly is a deeply interesting record of work carried on in many lands, in connection with the London Bible and Domestic Female Mission. The many articles and sketches are entertaining, as the reports and efforts by the Bible-women and nurses are gratifying. This volume of 400 pages will be read with special pleasure by those who sympathise most with female agency for the alleviation of human misery and dispersing spiritual darkness. The office of the Mission is 2, Adelphi-terrace, Strand, W.C.

LIFE AND WORK: A PARISH MAGAZINE. Vol. x. of this monthly, from the Publication Offices of the Church of Scotland, 42, Hanover-street, Edinburgh, is a capital book. The articles range over a wide field, from religious instruction and historical narrative to family stories and records of Church life and work. The illustrations are of a high order.

THE HOME FRIEND, published in connection with the Y.W.C.A., admirably answers to its name as "a magazine for young women." The bound volume for the past year contains a large collection of valuable articles of a devotional character, and many on other topics of special interest to the constituency to which it appeals. Such a magazine as this must be found exceedingly useful to Christian young women, and be a great help in the spiritual life to those who read it carefully. (S. W. Partridge & Co., London).

SEEKING AND FINDING ALMANAC.—This annual publication is designed to promote daily Bible-reading and study. (1d. Partridge & Co.)

CHRISTMAS CAROLS. A selection of Carols and Hymns, with the music in the staff notation, arranged by W. H. Essex. (1d. Religious Tract Society.)

"WHO'LL SERVE THE KING?" The words, by Miss Robinson, of the Soldiers' Home, Portsmouth, have been set to an easy tuneful melody by J. C. Wilmot. Specimen copies will be sent on application to Miss Wilmot, Cople, Beds.

"Aids for Mission Workers in Dealing with the Anxious" is a little penny book, into which are gathered texts of Scripture meeting the objections and questions raised by inquirers. (T. Hamblin, 16, The Higher Parade, Leamington.)

DEAN'S SUNDAY COLOURED PICTURE BOOKS. Two of this series are: CHRIST THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD, and THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES. 6d. each. The pictures are by André, and sometimes they are very extravagant. Rev. T. Johnson supplies the descriptive matter.

CONSECRATED INFLUENCE: WOMAN'S WORK IN CHRISTENDOM, a very suggestive booklet by the author of "Evanescent Philosophies," has reached a second edition.—THE UNCHANGEABLENESS OF GOD is the title of another little work from the same thoughtful pen. (1s. per dozen. Drummond's Tract Depôt, Stirling.)

"I WILL NEVER LEAVE THEE, NOR FORSAKE THEE." This is "A Word for the New Year," by Rev. Robert Cowan, Elgin, and a most cheering word too. Communion with God is explained as a promise and a fact, and some of its most blessed implications plainly pointed out. (2d. Melven Brothers, Inverness, N.B.)

Of Denominational Almanacs for next year, the BAPTIST and CONGREGATIONAL, published by Messrs. R. Banks & Son, Racquet-court, Fleet-street, are very serviceable. They contain much information, partly of a special and partly of a general character, and may be had plain at 2d., and interleaved with writing paper at 4d.

The Religious Tract Society has published two very useful pocket-books for 1889. The "R.T.S." contains a variety of commercial and other information, as well as a Scripture Calendar. The "YOUNG PEOPLE'S" also gives daily texts, and has some notes on the months, as well as several other features of practical value.

The annual volume of THE JUVENILE, edited by Rev. George Cousins, and issued in connection with the London Missionary Society, is filled with matter calculated to interest and inform the young as to the progress of the Gospel in foreign lands. There are numerous attractive illustrations. (1s. Snow & Co., Ivy-lane.)

Among the tracts recently issued by Mr. G. Stoneman, 67, Paternoster-row, are: STRONG IN HIM, by G. S.; and FATHERLY HINTS, COUNSELS, CAUTIONS, AND ENCOURAGEMENTS TO THE YOUNG, by An Octogenarian. Two New Year addresses are: AN UNCHANGING GOD AMID THE CHANGING YEARS, by Rev. J. C. Carrick; and OUR HOPE, by James Sprunt.

The Almanacs for 1889 issued by the Religious Tract Society include: THE PEOPLE'S, a bright illustrated production (1d.); THE CHILD'S COMPANION ALMANAC, which is likely to greatly please young folks (1d.); THE POCKET-BOOK ALMANAC, interleaved with ruled paper (2d.); THE PENNY ALMANAC, for use in pocket-books; and an attractive sheet almanac for the wall (1d.).

Of Gospel booklets Rev. Dr. Doudney's HALFPENNY SERIES is in every way excellent. Over thirty in number, with inviting titles, and presenting the Gospel with much power, they are eminently suited for enclosing in letters, and otherwise putting into wide circulation. Dr. Doudney also writes an introduction to a halfpenny booklet on THE BEAUTIES OF THE HOLY BIBLE. By W. Huntingdon. (J. & A. Mack, 28, Paternoster-row.)

We have received five songs from Messrs. Elton & Co., 184, Oxford-street, W. The music of two songs entitled, respectively, "Darkness and Light," and "Two Thousand Years Ago," by M. Piccolomini, is better suited for professionals than amateurs; but, if carefully sung, they have a pleasing effect.—"Matin Voices," is a simple, pretty, plaintive song.—"In Te, Domine" is seemingly a companion song to "Ora Pro Nobis," and is arranged in the same manner as that successful sacred melody. It should become equally as popular.—"I Will Guide Thee" is really beautiful, both as to words and music.

⁂ In our recent review of Miss Nugent's New Year's address, "Folded Wings," published by Messrs. S. W. Partridge & Co., the price was erroneously stated as 6d.; it is 1d.

"IN TIME OF NEED."

Dear Friends,—

I have been seeking for some months to carry on the work in our Homes in unobtrusive dependence upon God. Our many pressing wants have been the means of giving us an experience of God's tenderness and faithfulness which we might never have had if surrounded by abundance.

As I do not feel free to leave the work much, even to further its interests financially, by holding meetings in various places, I am constrained, through the medium of an old friend, The Christian, to plead for the help we sorely need for the stern struggle before us these winter months against misery and sin in this vast city.

From Exeter, Leeds, Hanley, Cork, Stuttgart, Jamaica, &c., waifs are driven by the storms of life to seek shelter at our doors, open day and night. Need is the only passport, so magistrates loth to put the prison brand on a young life; City missionaries, diving into the lowest slums, and seeing in uncouth Ishmaels possible gems for the Redeemer's crown; policemen on their cold, lonely beats, stirred with pity for homeless starvelings lying asleep in their wet rags, in vans and cellars; even the hawkers and beggars in common lodging-houses, anxious to save woebegone boys from their own irretrievable ruin—all these day by day send to us cases of bodily suffering and moral danger that we dare not refuse.

In a few months more than 100 of them will (D.V.) be on their way to busy, healthy Canadian homesteads, where the training begun here will be continued, and they will never again need a farthing of English money to be laid out upon them; others, as printers, shoemakers, &c., will be earning their bread honestly in dear old England, where many are now in business on their own account who a few years ago were rescued from the gutter and the gaol by our Homes.

This is a spiritual work, as truly a missionary work as if its sphere was in Fiji or Madagascar. We gather in our young home-heathen, and we are cheered by evidences of the Holy Spirit's work amongst them, many having lately confessed Christ as their personal Saviour; while glad tidings come from time to time of others bearing fruit to God at home and across the sea who "received the engrafted word" under our roof in years gone by.

We are anxious to close the year with the record, "free of debt," and be able to testify that God has supplied all our need. Our stores of clothing, boots, &c., need replenishing. Our hungry battalions require nearly 800 meals daily. In fact, our wants are legion. "Nobody's boys" are like everybody's boys in their devouring, wearing-out powers. We do not make any parade, or lavish money on ornamentation, but we do like to see our boys fat and cozy.

This is the eighteenth year of my service for Christ amongst waifs and strays. Will you, dear friends, kindly come to my aid in this time of need, and enable me to say, as the year closes, that we "owe no man anything save to love one another"?

Yours very indebtedly,

J. W. C. Fegan

In order to meet the convenience of many desirous of visiting his Institutions,

DR. BARNARDO proposes (D.V.) to be AT HOME every TUESDAY AFTERNOON during this Winter, between the hours of 2 and 6 o'clock, when any one can see him and inspect the Homes without making a previous appointment.

THE STEPNEY HOMES are also open for inspection on the afternoon of every other week-day (except Saturday, when no one can ever be admitted). But Dr. Barnardo hopes it will be remembered that the great pressure of the work in his hands compels him to announce that he cannot personally see visitors on any other day, except Tuesday, save by appointment, made and confirmed beforehand.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made, by which Visitors, calling at Stepney on the afternoon of any week day (except Saturday) can not only see the Boys Engaged at Work at their various Trades, but may also inspect "Her Majesty's Hospital for Sick Children," in Stepney Causeway, "The Labour House for Destitute Youths," in the Commercial Road, "Leopold House Home for Little Boys," in the Burdett Road, and "The Edinburgh Castle Mission Hall and Coffee Palace. A private Omnibus will convey Visitors (free of expense) to any or all of these Branches from Stepney, situated only a few minutes' distance from each other.

THE STEPNEY HOMES are easily reached from any part of London, thus:—By Train from Fenchurch street, or North London Railway Stations to Stepney Station; By Omnibus from Charing Cross and the Bank to Stepney Causeway; Or by Metropolitan Railway to Aldgate, thence by Poplar Tramcar (yellow) to Stepney Causeway.

WORKS BY Mr. & Mrs. Grattan Guinness.

Demy 8vo., cloth, 7s. 6d.

THE DIVINE PROGRAMME OF THE WORLD'S HISTORY.

"We do not hesitate to pronounce this to be, in our opinion, the best of Mr. Guinness's books. Mr. and Mrs. Guinness have this advantage over Newton and Keith, who so admirably use the same weapon, in that modern discovery in ethnology and archæology has furnished the former with immensely increased confirmations of Scripture, which were not available till our time. This work indicates a thorough mastery of these."—Rock.

"In their new book, 'The Divine Programme of the World's History,' Mr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness place Bible students under another great debt of obligation to them. If it be true that 'prophecy is history written in advance,' and that the history of the world is none other than the history of man's redemption, what intelligent Christian can fail to be interested in a work in which prophecy is lucidly exhibited as a whole? The evidential value of this book is great, and we hope it will be widely read."—Christian.

FRIENDLESS AND FALLEN. DONATIONS NOW MOST ACCEPTABLE.

To the Readers of "The Christian."

Practically the 31st year's work of the Institution is now completed, and may be summarised thus—

1st. The Committee had hoped to have been able to have transferred the work of the Open-all-Night Refuge to the Central Home, 200, Euston Road. They submitted Architect's plans of Proposed Alterations to the Metropolitan Board of Works. But after much trouble and delay, their proposals were refused. They hope, however, that when the powers of that body get transferred to the New County Council, they may be more successful. Meanwhile, the Committee have determined that 37, Manchester Street, shall be continued for the lower and even the lowest amongst the outcast class, that they may have "A Place for Repentance."

2nd. The Home, 200, Euston Road, will be used as far as possible as an Immediate place of Reception for the more select cases by night as well as by day.

3rd. In the interest of the Friendless Virtuous, the Committee have purchased the ground lease of the house 459, Holloway Road, and placed it in the hands of Trustees, viz., F. A. Bevan, Esq., Professor Gladstone, and J. F. Fortescue, Esq., and thus Another Training Home for young girls, also a temporary Home for young Servants while out of Situations will be established, where, by the payment of a small weekly sum, they may secure Board and Lodging under Christian and Total Abstinence principles, and be assisted to Respectable Situations as domestics.

4th. One Thousand Two Hundred and Forty Friendless and Outcast Young Women and Girls have been brought to the Office, 200, Euston Road—some from Special Missions to the Fallen, others direct from the Gaol Doors, the Streets, and Dens of Infamy—some have been brought by Day, others by Night—Country Girls, Orphans, &c.

5th. 540 have been received into the Open-all-Night Refuge, and a large proporton of these have been permanently helped.

6th. 520 have been received into the various Homes. The Gospel of the Grace of God has been proclaimed in all the Homes. Bible and other Classes, Temperance Meetings, &c., have been held with much encouragement.

Dec. 20.—Temporal wants, Five Hundred Average Donations of £1 each, and the expenses of the Work for 1888 will be met: may I ask for this Further Sympathy?

Messrs. Morgan & Scott, 12, Paternoster Buildings, will, as usual, take charge of Donations, or they may be sent to
